Saigon Battle Is Still Raging

School Plans Stated

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario department of education told 1,446 municipal school boards today to form committees in preparation for their liquidation.

Education Minister William Davis said there would be 38 school divisions in southern Ontario based on county lines, one board each in London, Hamilton, Windsor and Ottawa and six in Metropolitan Toronto.

About 32 boards would be designated for Northern Ontario which has no counties.

"This transition to the new units of administration will be facilitated by an interim organization committee which will be established in each new school division," the department said in a report to boards and municipalities.

Every committee will include one member from each existing public and high school board and each board of education falling within a new boundary and may set up sub-committees for specific tasks.

The sub-committees may be composed of other trustees, officials, teachers or parents.

The boards were asked to ap-

Afro-Asians May Talk To Koreans

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Afro-Asian members of the Security Council awaited a reply from the U.S. and Russia to their offer to fly to Geneva to talk to North Korean representatives about the release of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo.

Outgoing council president Agha Shaki of Pakistan said Wednesday night this was one of a number of ideas discussed by members in four days of private consultations.

LBJ Seeks No-strike Promise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson called today for a temporary no-strike truce between industry and labor, a tax increase "in the next few weeks" and a study of possible new wage-price guideposts.

In his annual economic report, Johnson warned Congress the business advance is running "too fast for safety." The United States must choose quickly, he said, whether it wants to avoid a "feverish boom" leading to "a possible financial crisis, and perhaps ultimately a recession."

Reds Threaten Several Cities

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. infantry and armored units battled Viet Cong forces in Saigon again today as the guerrillas and North Vietnamese pushed their biggest offensive of the Vietnam war up and down South Vietnam for the third day.

It was the first time the Americans had brought major combat forces into South Vietnam's capital.

As fighting raged in Saigon, the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese appeared to have taken control of big parts of several other major government cities and towns. The situation appeared critical at many points.

The U.S. military commander warned that the heaviest fighting of the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese offensive was still to come.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland said the Communists were paying a heavy price. Westmoreland said 5,800 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops had been killed since Monday night, more than the toll usually reported for two or three weeks of fighting.

Southern Allied casualties also were high: 555 killed, including 232 Americans, and 1,698 wounded, 929 of them Americans, the U.S. command said.

Civilian casualties mounted into the thousands across the country, with estimates of up to 2,000 killed or wounded in Saigon alone.

As U.S. tanks, armored personnel carriers and infantry from three divisions pushed through the streets of the capital, Viet Cong soldiers and political cadre began to surface openly in some thickly populated parts of the capital.

In at least two parts of Saigon, men were knocking on doors and announcing: "We are from the National Liberation Front. We have come to liberate Saigon."

The National Liberation Front, the Viet Cong's political arm, had announced the formation of revolutionary councils to run Saigon and the ancient city of Hue.

South Vietnamese military headquarters reported street fighting in nine different places in the capital city of nearly 3,000,000 people,

Fighting was reported "extremely heavy" on the southern edges of Saigon, with "neither side giving an inch," one source said.

The Viet Cong had set up an operations centre of sorts in the An Quang Pagoda, one of the main Buddhist churches in the Chinese section of the city, and were exhorting the people to

THE BILL UNIFYING CANADA'S ARMED FORCES takes effect today. Although no immediate change in uniforms is expected, the final dark-green common dress may look like that worn by serviceman at right. The uniform change is still under study and a decision may not be reached for a year. Servicemen in background wear traditional uniforms. (CP Photo)

Army, Navy and RCAF Vanish Into Canadian Armed Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — With a minimum of fanfare, the Canadian Army, Royal Canadian Navy and Royal Canadian Air Force officially retire from the scene today, giving way to the new Canadian Armed Forces.

The bill unifying the forces comes into law today, writing an official close to the histories of the three separate services. All servicemen from now on are members of the CAF, under orders to wear a common uniform and to fall under one rank structure based on army grades.

But there won't be any overnight change in the appearance of Canada's servicemen to mark Unification Day, Feb. 1, 1968.

The man who wore navy or air force blue or army khaki to work Wednesday will wear the seme thing today — and probably for a year or two to come.

Dark green uniforms for the unified CAF are still undergoing trials.

Three hundred men at the Toronto's Downsview base staged a mock funeral in a darkened bar, complete with a $7 coffin made of packing cases, to mourn the departure of the three services. In Vancouver, soldiers wore black arm bands, and the Jericho Beach base was draped in black.

But nowhere in Canada, a Cross-Canada Survey shows, were there any official outdoor ceremonies to mark the historic birth of a single service.

From British Columbia to the Atlantic provinces, the eve of unification was marked by indoor parties, or wakes, or both. No special ceremonies were scheduled for today, except at St. John's, Nfld., where Derek Critch, 19, a Newfoundlander born in the same year the old colony joined Confederation, was to become the first recruit for the newly-unified forces.

In Halifax, a military spokesman got at the heart of the matter when he said of unification: "The younger men don't care one way or another. But the veterans are another matter."

Atlantic Premiers to Seek Prosperity

Economic Needs First

HALIFAX (CP) — Higher living standards for their people will be the top item at next week's Constitutional Conference in Ottawa so far as the premiers of the Atlantic provinces are concerned.

They are united in agreeing to changes that may be necessary. But they are also agreed that disparity in economic development is as great a threat to national unity as problems of language and culture.

Canada must be a country where more than one culture can flourish, says Premier Smith, G. I. of Nova Scotia, but it must also be a place where all Canadians have a basic standard of service.

Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick says Canada must have a system of federal-provincial co-operation to give all citizens equal opportunity in such fields as education, health and welfare.

Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island agrees with the idea of constitutional changes to reaffirm equal rights for all Canadians.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland says he is ready to go along with talks about constitutional change but "what really matters is standards of private living and public serv-

West Seems Divided

EDMONTON (CP) — Whatever Prairie premiers are planning to say at the federal-provincial constitutional conference in Ottawa next week they are holding off until then.

Premiers Walter Weir of Manitoba, Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan and Ernest Manning of Alberta are saying little or nothing in advance on constitutional matters, although some positions are readily predictable.

Premiers Weir and Thatcher both will have something favorable to say regarding constitutional guarantees for the French language in education, in politics and in law, and can be expected to be reasonably open to suggestions for constitutional reform.

Premier Manning will take a harder line on most topics, and likely will line up with Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia in opposing official status for the French language outside Quebec.

Heavy Rains Are Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Southern Ontario today faced the possibility of rainstorms with local flooding while northern regions were [illegible] for snowstorms with increasing winds.

The weather office issued a 10 a.m. advisory warning that a strong flow of mild, moisture-laden air was being driven north across the lower Great Lakes from Illinois.

Two Men Tell of Slayings

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller has announced that he wants all bodies exhumed from the grassy field where three skeletons were dug up Monday. And he says he wants to restrict investigations to the one being conducted by state police.

Meanwile, in Houston, Tex., and Fresno, Calif., former Arkansas penitentiary convicts told reporters they watched prison guards slay 10 convicts who may be buried beneath some of the numerous depressions in the field.

The governor, who promised a thorough investigation, said: "We could be on the brink of uncovering a scandal of untold proportions."

The story of Edward Redmond, 47, who operates a television repair shop in Houston, Tex., emphasized the latter possibility.

Redmond, who says he was a prisoner at Cummins 28 years ago, told the Houston Post he saw a prisoner choked to death with barbed wire, then buried under a guard tower along with two other slain convicts.

Redmond said barbed wire was wrapped around the prisoner's throat, and that a mounted guard dragged the man until he was dead.

He said he saw at least four other convicts, all Negroes, killed by shotgun blasts.

An elderly Negro prisoner, almost blind, failed to spot a weed in a pea patch, he said.

"The guard shot the man in the back from about eight yards. It made a hell of a hole," Redmond said.

He said another prisoner was shot in the back while running, and another while carrying a water bucket.

"I never did know why he was shot," Redmond said. "He didn't do anything."

In Fresno, Calif., Pershing Mills, 49, of Reedley, Calif., a former prisoner at Tucker prison farm, about 45 miles north of here, told television station KMJ-TV he saw five prisoners shot by guards who later said the dead men had been trying to escape. Mills said the men hadn't been involved in an escape attempt.

Province Spells Out Details

Elected Hastings School Board to Have 18 Members

By ROGER WORTH
Staff Reporter

Representation on a new Hastings County Board of Education will be drastically reduced when the county-wide plan is introduced next Jan. 1.

The provincial government this morning presented plans indicating the boards would be set up along county lines and would have between 14 and 20 members — depending on population.

With a population of 87,735 this would give Hastings County an 18-member board.

At the present time 35 members sit on public and secondary school boards in Trenton and Belleville as well as various representatives on township public school boards.

The changes mean all members sitting on the new boards of education would be elected. The Bay of Quinte High School board has 19 appointed members at the present time.

A department of education report recommends that school districts with less than 50,000 population have 14 elected members. Divisions with 50,000 to 150,000 persons would have 18 while those with over 150,000 population would have 20 trustees.

Although the Trenton Board of Education indicated earlier it favors an amalgamation with part of Northumberland County — the government changes specify the board will be set up along county lines.

Trenton with a population of 13,807 has eight board members, the Belleville public school board also has eight members and the high school board has a total of 19 members from throughout the county area serviced by the Bay of Quinte board.

Chairman of the Bay of Quinte High School Board, James Clark said this morning the board was aware of the changes and should have a steering committee set-up by Feb. 15. "We have been discussing consolidation with the Belleville Public School Board for the past few months."

Superintendent of the High School Board, Donald Stirling claimed the new board would handle about 26,000 students based on this year's enrolment. "This includes both elementary and secondary schools."

W. Douglas Whitely, chairman of the larger units' committee of the Trenton Board of Education, said "we've been assured that the door isn't closed on this question."

He said Dr. Richard Potter, MP for Quinte riding, was told in a caucus meeting that any group interested in making a presentation about larger units will be heard.

"We have privately made representation to the department of education in cooperation with our member . . . after all there aren't too many communities lying on the boundary of two counties."

The Bay of Quinte Board was amalgamated with the Stirling-Rawdon and Centre Hastings High School boards Jan. 1 of this year.

Board members will serve for two years

The department has laid down a formula to determine the number of public school and separate school trustees on a board. It is based on who pays for what.

For example if there are 16 trustees to be for an area where the provincial equalized residential and farm assessment totals $90,000,000, and the owners of $80,000,000 of the property support public schools while the rest support separate schools, the number of trustees elected by public school ratepayers is eight-ninths of 16-14.2 or 14 trustees.

Separate school supporters will elect two trustees.

However, the number of trustees elected by public school ratepayers cannot drop below six.

"It is considered necessary to have this minimum number to conduct the public schools in each jurisdiction," the department says.

Another formula has been devised to determine the number of city and separate town representatives who should sit on a common county board.

Again representatives are allocated in proportion to the provincial equalized residential and farm assessments.

As previously announced, the boards will be responsible for their own financing and spending — except for capital outlays and the issuing of debentures which remain subject to Ontario Municipal Board approval. An auditor will check each board's accounts.

Boards will divide costs among their member municipalities on the basis of provincial assessments.

Education tax bills and local tax bills will be sent separately although they may be issued by the same municipal offices to avoid duplication of staff and equipment.

Educational revenues will be turned over to school boards by the municipalities collecting them.

School tax bills will show the mill rates for public and secondary school purposes, the amount of tax in each case, and the total amount of tax for education.

"Every ratepayer would, therefore, be able to determine clearly the tax he is paying for education," the report says.

It is expected that school and municipal taxes will be staggered so they do not fall due at the same time.

School Change-over Is Mapped

point committee representatives at their "earliest convenience."

Regional superintendents are asked to call inaugural committee meetings not later than Feb. 15.

The department suggested the committees prepare detailed reports about existing school systems to be administered by the new boards to serve as operational guides for "the smooth transition of essential services."

Each existing school board was told to conduct itself in 1968 as though it were responsible for the operation of its schools until June, 1969. They must make sure necessary school supplies and staff are available for the first two terms next year to free the new boards for policy decisions during their first few months.

The new boards will assume all property, liabilities, contracts and agreements from the old boards. Boards of arbitration will be set up to handle any disputes that may arise.

Students now crossing county lines to attend school may continue to do so after the new boundaries go into effect.

The department said its prime objective in establishing the county school boards "is the desire to provide equality of educational opportunity for every child."

Boards must offer a "total program" to meet the needs and interests of students.

"At the present time, some jurisdictions are meeting these objectives to a high degree. Others are unable to do so because of the limitations imposed on them by too small a student population, too small a geographical area, too narrow a tax base. . . ."

The department said these limitations make it impossible to offer a wide program, to obtain adequate help in special areas, to plan on an over-all basis or to co-ordinate special services.

Ross Burtt Resigns Seat

TRENTON — Less than two months after winning a council seat in the municipal election, veteran Ross Burtt, has tendered his resignation, because of health reasons.

In revealing the news today, Mayor James MacDonald, said council will decide at its next session whether or not to accept Mr. Burtt's resignation.

"I suspect it will be accepted — Ross wouldn't leave unless he knew he couldn't carry on. His service to Trenton deserves the highest commendation".

Now 78, Mr. Burtt has served on town council for 27 years, including six as mayor. He polled strongly in the Dec. 4 election, running second after a year's absence from municipal service.

Mayor MacDonald said council will offer Mr. Burtt's seat to the next highest vote getter in the elections, J. Douglas Kinney, who ran fourth in the Dec. 4 contest for three council vacancies.

Mr. Kinney had completed his first year term as council's welfare committee chairman.

He indicated today he would accept the vacant seat if council accepts Mr. Burtt's resignation.

"I ran for council Dec. 4, and I feel obligated to accept a position if it's offered to me", Mr. Kinney said.

IN MEMORIAM

CALBERRY — In memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Myrtle Mary Calberry, who passed away Feb. 1, 1965.

Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past,
And in our aching hearts we know,
She has found sweet rest at last.
—Sadly missed by son George, daughter-in-law Barb, grandchildren Teddy, Terry and Trudy.

CALBERRY — In loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother Mrs. Myrtle Calberry, who passed away, Feb. 1, 1965.

Oh how patient was thy suffering,
When no hand could give thee ease,
God the helper of the helpless,
Saw thy pain and gave thee peace.
—Never forgotten by sons Peter, Raymond, Joseph and daughters-in-law, Evelyn and grandchildren.

ROBLIN — In loving memory of dear husband and father Theodore J. Roblin who passed away Feb. 1, 1966.

We little knew when we woke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring.
The call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Sometimes it's hard to understand,
Why some things have to be,
In His wisdom God has planned,
Beyond our power to see.
—Sadly missed by wife Hazel and girls Betty and Barbara.

CODLING — In loving memory of our dear beloved sister and aunt Gertrude Codling who passed away Jan. 31, 1966.

Though her smile is gone forever,
And her hand we cannot touch,
Still we have so many memories,
Of the one we loved so much,
Her memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part,
God has her in His keeping,
What we would give to clasp her hand.
Her dear sweet face to see,
To hear her voice, to see her smile,
That meant so much to us.
You left behind aching hearts,
That loved you most sincere,
We never did, nor never will,
Forget you, sister dear.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they'll wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days,
Which we have spent together.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by sisters Clara, Ethel and Helen. Niece and nephew Alice and Robert.

Lung Cancer Climb Offsets Gains Made in Other Fields

The annual organizational meeting of the Belleville unit of the Canadian Cancer Society saw guest speaker Kell Antoft blame the increase in cancer on cigarette smoking.

Mr. Antoft's speech revolved around "Are we making progress" in Cancer Research.

Although statistics indicate that the disease is on the increase the speaker mentioned that progress is being made and that Canadians have been playing a major part in the research.

"Our men of science have to their credit such outstanding achievements as the Cobalt bbom, and the "Vinca" group of drugs for leukemia."

"I mentioned earlier that cancer is on the increase, I should have qualified that by noting that except for lung cancer, the rate is declining. However, the increase in lung cancer more than offsets the gains made in other types of the disease," continued the speaker.

"We now have to convince the people that our research really has found the cause . . . in the face of an industry that is spending millions of dollars in trying to frustrate the clear implications of our successful research," he finished.

Prevention is the real hope of licking the cancer problem and cigarette smoking is only one area where growing mortality rates can be reversed, he said.

It is one of the great tasks of the cancer society to ensure that this knowledge is distributed and interpreted to the public. To the extent that this cooperation is successful, we may say that cancer research in Canada is meaningful, he said.

Mr. Antoft spoke on the field in which he feels Canadian cancer research may produce future exciting results, "virus research."

The scientific world was heartened a few years ago by the theory that virus particles were the cause of all cancers. This would enable a vaccine to be developed, he said.

"While the initial enthusiasm for the theory of virus has died down somewhat, there is still substantial evidence that viruses are one of the factors that may trigger off a cancer change in a healthy cell," the speaker said.

The possible development of a vaccine to combat cancer brought the speaker to another topic "immunology," — which develops from the use of vaccines.

Detection, according to Mr. Antoft, is a serious problem, especially in the face of internal cancer but again progress is being made rapidly, both in the areas of detection and treatment.

The causes of cancer, especially skin and lung cancer, have been firmly established said the speaker. Extensive exposure to the sun causes skin cancer and cigarette smoking causes lung cancer

Mr. Antoft was born in Denmark and migrated to Canada at five years of age. His education covers schools in Manitoba, Nova Scotia as well as Dalhousie University.

He has been active in his own business, Nordic Biochemicals Ltd. in Montreal for the past 15 years. Mr. Antoft was previously in the aviation field as president and partner in Viking Air Service Ltd. after his discharge from the RCAF in 1946.

Mr. Antoft's business activity is equalled by his record of public service with the Lakeshore unit of the Canadian Cancer Society, Beaconsfield Combined Appeal and his work with youth groups in the Canadian Amateur Ski Association. He was appointed to his present post early in 1968.

After the reception and dinner, which was attended by visitors from three countries, plaques were awarded to children who participated in the poster project.

Last year the Canadian Cancer Society began a poster project open to all children in grades 7 and 8.

Five local school children, all from St. Michael's School were recognized last night for their effort. Winning first prize was Deby Dalh followed by Robert Allore and Jerry Bland. Kenneth Rouse and Rosemary Flanagan received honorable mentions.

All of the children were awarded with a plaque and a prize. The two best posters will go on to the district unit for further competition.

Acting mayor Douglas Boyle made a few comments and president of the Belleville unit of the society, Edward E. Follwell, introduced the guest speaker, Kell Antoff, assistant executive director of the Canadian Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute of Canada.

demonstrate against the government.

Associated Press photographer Eddie Adams reported from the pagoda that shortly before dark South Vietnamese marines shot their way in and found about 60 women and children, many of them wounded.

Reports flowed into Saigon of unabated fighting up and down the country, with Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops reported in control of key sections of Hue, the old imperial capital, and Quang Tri, in the northern provinces; Dalat, Kontum and Ban Me Thuot, in the central highlands, and Ben Tre and Binh Long, in the Mekong Delta.

The official North Vietnamese news agency, monitored in Tokyo, claimed South Vietnamese troops and citizens seized power from the government in many parts of Saigon, the capital.

"The ordinary people, as well as South Vietnamese soldiers and officers, have joined the revolutionary forces with their weapons," the agency said.

U.S. military officials said some North Vietnamese Army regulars had been taken prisoner in Saigon, the first time North Vietnamese troops have been reported fighting in the capital city.

U-Day for Armed Forces Arrives

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — "There'll be crying in beer tonight," said the RCAF Flight Lieutenant with 15 years' service, on the eve of "U-Day" for 104,000 officers and men of Canada's military.

In the messes at Trenton's Canadian Forces Base, and across the nation, officers and enlisted men last night mourned the death of their tri-service identities.

Today, Bill C-243, the Canadian Forces Reorganization Act, goes into effect, making unification a fact of military life.

The "wake" at CFB Trenton's officers' mess came in the form of what was billed as a "farewell mess dinner."

And the public will never know if Air Marshal (retired) J. L. Plant delivered what could have been a "hell-fire" goodbye to the distinct identity and tradition of his branch of the armed forces.

Air Marshal Plant, sought out as guest speaker for last night's Trenton mess dinner, has been compared to the navy's Admiral William Landymore (also retired) in his criticism of Defence Department policy.

Ironically, the most dramatic change in the history of Canada's military passed virtually unnoticed, and without the traditional pomp and ceremony anticipated.

Plans to hoist at every Canadian Forces Base the new armed forces ensign of crossed swords, anchor, and eagle were abandoned when it was realized defence headquarters suffered a lapse in protocol efficiency — no - one knew where to fly the integrated ensign in relation to the national flag.

In a 75-second-long news release, Air Transport Command commander Air Vice-Marshal A. Chester Hull (as of today, Major-General Hull) said the members of Canada's armed forces "share a feeling of sadness . . . but must not dwell unduly on history."

The only official ceremony was a brief one Tuesday at Government House, when Governor-General Roland Michener, ceremonial commander-in-chief of the armed forces was presented with a new ensign.

For something that isn't being given official recognition, unification is going to take a lot of keeping track of in the next few months.

Adoption of army-like rank structure calls for new desktop and office door signs and reams of new stationery supplies. And there is no estimate of how many gallons of unification paint will be expended to camouflage tri-service insignia.

Bilingual markings will soon appear on all Canadian military aircraft, with "Canadian Armed Forces" on one side, and the French equivalent on the other.

New, dark green uniforms are now being "tested" by some 400 officers and men across Canada, including CFB Trenton's Major-General Hull, who wore his air force blues to work yesterday, perhaps for the last time.

Defence Department officials estimate Canada's 100,000-plus serviceman contingent will be outfitted in green by 1971.

Gold anchors, crossed swords, or eagles will identify a serviceman's "vocation" within the single, unified force.

Also in the experimental stage is adoption of the naval salute for all servicemen.

Meanwhile, arguments over the desirability of unification are now purely academic. There are those violently opposed to the "destruction of tradition," lined up against those who praise the streamlined attractiveness of the new-look military.

For the dissenters, Bill C-243 makes provision for special release from the service as early as July 31.

New stipulations also bring a third factor to bear on retirement — length of service — in addition to rank and age, in determining retirement dates. A corporal, for instance may now retire at age 44, or after 25 years' service.

Air force pride has been hit hardest, perhaps, by the new unified rank structure.

There are virtually no changes for former army personnel, and traditional navy ranks will continue to a large extent. The Defence Department's decision to retain naval nomenclature is dictated by the use of similar ranks in most of the world's fleets.

On the other hand from Sergeant on up all air force designations have been abolished, with "flight-louies" becoming captains, air commodores now brigadiers.

(A queer stipulation permits a former tri-service member to choose, by applying to his commanding officer, to use or be referred to by his former rank when not on duty.)

Airmen may take small consolation in one potential gain.

Any serviceman at sea, not just navy personnel, will now be eligible for the traditional "drop of Nelson's blood" — a daily 2½-ounce tot of rum.

Farewell Talk

With the birth of the new unified Canadian Armed Forces on the first of February, the Royal Canadian Air Force, the Royal Canadian Navy, and the Canadian Army will pass into history.

To the extent that each of us has contributed to, and has a pride in their accomplishments, we will share a feeling of sadness at the loss of our distinct service identities.

However we must not dwell unduly on our history.

Instead, it must be the task of each one of us to ensure that the Canadian Armed Forces will be a worthy successor which will continue to maintain and to improve upon the standards and the achievements of the past.

It will not be an easy task and the transition will take some time.

Air Transport Command is a combat airlift force — an integral part of the military team — and, as such, has an essential role in the effectivenes of the Canadian Forces combat capability.

I know that every member of Air Transport Command will continue to devote his skills and energies to the maintenance of a military air transport force second to none.

Major-General A. Chester Hull
Commander, Air Transport Command, CFB Trenton.

Shades of Spring

Following a week of chilly temperatures Belleville has entered a fresh period of warmer days with an accompanying thaw which has taken some of the strain off the heavy ice-jam in the Moira River.

If milder days are ahead spring, when it comes, should be a relatively trouble-free time where the run-off on the Moira is concerned.

Meanwhile it is interesting to learn of developments on the Trent Canal and an admission from a Department of Transport official that the current rehabilitation program there should have been undertaken years ago.

Gordon W. Stead told a Trenton Rotary audience the other day that when he joined the department ten years ago it soon became obvious the canal had been allowed to fall into a great state of disrepair.

Acknowledging that DOT marine services had apparently been neglected for other urgent considerations, like jet transportation, Mr. Stead said his department was entering the sixth year of what will amount to a $27 million refurbishing program of the Trent system. He estimated the program should be completed in another six years.

There is a lesson here with regard to projects Belleville has in mind for the years ahead — the Dundas Street bridge and the community centre-arena for instance. The city has a duty to recognize the needs of the community while at the same time using its funds in a responsible manner. But it must also be borne in mind that the longer necessary developments are withheld the more they will cost when ultimately the city finds itself in a position to pay for them.

The Trent program likely is costing much more today than if it had been undertaken years ago, and particularly as the work is being carried out on a long-term basis.

A Doctor's Advice

"You have to present a philosophy of living to parents. Unless we live dangerously we don't live. We can't wrap our children up in cotton wool and protect them from all buffeting. You have to allow them to take risks."

The above advice comes from a Toronto neurologist, Dr. J. Stobo Prichard. It is valid in any sphere of life or in any situation. But specifically, Dr. Prichard was speaking of the disease of the nervous system known as epilepsy and of its treatment.

For years shrouded by mystery and prejudice epilepsy today is understood much more widely by the public. In the majority of cases drugs control the ailment to the point where sufferers are troubled only rarely by seizures.

Dr. Prichard had an important audience in 250 school teachers at the Hospital for Sick Children and he stressed to them the necessity of treating the epileptic child like any other. This applies also to classmates who should be taught acceptance of the epileptic's difficulty and to make as little fuss about it as possible.

As Dr. Prichard pointed out, epilepsy (the word is of Greek origin) is a term that causes alarm and is associated with many misconceptions. One is that it is associated with mental deterioration. Actually epilepsy refers only to abnormal discharge of energy from brain cells which as has been noted can be controlled by drugs. Seizures in children tend to disappear as they get older.

In Praise of Squares

Yes there are still a lot of squares around in this world. And the significant thing is that they endure while the faddists sooner or later shoot their bolt.

Not so long ago the Beatles were the rage and while there was much charm and wholesomeness in what they had to offer, much even in their music that will be remembered, other groups and other trends have taken their place.

The study of mysticism from an Indian authority is something that is quite admirable in the contemporary lives of the Beatles. The drug addiction, however, that grips so many others is something that can only be regarded with misgiving.

What of the squares? Have they anything to offer?

Here is the word from one self-admitted "square". He is Frederick Fishell of Toronto and he is quoted by Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham as saying at the age of 36 he finds himself an anachronism in an era of hippies and flower children.

At the risk of being considered a square, says columnist Needham, Mr. Fishell says his favorite word is "integrity" and his pet phrase-concept is "a workman worthy of his hire".

"Mr. Fishell completes his "self-portrait of a relic" by saying his favorite poem is Rudyard Kipling's If.

Yes, there is room for squares in this world.

Mitchell Sharp—Austere and Disciplined, Eyes, Leadership

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The smile, tight-lipped, was as thin and chill as midwinter sunshine.

"Yes," said that gaunt, skeletal face — pale pinkish skin drawn drumhead-taut over steel trap jaw — "yes, especially France."

And that was as close as Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp allowed himself to go in betraying, very humanly, just the faintest glint of satisfaction that, of all the countries to feel the money-pinch of those restrictions the Americans are clamping on their investment abroad, France would be the hardest squeezed.

As you sat there at his press conference, trying to read the always interesting face of another of the men who want to be prime minister, you sensed that the thought of General de Gaulle suffering a little economic pain was giving Mitchell Sharp an inner satisfaction of considerable warmth.

It had to be an inward glow of quite some intensity to penetrate, as faintly as it did, in just the shadow of a smile, that icy exterior of rigid self-control.

And that perhaps gives you a clue as to the kind of Liberal leader and prime minister Mitchell Sharp would be.

For discipline — of himself and of those who work for him — is perhaps his most outstanding characteristic and essential qualification for leadership.

He has ability, of course, in generous measure.

But haven't almost all the leadership candidates their own particular capabilites — or why would they be aspiring to be prime minister?

What is particular in Mr. Sharp's qualifications is that in intellect he probably is the best equipped of them all for understanding and being able to use the economic processes that shape national life and influence governments.

But he is special for something else — his total control of his feelings.

If Mr. Sharp ever has lost his temper, it has never been in Parliament. Nor has he ever let the watchful Commons detect any hint of great good feeling. He is the nearest thing to the automated man the House ever has seen.

Which would make him immune alike to the taunts and tantrums of the opposition, the differences and doubts of colleagues, the promises or threats of special pleaders and interest groups and to most of the other pressures applied so unrelentingly on any prime minister.

As prime minister, Mitchell Sharp would be boss, something Lester Pearson never has been, or perhaps any of the others since that old autocrat Mackenzie King.

Each of the candidates insists he is his own man.

But Mr. Sharp is more than that — he is his own private man. And so, as prime minister, he would be detached, but not remote, from the rest of the cabinet.

They wouldn't, familiarly, call him "Mitch" — for he is no Mike Pearson — nor even PM, but with respect for total authority, and perhaps with some fear, properly, Prime Minister.

As a self-made man who came from the wrong side of the Winnipeg tracks to reach the corporative executive suite, the bureaucratic power elite and finally the seats of the politically mighty on Parliament Hill, he is intolerant of anything less than total effort.

A child of the depression on the prairies, he saw the bailiff strip the furniture from his jobless father's home.

From that kind of grinding poverty he made it, on his own, to the top. And with that kind of a prime minister, a driver ruthlessly unforgiving of anything less than complete commitment to the job, a cabinet would have to perform — or else.

A cold fish?

Straight off the ice.

But he does have a warm side — although not many get to see it, and when they do it is an event.

Like that day in June 11 years ago when he drove his old Pontiac out to Ottawa's Uplands Airport to meet C. D. Howe, then no longer the high and mighty "Trader" of munitions and supply, defence production, reconstruction, commerce, "minister of everything," but the fallen giant humbled in election defeat by Douglas Fisher.

C. D. Howe was the man for whom, above all others, the victorious Diefenbaker Conservatives had been gunning as the archetype of what they cried was "Liberal arrogance."

But Mitchell Sharp, as he later was to say, just did not give a damn about that — C. D. had been his boss, and still, at heart if not in fact, his loyal and devoted departmental deputy, he was going out to comfort the old man in the misery of great disappointment.

Not many months later Sharp was fired — the partial price, perhaps, of loyalty?

Letter to the Editor

Acting Mayor Calls on Citizens to Co-operate

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Thank you for your editorial dated January 26, 1968 concerning my contributions to Belleville.

It is important that we all work together to create a spirit of community, brotherhood and progress for the citizens of Belleville. The press, as well as the writer, has a responsibility which is to be characterized by the service we perform for this community.

I commend the Intelligencer (hereinafter called the paper) and its associated company CJBQ for their contribution to Belleville and area. (Examples include sponsoring the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, music at Zwick's Island, the paper's handsome new building on Bridge Street, with its attractive bench for weary pedestrians, its contributions to hockey and myriad other activities.)

I suggest Mr. Editor, that I did not "Blast" (your phrase) the press and radio in my speech. I offered constructive comment on how the communications media as well as service clubs, industry, labor, all of us could co-operate to make our city greater!

• • •

I request that the paper, whose editor indicates he wishes to keep the record straight, publish the preceding five paragraphs of my speech as well as the paragraph relating to my comments on the press.

I am a firm believer in editorial "fair comment." If my constructive comments could be interpreted as a blast, then I suggest the editor completely misunderstands his responsibility to the community in regard to the service his paper renders in the accurate, responsible and interpretive reporting of events.

That my individual achievement as an alderman has been compared with the total work of the powerful, influential, daily media is edifying! Having only intended to create dialogue between people in this community, who could help the city's constant development, I am surprised to find myself the subject of this type of editorial.

It amazes me that the editor, in compiling the research necessary for the editorial, referred only to the minutes of council meetings in order to assess my aldermanic contribution to the council.

If the editor cares to research more thoroughly, he will find that as a member of the welfare committee composed of Williams, David and Boyle, I made several recommendations to council, including a recommendation that in the future only a fully qualified social worker be hired as welfare director. The only recommendation of the committee that council did not accept was that the director be given a vote of confidence. Council, pursuant to Alderman David's recommendation, requested the Provincial Welfare Department to investigate the director's conduct of his department. Ultimately a new director was appointed and the city hired a fully qualified social worker.

• • •

With regard to the Dundas Street Bridge complex presently under discussion, it is completely spurious to speak of the removal of the CPR tracks. Council has been advised by a CNR engineer, a CPR engineer and a Board of Transport Commission engineer, that the estimated cost to the city of removing the CPR trackage (no grants allowed to the city) would be between $20 to $30 million. Council has further been advised by a responsible CNR official, that the CNR can not fully accommodate its own traffic and would not consider CPR right of use arrangements over CNR lines.

These are definite, conclusive answers to the question of removing the CPR tracks. Surely one can accept these answers as final.

If the editor were to consider the real work of council, the committee work and not merely the skeletal recording of the minutes of council meetings, he would have a better idea of my contribution to council.

The editor neglects to mention my chairmanship of the Senior Citizens and family housing project (40 families and at least 37 senior citizens enjoying the benefit of the co-ordinated effort by the committee, council and CMHC and OHC.) This committee work involved at least three trips to Toronto, innumerable meetings with architects, engineers, and department officials at considerable personal expense to myself.

The editor further neglects to mention my chairmanship of the committee on TV. This committee work entailed two trips to Toronto and one trip to Ottawa, a full three days absence from my practice of law. Belleville will reap any benefit from my sacrifice of time and effort — certainly not me.

To be fair and accurate I advise the editor that he did not consider my contribution to the committee on re-construction and renovation of the new police station on Campbell Street — many more hours of meetings.

Mr. Editor, I submit that my contribution to council and Belleville compares favorably with that of any other alderman in the 1965-67 Council.

• • •

My unanimous appointment as acting mayor by my fellow aldermen is perhaps a better appraisal of my contribution to council by persons more qualified to evaluate such contribution than the editor.

The press further misconstrues my comments concerning regional government. As soon as Mr. Bateman returns from Florida, I will request him to debate publicly, in company with such experts in their field as educationists, planners, taxation officials, the many aspects of regional government. Would the editor consider this letter his invitation to join with us, on a panel to discuss all aspects of regional government, thus informing the public of his paper's stand on the subject.

Finally, I think that dialogue is important. It is through dialogue that we renounce selfish views of the world to produce mutual understanding and progress. By dialogue we produce an integrated, many-sided process of constant development.

Mr. Editor, your comments have encouraged me to speak as articulately as I am able in the future in an effort to activate our citizens into doing more now and in the future to help Belleville, than they have in the past.

I sincerely hope that your reaction to my comments will not discourage others more intelligent and articulate than myself, from expressing their views on issues which will affect everyone. This is our citizens' inalienable and free right in our democratic society.

To conclude, let us all work together for peace, well-being, happiness and progress in Belleville. To this end, I accept your criticism — to this goal I serve this community to the best of my ability.

DOUGLAS BOYLE, Alderman.

Afro-Indians Outshine Europeans

Manchester Guardian

That the myth of white supremacy should ever have arisen is odd enough; that it should have been accepted by women is past belief. The thought occurred overwhelmingly recently at General de Gaulle's new year reception in honor of the Diplomatic Corps.

French women have lost none of their traditional elegance. English women have always been acknowledged to stand up well to the lighting. But under the chandeliers of the Elysee last week French and English women alike tended to fade into the aubusson carpets beside African women in native robes, who carried themselves like empresses, and Indian women, rippling exquisitely in saris. And, perhaps, best of all, Japanese women with perfect porcelain faces and kimonos to make a bird of paradise feel like a Buff Orpington in moult. It would be a bold one of us pinky-beige women who even tried to compete.

The Flood in 1898: From our file copy at that time: The water in the river has risen rapidly and the distress caused by the flooding of the low lying parts of the city is evident. The flood is worse on the west side of the river where several houses upon the lower floors are flooded and families are taking refuge in the upper part of their houses. On the east side of the river the situation is alarming. At the Coleman dam, near Walker's foundry, the dam cannot be seen, as the water, usually below the dam, is level with the dam and is backing up towards Lingham's Mill. Nearly all the cellars along the west side of Front St. are flooded with water from one to three feet in depth.

Okanagan Fruit Growers Switch to Dwarf Trees

VERNON, B.C. (CP) — Fruit growers in the Okanagan Valley are pulling out their old trees and replacing them with dwarf varieties in an effort to cut costs and increase yield.

About 15 per cent of Okanagan growers now have switched to dwarf trees, or use of the "high density" method.

"Eventually almost all will be high density," says Dr. D. V. Fisher, an expert at the federal agriculture department's Okanagan research station at Summerland.

Louis van Roechoudt of Okanagan Centre, B.C., one of the valley's most prosperous fruit growers, advocates the high-density method.

"When I came to B.C. I was told to forget high-density planting," Mr. van Roechoudt said in an interview at the recent convention of the British Columbia Fruit Growers Association.

"They told me it wasn't suitable for North America."

Mr. van Roechoudt rejected the advice and used the method that had been employed in Europe for 40 years—taking out the standard 15-foot apple trees and replacing them with dwarf varieties planted close together.

Standard practice had been to plant 40 normal-sized trees per acre. Under high-densite planting, 600 to 800 dwarfs now are planted per acre.

The dwarfs produce more fruit of higher quality, thus increasing the return to the grower. Costs were pared because picking is easier and quicker.

"To pick from (standard) trees you need a 12-foot ladder," said Mr. van Roechoudt. "People strong enough to do the picking can get jobs in the forest industry at much higher wages.

"But with smaller trees picking is easy. You can hire older people—people on pensions who want to work only casually. It's a social event for them."

Dr. Fisher said the high-density method has an added advantage. The dwarfs will produce a substantial crop of apples in five years, about half the time it takes to produce a crop from the larger trees.

The method is particularly suited to Okanagan orchards, which are small compared with most in North America. Most B.C. orchards range in size from five to 10 acres and intensive planting is considered necessary to maximize returns.

Lower Down Payments May Be Coming: Benson

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President Benson hopes to speed a legislative amendment through Parliament this month that could halve down payments on NHA homes.

He is looking for informal pledges from the Conservatives and New Democrats to pass the measure with little debate. The government will at all costs avoid a full-scale housing debate before the current session of Parliament ends in March.

Mr. Benson, who took over responsibility for housing policy from Labor Minister Nicholson on Jan. 18, will sponsor a substantial revision of the National Housing Act later in 1968.

He said in an interview that his current NHA amendment would only be a stop-gap measure. It could cut down on the amount of cash necessary to get into a home but it would do nothing to reduce monthly carrying charges.

The government now insures mortgage loans extended by institutional lenders on a formula under which the home buyer may borrow 95 per cent of the first $13,000 of the assessed lending value of the property, and 70 per cent of the balance to a loan limit of $18,000.

On a home with an assessed lending value of $19,000, the existing formula would provide a maximum loan of $16,550, indicating a down-payment requirement of at least $2,450.

The new formula would permit the home buyer to borrow 95 per cent of the lending value to a limit of $18,000. On the $19,000 home, the individual could borrow up to the full $18,000, leaving him with a down payment of only $1,000.

Government May Use 'Pre-fabs' in HOME

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government may use prefabricated houses for its Home Ownership Made Easy program, Stanley Randall, trade and development minister, said Wednesday.

Mr. Randall, speaking at the opening of the Alcan Universal Homes Ltd. plant, told company officials some builders negotiating with Alcan for factory-manufactured houses have leased lots from the Ontario Housing Corp. in St. Thomas and Sudbury.

"There is a strong possibility you will be working with us in a number of other areas, including the next phase of Bramalea to be offered this year."

The reference was to the Bramalea development northwest of Toronto.

At full production, the $2,000,000 plant will manufacture a house every 96 minutes. Every element, including plumbing and wiring is precut to size. The house is assembled as it passes along a production line. It is then taken in two sections by truck and assembled on site.

"You people have come up with distinct and superior techniques and designs that would prove highly competitive in the U.S. and the profits would return to Canada," said Mr. Randall.

He said this year the OHC plans 12,000 starts in public, senior citizens' and students' housing, plus putting 6,000 HOME lots on the market in 30 communities.

Houses manufactured at the Alcan plant range in price from $8,500 to $12,500 and include furniture, appliances, wall-to-wall broadloom and pictures on the walls. They will be sold only through franchised dealers.

Because of municipal building codes the houses will not be allowed on any site in Metropolitan Toronto.

Two Appointed to Guide Regional School of Nursing

Mrs. K. Madge Flindall, B.Sc. (Nursing) has been appointed principal of the new Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing.

Mrs. Helen A. McLachlan, B.Sc. (Nursing) has been appointed to assist Mrs. Flindall in the preparation of the new course of study.

In making the announcement today, Philip Rickard, secretary to the Edith Cavell Board of Governors, said the first students will be admitted to the new school in September 1968.

"The Belleville General Hospital School of Nursing will gradually be phased out," Mr. Rickard said. "No more students will be admitted, and as the 100 nursing students in the school finish their training the teaching staff will be absorbed into the Edith Cavell staff."

The BGH nursing school now has a staff of ten to 12 teachers.

Before she received her new appointment, Mrs. Flindall was director of the BGH nursing school. Mrs. McLachlan was employed by the Bay of Quinte High School Board to direct the nursing assistants' course. Both nurses are graduates of Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children and obtained their degrees from Queen's University.

About 40 students will be enrolled in the regional nursing school in September. Eventually the number will be upped to 70 a year.

The BGH school had an average enrollment of 30 students a year.

Four area hospitals, Belleville, Campbellford, Picton and Trenton, will be used for the nurses' training. The Edith Cavell course will follow the new format of two years' academic experience and one year of internship before graduation.

Watershow At 'Y' Gets Big Crowd

Last Saturday the Belleville YMCA presented their "Hawaiian Capers" watershow to an overflow crowd. In spite of 85 degree temperatures that few came prepared for, and crowded conditions, everyone seemed to enjoy the show.

Besides synchronized swimming, the water show included diving, speed swimming, lifesaving, scuba diving and drown proofing displays.

Over 25 members of the "Y" and its clubs participated in the show.

Senators Take Stand

Divorce Bill Blocked

OTTAWA (CP) — Attempts to broaden the government's new divorce bill were blocked in a Senate committee Wednesday but a move to let county courts handle divorce cases, now the exclusive property of superior courts, was kept alive.

The committee scheduled another meeting today aimed at completing study of the bill, which already has passed the Commons.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario), the Senate's veteran divorce committee chairman, tried unsuccessfully to insert two extra grounds for automatic divorce—wilful non-support of a wife or family for one year, and desertion for three years.

The bill, outcome of a special parliamentary committee study, expands the present automatic divorce ground of adultery to take in sodomy, bestiality or rape, homosexuality, bigamy, and cruelty, either physical or mental.

Another section sets out grounds for a divorce due to marriage breakdown, covering a variety of conditions ranging from desertion to alcoholism and drug addiction. But it gives a judge discretion to decide whether a marriage has actually broken down with no hope of reconciliation.

Senator Roebuck sought to lift non-support and desertion into the major grounds for divorce.

He and Senator Jacques Flynn, the Senate Opposition leader, pressed for revision of a section which gives divorce jurisdiction to either the provincial supreme court or, in the case of Quebec and Newfoundland, the exchequer Court of Canada.

Senator Roebuck said power to hear divorce cases should be extended to the county courts, as suggested to the parliamentary committee by J. C. McRuer, former chief justice of Ontario. This idea was supported by Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario).

Senator Flynn proposed that choice of courts be left to each province to decide.

The committee finally agreed to defer the question of court jurisdiction until Justice Minister Trudeau was available to answer questions on the subject.

Apart from the court issue, all other clauses of the bill were passed without only one minor amendment. This was a technical revision that retains the right of Ontario courts to handle annulments under the Ontario Divorce Act of 1930.

The amendment will require concurrence of the Commons after the Senate completes its work on the bill, but this is expected to be merely a formality.

Fishing Licence Cost Could Be $3 Per Year

TORONTO (CP) — Rene Brunelle, Ontario lands and forests minister, said Wednesday he has recommended to the provincial cabinet that resident angling licences be introduced in Ontario and that the present fee of $1 a year for gun licences be increased.

He said the recommendations were part of a general review of revenues from the province's natural resources.

Mr. Brunelle said resident angling licences are a logical response to mounting pressure for stepped-up fish management programs, acquisition of fishing rights on streams and the hiring of more conservation officers.

"I believe the people benefiting from such programs should be making some fair contribution to their cost."

Mr. Brunelle said he feels a fair price for a resident's fishing licence would be about $3 a year.

Ontario residents now can fish without a licence anywhere in the province except Algonquin, Lake Superior and Quetico provincial parks, where a licence costs $3.25.

An official of the lands and forests department said introduction of the resident fishing licence would probably mean discontinuation of the special parks fee.

The non-resident licence fee in Ontario is $6.50.

At least 1,000,000 Ontario residents over the age of 16 are estimated to fish every year.

Mr. Brunelle said the $1 gun licence fee, in effect since 1930, does not cover costs of administering the licensing program, let alone provide funds for new hunting areas and improved management of existing areas.

Judges Differ In Decisions

TORONTO (CP) — Some judges of the Supreme Court of Canada consistently uphold and some consistently oppose the claims of taxpayers in taxation appeals, the plaintiffs in negligence appeals or the accused in criminal appeals, says an article in the Canadian Bar Review.

It reaches certain limited conclusions of what its author, Sydney R. Peck, associate professor of law at Osgoode Hall here, calls judicial behaviorism.

He examined the voting pattern of 12 judges over an eight-year period, using the method of scalogram analysis developed in the United States. A scalogram is a complicated method of examining judicial decisions.

While stressing that he makes no broad conclusions about the nature of decision-making by the court, Prof. Peck says:

"An examination of the three scalograms, taken together, indicates that some justices tend to have one-sided voting patterns on more than one scale. This suggests the hypothesis that these justices pursue policy goals in more than one area of the law."

Dealing with the voting pattern of Mr. Justice Douglas Abbott, the article says.

"His voting pattern is in favor of the government in taxtaion appeals, of the defendant in negligence appeals and of the Crown in criminal law appeals. . . .

"The effect of his votes in negligence and taxation appeals appears to be to the satisfaction of government revenue demands, making possible the expansion of government services, but to inhibit the wide distribution of the costs of normal risks by way of private insurance.

LaPierre Meets the Students On Day Long Belleville Visit

By STEVE BISHOP

Students at city secondary schools were treated to the animated wit and engaging views of Laurier LaPierre, the controversial NDP politician and TV personality Tuesday.

At Moira Secondary School, in addition to a 40 - minute speech to Grade 12 and 13 students, Mr. LaPierre held an informal discussion over hot chocolate and coffee with the Grade 13 history students which lasted over an hour.

In his speech, Mr. LaPierre stressed the need for commitment and said the most striking thing about today's young generation is that it "is as dull and boring as mine is."

He announced, "I am launching a revolt against boredom." He stated that there was a need for Canadians to undergo a re-assessment of their country.

"We are a nation of parasites," he said, "living off the fat of the United States."

After the speech, a question and answer period was held in which Mr. LaPierre asked for a show of hands for and against the monarchy in Canada.

The overwhelm of the students were against the monarchy.

The informal talk which followed the speech was a stimulating one in which the distinguished guest fielded a variety of questions from the history students, and occasionally, the teachers.

Asked if, in his appeal to youth, he was the Robert Kennedy of Canada, Mr. LaPierre replied, "Yes, in a way. But I only have two children."

Speaking in a more serious vein, he added that he thought the voting age should be lowered to 18, and that there was a need, in his party and in Canada as a whole, for younger leaders. Mr. LaPierre is in his early 40's.

In reply to the suggestion that the NDP had lost the socialist flavor of its forerunner the CCF, Mr. LaPierre said, "I am a socialist. And the NDP is a socialist party."

He went on to explain that the concept of socialism has changed. Nationalization of economic resources, he pointed out, is neither inevitable nor necessary anymore.

His view on foreign aid: "The more the merrier."

Mr. LaPierre elaborated on this statement by stating that he felt Canada could best contribute to the peace of the world with a sound foreign aid program.

He also came out in favor of the United Nations and Canada's role in it. "I believe that by 1985, the UN will really become an instrument of peace."

Mr. LaPierre was highly critical of NORAD and NATO, however, and said that he saw no use for them, mainly because the enemy they were set up to fight against was not clearly defined.

Drawn back into a discussion of Canadian politics, Mr. LaPierre came out heavily in favor of Justice Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau for leader of the Liberal Party. He said that Conservative leader Robert Stanfield could defeat Paul Martin of Mitchell Sharp if either was Liberal candidate for Prime Minister, but that Trudeau could, in his opinion, prevail over Stanfield in an election.

Assessing Canada's recent prime ministers, he rated John Diefenbaker as good on the strength of his first two years in office, and Lester B. Pearson as good also.

His view of French President DeGaulle was not so flattering: "It would be so much better if he went away and was not heard from for a while."

Inevitably questioned on the Vietnam War, Mr. LaPierre said that the personnel currently being used in the war effort could be trained for peaceful purposes if the war ended tomorrow.

In conclusion, the guest speaker explained his theory on how the Canadian government should be set up.

A professor of history at McGill University in addition to his other pursuits, Mr. La Pierre took chalk in hand and diagramed his "Republican Government of Canada" on the blackboard for his attentive audience.

Included in this new form of government would be a president with limited power to replace the monarchy, a reformed Supreme Court, and a Council of Canada to assess legislation passed by the House of Commons.

One of the major points in Mr. LaPierre's form of government was a "concurrent majority." This would assure that French - speaking Canadians have 50 per cent representation on the Council of Canada and the Inner Cabinet of 14 members.

Representation in the House of Commons would not change, however, and, in the Council of Canada, ethnic groups other than English and French would have greater representation.

When Mr. LaPierre had departed, he left an audience that, while it did not agree with him on all points, had spent a stimulating time both listening to and questioning their visitor.

The Professor Makes A Point

Laurier LaPierre, a history professor by trade, uses the blackboard to illustrate a point in a discussion with Moira's Grade 13 history students.

An Audience Reacts

The wit of Laurier LaPierre prompted many responses like this one. The amused audience consists of Mick Chalmers, Mark Bishop, Mel Wilson and Gary Lovett.

80 Per Cent in Favor

Students Would Abolish Monarchy

By SUE BOARDMAN

WELL, SNOWBALL '68 is over now but I'm sure it will be a memorable weekend for all who participated. In the games at Zwick's Island on Saturday afternoon, Quinte did very well. The dog sled race was won by our own Mr. Sisson and Mr. Leach. The teachers' tug of war was won by our teachers under the organization of Mr. Hull. On the snow sculpturing, our turtle came third.

On Sunday, Quinte played Moira in the final hockey game. The score was 5-5 with no overtime. I was glad to see that there was a good turn out to support our boys.

• • •

LAST THURSDAY, our assembly was put on by Miss McAvoy and the contestants in the Public Speaking Contest. There were six prepared speeches and one impromptu given. Sharon Dalton of grade 12 won for the prepared speeches, with her topic of UFO's. Our impromptu was taken by Joe Hurst, also of grade 12. Both of these students will now go to Albert College to compete for the city title.

This week Quinte is busy getting the last minute jobs our Variety Review. It will be done before Friday night and held on Friday, February 2, and Saturday, February 3, starting at 8:00 p.m. sharp. Let me give you a sneak preview of this happening.

Our Masters of Ceremonies will be Ron Guay and Kerry Stratton . . . need I go on!

• • •

THIS YEAR there seems to be acts put on by larger groups, representing many of our clubs, instead of solos, although there are some solos.

The band will not be playing; instead a small band of five or six instruments and our organ will provide the music.

As usual, gymnastics is the basis of our Review. Both boys' and girls' gymnastics will take part in the program.

A new club in the school, the Folk Singing Club, will be singing. As a part of this, Mr. and Mrs. Gibson will sing for us. They sang in our Christmas assembly, put on by the Bible Club, and they were an instant hit with all of us.

• • •

THE SAINTS' Choir will make their debut. These are our COSSA football champs of 1967. The boys were always singing on the bus to and from the games and they made up a good part of our carolers at Christmas time. From this interest of singing, arose the Saints' Choir. You can't miss them, they're the sweetest sounding football team around.

Two skits are scheduled. One is Macbeth which is being put on by 12G. This play has been arranged and produced by students of this class. Many scenes from this play will be presented, so come on and brush up on your Shakespeare.

The second skit is being put on by the grade 11 nursing assistants. This play was written by the girls themselves. It points out the problems of hospital life, but manages to present them in a humorous way.

• • •

DURING THE intermission, the Girls' Athletic Association will be sponsoring a bake sale. You will be able to buy all kinds of baked goodies, either to eat during the intermission or to take home and devour after the show.

Tickets for this night of fabulous entertainment are being sold by the Key Club in the rotunda after 3:15. The ticket will only cost you one little dollar. The money will be for a good cause too — the completion of the money needed to finance our track, which was our Centennial project.

We need this track badly because there isn't one in Belleville. So come on, give us a dollar to help build our track, and we'll give you a night of free entertainment in return.

Carnival Success: Nicholson Teens

By DONNA WHALEN

THE WINTER Carnival — Belleville's miniature version of the Mardi Gras — went into full swing on Friday night with the hootenanny and didn't quiet down until the hockey game on Sunday was finished.

Most of the credit for its success is attributed to a group of students who together represented every high school in Belleville. They carefully planned and organized all the events well ahead of time — the only thing that Quinte teens had to contribute was a little bit of spirit and energy, and any observer could testify that they gave it wholeheartedly.

• • •

ENTHUSIASM was expressed by the clapping hands at the hootenanny, by the cheers at the hockey games and even by the strenuous pulls in the tug of war contests. The carnival provided a welcome break in our long, monotonous winter and made us realize that piles of snow and ice can be a lot of fun. Let's hope that the 1968 winter carnival won't be the last; let's start a tradition.

• • •

THE FOLK-SINGERS from Nicholson were especially good considering the fact that they worked as a group for only a couple of weeks before their first performance. The names of the members are: Rosemarie Manthorpe, Paula Vane, Donald Cantin, Mike from which "My Fair Lady" was adapted) will be staged by the Drama Club of N.C.C. on February 2nd and 3rd in St. Michael's auditorium. Admission is 50 cents for students and $1.00 for adults. The members of the cast have Manthorpe, Mike Marino Michael Fitzgibbon.

Variety Show Slated

Snowball '68--A Memorable Weekend

By JOHN McNAIR

THE MOST interesting thing to happen in the last week was definitely Mr. Laurier LaPierre's speech on Tuesday. In his speech he stated that Canada's greatest enemy is boredom and that "This Hour Has Seven Days" — The Show on which he appeared was an attempt to relieve this boredom. "Sunday" and "The Way It Is" according to Mr. LaPierre are inexcusable.

He established a list of priorities for Canada — In order of importance — Bilingualism is the most pressing. He said that young people must learn French or face a life of mediocrity and unimportance.

• • •

HIS SECOND priority was Canadian ownership of Canada. He stated that Canada must regain the 65 percent of Canada owned by the United States and the only way to do this was through Socialism— Canadians investing in foreign owned Canadian companies for themselves to keep the profits in Canada.

The last priority for Canada he said, is an international commitment — we must reach out and help less fortunate countries and peoples.

• • •

"CANADIANS he said "must ask themselves if they really want to live together to build a country to have a common purpose."

He also said along this line that each individual Canadian must reassess their part in society and that young people must not let education interfere with their contribution.

Mr. LaPierre asked the student audience how many were in favor of abolishing the monarchy and making Canada a republic with a president taking over the Governor-General's job. Easily 80 percent of the combined BCI — Nicholson College audience agreed with him that the monarchy should be abolished.

During the question time a student asked about the Liberal Leadership Convention. He said that if the Liberals were smart they would choose Pierre Trudeau—but since they aren't smart they would take Mitchell Sharp or Paul Martin. Since Mr. LaPierre is a declared member of the N.D.P. a student asked what his political ambitions were. He bluntly stated that he would soon be leader of the party and not long after that Prime Minister of Canada. "How's that for confidence!" "I bet he'll do it too!"

Due to Mr. LaPierre's speech I can't give much room to Snowball '68 but B.C.I. was victorious at Zwick's Island gaining 31 points to Moira's 28 and Quinte's 16. The Hootenanny on Friday was a tremendous success. A lot can be said for bringing the schools together again next winter.

• • •

AS A FINAL note B.C.I. will host a bantam basketball tournament on Saturday, February 3 starting at 8:30 a.m. A tournament ticket will be sold for 50 cents which will entitle the purchaser to watch all sixteen great teams play off until a winner is decided. See you there.

Moira Drama Production

SENSATIONAL would come short of describing the effect that Snowball '68 had on the students of Belleville, and hopefully the spirit and enthusiasm built up will remain and contribute to an even more successful Snowball '69.

It is with great pride that I say Moira was well represented in the weekend events and although we didn't place first in total points, I feel safe in saying that Moira captured the major events.

Moira placed first in the snow - sculpturing, girls' nail driving, boys' tug-o-war, and tied Quinte for first place in the hockey tournament, which gave us the highest record for first place finishes. Congratulations, Trojans!

• • •

THE LIGHTS are getting brighter as the curtains prepare to come up on Moira's annual Drama production. The dates, Feb. 2 and 3, Friday and Saturday nights respectively. This year two one act plays are being put on, "The Lottery" and "Parted on Her Wedding Morn."

Both plays include a large cast and are directed by Mrs. Marshall. The lottery is an unusual play with a rural setting and is concerned with an ancient custom. "Parted on Her Wedding Morn", is a hilarious melodramatic comedy centred on the love life of a poor bewildered girl. It's shaping up to be a great show, so treat yourself to a night of enjoyment; get your tickets now.

CSS Dance Successful

By VICKI ANDERSON

THE SNOWBALL Dance at Centennial Secondary on Saturday night was very successful, even though the band arrived late.

Many thanks go to everyone who took part in arranging the dance, and also to those who spent so much time and effort decorating the gyms so artistically.

• • •

AT C.S.S. last week students were busy before morning classes, at lunch time, and after school making snow sculptures. This was quite an undertaking because we have little snow and that which we do have is not packy, but crusty and hard to shape.

Our assembly last week was very musical. Donna Hutchison and Ken Snowdon sang several folk songs which they also sang at the Hootenanny at BCI last Friday evening.

• • •

ON TUESDAY January 23 we were pleased to have some Grade 13 students from the other secondary schools at Centennial. These students were at our school attending a French lecture.

I'm sure that those students who attended Centennial for the first time were greatly impressed by its modern architecture and its friendly atmosphere.

Out to Stop Bandits

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A guard at every door is the Sao Paulo police strategy to stop grab-and-run bank robbers who have hit 11 branch banks for about $5,000 in two months. The gang's small-haul technique calls for one man to wait inside until a handy pile of bills shows at a teller's counter and run with it to a getaway car. A branch manager who tried to stop the inside man last month was shot dead.

Variety of Legislation to Be Discussed By Royal Commission on Status of Women

Probably everyone old enough to know there are two sexes has an opinion on how equal women are or ought to be. Opinion apart, the law in Canada has a good deal to say on the subject. What it says might be sifted to lend weight to anyone's argument, though. Some of it works to women's advantage, some does anything but.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates a variety of legislation to be discussed at hearings of the royal commission on the status of women in Canada.

Some of the laws carefully detail minimum standards, a reminder that not so long ago women had no legal rights to speak of.

Canadian women have had the federal franchise for 50 years. In Quebec they have had the provincial vote for 28 years. Women haven't equal minimum wages in all the provinces in 1968. They are not allowed to serve on juries in Newfoundland.

Quebec still gives a married woman complete control over her own property only when she and her husband have a marriage contract specifying that husband and wife are separate as to property, and that has been true only since 1964. Without a contract, what a wife does with her "immoveable" property is still to a great extent subject to her husband's consent and his rights take precedence generally.

It has not been long in any province since a married woman and her property were largely under her husband's control. Alberta's 50-year-old Married Women's Act had a face lift 25 years ago.

Broadly, the recommendation is that at a spouse's death the survivor should get half the total assets of an estate less separate personal assets. If a widow has $5,000 and her husband $25,000 she is entitled to a total $15,000. Within limits set by a judge, the same would apply in a divorce.

Neither spouse would be able to dispose of property or large amounts of money without the consent of the other.

Now most provinces have a dower or homestead right in property that guarantees a widow use of or income from the property. She must agree in writing to give up this right when property is sold. In several provinces there is a roughly corresponding right for males but it is not always as strict about a man's written release. .. If a husband dies without a will, the share of his estate his widow receives varies from province to province.

In Prince Edward Island she receives up to $8,000. Above that, half goes to her and half to those who would be heirs if there were no widow. In Ontario and British Columbia she gets the first $20,000, in Nova Scotia the first $25,000. In other provinces she gets a stated fraction, such as one-third, and except in Quebec, it is specified she shares the remainder with children or children's heirs. In Quebec the division is with children or parents and collateral relatives.

In most provinces a widow may attack a will that does not make adequate provision for her or her children.

An estate, depending on its size, may be taxed by both federal and provincial governments.

While he is alive, a man must provide necessities for his wife, though she cannot legally demand anything beyond adequacy.

In the case of separation or divorce, a husband can avoid being chased for support payments by choosing the right place to live.

Until the recent divorce-law changes, a woman could bring suit for divorce only in the province in which her husband had domicile. Now she has independent domicile and can sue from home.

In Manitoba, a husband can obtain a legal separation only on the grounds of habitual drunkenness on the part of his wife.

In Manitoba a married man living with his wife may not make assignment of his future wages without her written consent.

In Ontario a wife cannot be guilty of theft from the husband with whom she is living.

Tomorrow: When it comes to money, women lack equality with men.

Paris Still Major Attraction For American Fashion Industry

PARIS (AP) — Despite talk of a boycott because of heightened friction between France and the United States, most American fashion buyers seem to be buying at the same old pace.

A survey as the spring and summer collections come to an end indicated that Paris still has a major attraction for the American fashion industry-despite President de Gaulle.

The fashion house association said sales figures are running about the same as last season.

Said one American wholesale manufacturer: "I have been coming to France regularly for over 30 years. I am not letting any sentimental considerations interfere with my business. I have been a faithful customer, and this painful development has made no difference either in my thinking or my buying policy.

"We all know what Gen. de Gaulle has done for France. We feel his attitude today may be a sign of old age. We will not allow that attitude toward America affect our buying and spending money here for business. As usual I have found all my old pals and business connections as courteous and friendly as ever."

Alexander's, a New York store, is another faithful buyer of French fashion. Franchine Farkas, who returned as top fashion director from a career as a Wall Street broker, is enchanted with Paris this year.

At a cocktail party Monday she said: "Our buying this year is very important. We loved Patou, so young and fresh, and also Saint-Laurent, who has such great talent and a gold mine in ideas.'

Burns' Night Observed At YMCA

Each member of the capacity audience in attendance was handed a poke (bag) of Scottish food as he entered the auditorium.

Chairman for the program was S. Alec Gordon. Providing the entertainment were singers Keith MacLeod, and Flora (McDonald) Messacar; piper Linda Wilson, drummer Ray Croxford, readers A. D. Cameron and Angus McLeod, accordionist Judy DeBoer, and highland dancers Laurel Pringle, Valerie Croxford, Ray Croxford, Heather Hutchon, Sue Robertson, Mary Jane Iceley, Kim Robertson, Pat Robertson, Neil Turner and Joy Ann Turner. Accompanists were Flora Messacar and Angus MacLeod.

Following the program, the Burns' grace was read and the haggis served.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk taffeta with lace overlay fashioned on straight lines flowing gracefully into a slight train and highlighted with wrist-length sleeves. Successful Living

One Who Talks Too Much Asks for Assistance

Dear Doris: I think I need your "Tips on Talking". I talk too much, I think. Ten cents and a stamped envelope enclosed. — Gabby.

Dear Gabby: What one of us hasn't come home from a social do with the disturbing feeling that we have said too much, or the wrong thing, at one time or another? It takes poise to know when to talk and when to listen.

We talk to fill in the gaps, or to make an impression, or to put across a favorite idea. How often do we talk in order to draw out what the other fellow has to say? How often do we let a few pauses ride along, in order to help others get a word in?

A good conversationalist knows when to forget all of his own ideas and become thoroughly absorbed in someone else's interest. He relaxes, lets down tension; is easy to be with.

The "Tips on Talking" were designed with tongue - tied teen-agers in mind; but the suggestions can help anybody.

• • •

Dear Doris: The poem requested by Autumn was a favorite of mine when I was a child of four and my mother read it to me from an Ontario public school reader called Golden Windows. I remember other beautiful pictures and stories in the book about Dawn and the Diamond Dipper, Mrs. Green and the Goat, and many others, and often wished that I could get a copy.

When I started school three years later in 1942 this book was no longer being used, to my great disappointment, and we used such books as Dick and Jane.

My teacher asked me why I wasn't interested in my reading and I told her it was not a very good book and why didn't we use the other one; and she explained that it was no longer in use and that I must learn to read this one.

I found it very difficult because my heart was in Golden Windows. My new book told no stories and everyone said the very same thing. — A Reader.

Dear Reader: I expect there is nostalgia associated with any off-with-the-old, on-with-the-new undertaking. I have had nearly a hundred letters about the little poem, "Come, Little Leaves".

Confidential to Kill or Cure: Can't say I blame you for thinking up such a remedy, but to my mind it is in the same class as a nineteenth century method recommended for the restoration of a person struck by lightning:

"Shower with cold water for two hours; if patient does not show signs of life, put salt in the water, and continue to shower one hour longer."

(From "God Bless Our Home", by Una Abrahamson; Burns and MacEachern 1966.)

Recipe for Blueberry Puff Pudding

By MARY MOORE

A package of fresh frozen blueberries in my freezer compartment was tantalizing me. I have given you in the past year several recipes calling for fresh blueberries and wanted now to make the optimum use of this package of frozen blueberries.

A pudding with a "Puff" topping has been a hit with you in recent years. I have given you puddings with this topping over plums, peaches oranges and canned Mandarin oranges but never over blueberries.

Actually the topping is very similar to the batter for a jelly roll. The whole business is easy to assemble.

BLUEBERRY PUFF PUDDING (serves 4 or 5)

Fruit Base:
2 cups fresh frozen blueberries (or you can use one 12-oz. pkge.)
1 tablespoon plus ¾ teaspoon minute tapioca one-third cup sugar
shake of salt
¼ cup water
Batter:
2 large eggs — yolks and whites separated
6 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
shake of salt
½ cup sifted cake flour

Prepare Blueberry Base first by adding to the blueberries in a saucepan the tapioca, sugar and salt and giving them a good stir. Now stir in water and bring to boiling point. Tip into baking dish of 4 or 5-cup capacity and keep hot in oven which should be preheating to 325 deg. Fahr.

To make Batter, in beater bowl, beat yolks with sugar until thick. To the egg whites add the cream of tartar and salt and beat until stiff. Fold beaten whites into egg-sugar mixture, sprinkle sifted cake flour over top and fold in until just blended. Take baking dish containing blueberry mixture from oven, give it a stir, then pour batter over evenly. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 50 minutes. Time this so that it will come from the oven hot and puffy at dessert-serving time. We served ours with 10 per cent cream. NOTE: If desired you may use 1 cup fresh frozen blueberries and 1 cup well packed thinly sliced apples instead of 2 cups fresh frozen blueberries.

Club Activities

MARMORA IODE

MARMORA — The educational secretary of Marmora Chapter IODE, Mrs. D. P. Marett, presented the annual report at the January meeting. It showed $700 spent during last year, most of it in the community. Education represents a major part of the annual budget.

Mrs. A. M. Jones was named IODE representative on the Women's Centennial Commitee. This body is continuing as an advisory group for community projects.

Much favorable comment was heard on the historical pictures distributed to local schools. One of the artists, J. D. Kelly, is a great-uncle of the high school principal, D. E. Thompson.

A shipment of babies' layettes will be sent to distressed areas in the near future. Members were asked to bring articles not provided by the sewing and knitting committees to the February meeting.

The 1967 executive will remain in office for 1968.

Ann Landers

More Ways than One To Discipline Child

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 10-year-old son, who is large for his age, answered me in a manner which I considered disrespectful and smart-alecky. I turned around and gave him a swat on the bottom. He grabbed hold of my hand and twisted my wrist.

ANN LANDERS

When his father came home I told him about the incident and he replied, "That's all right. The boy was merely protecting himself. "This conversation took place in front of the boy who sat there smirking because his Dad had taken his side.

The next day I went to hit him with a belt. He snatched it away from me and shouted, "Dad says I should protect myself and I'm going to do it."

The boy's father has never laid a hand on him. I've always had to do all the disciplining. Now that the boy is getting older I think his dad should hit him and not leave it to me. Please give me your views as things are going from bad to worse. — N.Y.

DEAR N.Y.: Don't expect a father who has never disciplined a child to "take over" all of a sudden. He won't do it. Your best bet is to stop hitting the kid and come up with punishment that means something — such as no TV, no movie, no dessert, no ball game. When "spankings" turn into hand-to-hand combat it's time for a change of tactics, Mother.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband reads your column and thinks you have a "lot of brains — for a woman." Please try to make him see my side.

I have some friends who could spend the whole day on the phone. There are times when I just let the phone ring because I'm too busy or not in the mood to talk.

My husband has told me I must always answer the phone, in case someone has something important to tell me. I still think it is better not to take a chance on getting caught by my gabby friends, so I don't answer if I don't feel like it.

The other day my husband tried to phone me and I did not answer. He telephoned our next door neighbor and asked her to come over and see if I was at home. When she reported that I was here he got so mad he called the phone company and instructed them to take the phone out. I have been without a phone for five days and I'm going crazy. Please tell him he is a nut and to put the phone back in. — OUT OF TOUCH.

DEAR OUT: A woman who would let a phone ring in order to duck her gabby friends should not be calling anyone else a nut.

If you promise to answer the phone from now on I will ask your husband to re-establish the telephone service and give you another chance. How about it?

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When a person says, "Please stop me if you've heard this one," is it good manners to stop him if you have actually heard the joke before?

I have always kept quiet but I'm beginning to think perhaps I should take the drawing room bores at their word — especially the ones who crucify a good story because they can't handle the dialect.

What's your opinion? — HO HUM.

DEAR HO: The person who invites you to stop him if you've heard the story doesn't really want you to stop him. He wants to tell the story. So, let him. Consider it an exercise in discipline for you — and therapy for him.

Leaking Natural Gas Main Blamed for Toronto Blast

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers' Gas Co. said Wednesday night a leaking natural gas main caused the early-morning explosion that demolished part of the $300,000 home of Bank President F. William Nicks in the exclusive Rosedale district.

"A seven-inch main in front of the house was found to be broken and gas seeped into the house," said a senior company official.

In an official statement later, the company said the main appeared to have been broken as a result of earth settlement, probably caused by recent rains and snow.

The break, six feet from the garage, was discovered by gas company crews which spent most of the day putting down exploratory holes along the street.

Five other houses were damaged in the 8:40 a.m. blast which ripped the end off the two-storey, 12-room house occupied by Mr. Nicks, president of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Police said the explosion was touched off when James Whitton, 43, Mr. Nicks' chauffer, lit a cigarette in the servants' quarters above a four-car garage.

The chauffeur, carried down a ladder by firemen and taken to hospital, is in satisfactory condition with burns to his face and hands. Mr. and Mrs. Nicks, a housekeeper and two maids, were in another part of the house and escaped injury.

Chunks of masonry the size of typewriters were hurled through the air, wrecking part of the roof of a house next door and damaging four other houses.

Severed Arm Rejoined

John Kominowski, 38, rests in Winnipeg General Hospital after having his arm, severed at the elbow, rejoined by surgeons in a nine-hour operation. It was the first time such an operation has been performed in Winnipeg and it will be about two years before it is known if the arm can be used. Mr. Kominowski lost the arm in an industrial accident. Duty-free Machinery Imports Administration Is Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) — Senior civil servants are finding it increasingly difficult to defend some aspects of the government's duty-free machinery import plan in the Commons finance and trade committee.

As an experiment and to help the committee wend its way through complex Kennedy round tariff cuts, committee chairman Herb Gray (L—Essex West) asked senior departmental officials to join in daily hearings.

The top performers have been C. A. Annis, director of tariffs in the finance department, and J. J. McKennirey, director of the machinery branch of the industry department.

As public officials, they are asked to provide detailed information on facts and figures, and administrative machinery. But they aren't expected to express personal opinion on government policy.

There has been mounting criticism of the procedures to be employed for imports of machinery needed to expand and improve Canada's industrial capability, to meet growing competition flowing from the Kennedy round.

Nearly 1,000 items in Canada's import tariff are being reduced, and even greater numbers of foreign duties are being lowered. The cuts were negotiated under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the bargaining called the Kennedy round after the late U.S. president.

In Wednesday's hearing, committee criticism was directed at the lack of appeal from decisions of Industry Minister Drury and the cabinet to permit duty-free imports.

Machinery is to be allowed into Canada free of duty when it is in the public interest and not available from Canadian sources. But neither Mr. Annis nor Mr. McKennirey could say what would be regarded as the public interest. They could only say it was a government decision not to include appeal procedures.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the situation has turned full circle since 1961, when the former Conservative government introduced a bill to guard Canada's balance of payments position. One of its provisions was to give the cabinet power to limit imports of machinery, without a right of appeal.

The legislation, supported then by the Conservatives and criticized by the Liberals, stalled in the Senate and eventually died on the parliamentary order paper.

On Tuesday, Conservative MPs said Industry Minister Drury should be summoned before the committee to explain his case. The decision is still pending.

Liberal MPs Back Medicare

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MPs debated medical care insurance with Prime Minister Pearson Wednesday at the party's regular weekly caucus meeting of MPs and senators.

One source said the general mood of the floor speakers was to resist provincial demands to delay implementation of the plan beyond the scheduled July 1 start.

Mr. Pearson gave no firm indication on what he plans to do about it. The cabinet has the deferment question under review and a decision is expected today.

Party Lines Are Meaningless In Debate on Broadcasting

OTTAWA (CP) — A debate over public versus private broadcasters, cutting across both Liberal and Conservative party lines, tied up Commons debate Wednesday on the government broadcasting legislation.

On the 10th day of clause-by-clause debate, the House remained stalled on the first clause discussed, setting out general broadcasting policy.

State Secretary Judy LaMarsh accepted a Conservative amendment by Robert McCleave (Halifax) in hopes of getting the last of 10 sections accepted.

But her hopes were dashed when most Conservatives refused to go along with their colleague's proposal.

Earlier, Miss LaMarsh had rejected an approach suggested by a Liberal back-bencher, Perry Ryan (Toronto Spadina).

At issue was a section stating that the objectives of the CBC must prevail over the "interests" of private broadcasters in any conflict between them.

Several members have suggested this would give the CBC an unfair advantage in competition for channels, or for a feature such as the Grey Cup game.

Conservative L. R. (Bud) Sherman (Winnipeg South) moved an amendment Tuesday to declare the public interest must prevail in any dispute between the public and private sector.

But he withdrew it Wednesday to let Mr. McCleave put forward his formula, saying conflicts "shall be resolved in the public interest but paramount consideration shall be given to the objectives of the national broadcasting service."

He said it would mean the CBC was not "invariably in the position of winning" a particular battle.

Howard Johnston (SC—Okanagan-Revelstoke) moved a sub-amendment aimed at getting back to Mr. Sherman's position but it went down to a 64 to 5 defeat.

Terry Nugent (PC—Edmonton-Strathcona) urged Mr. McCleave to withdraw the amendment and, when he did not do so, promised one of his own under which conflicts would be resolved "in the public interest by preference being given to the CBC, where all other considerations are equal."

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said the House had got itself into a ridiculous impasse and Miss LaMarsh should suggest a way out.

Mr. Ryan supported the approach of Mr. Nugent, but Miss LaMarsh said she could not accept it.

Mr. McCleave's amendment was passed on a vote of 54 to 22 with only Mr. Johnston and Ralph B. Cowan (L—York-Humber) joining 20 Conservatives to oppose it.

Civil Service Pensions Won't Be Raised Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson made it clear Wednesday that no increase in civil service pensions will be enacted during the present session of Parliament.

In a Commons exchange with Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), Mr. Pearson said he hopes to make a short statement today on legislative plans.

He showed a trace of annoyance over the pace of Commons business, saying his statement will deal with bills the government wants to bring in after the broadcasting bill is dealt with—"if we ever are able to deal with that."

The Commons Wednesday spent its 10th day in clause-by-clause study of the bill.

When Mr. Knowles asked whether the list of legislation would include increases in the civil service pensions, Mr. Pearson replied that only urgent and important bills will be covered.

The pensions question was important but was not on the "immediately urgent list."

Postal Workers Seek Wage Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's postal employees are seeking a 25-per-cent wage increase over the life of a 13-month contract.

A government spokesman said in an interview the Council of Postal Unions — representing the 12,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers and the 10,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada—presented the wage proposal to government representatives earlier this week.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander
Staff Sportswriter

Softball, 1968 vintage.

That's in store for the Quinte area?

Will there be a senior team, teams or league?

Will the new Trent Valley operate for a second season?

Will the "working men's leagues", the Commercial and Departmental, loosen their eligibility specifications?

In which league will valued teams such as the Picton Kinsmen and Point Anne Cementmen play?

And last but far from least, will the stupid feud, caused by a few but hurting many, continue among the umpires, providing a hotter rivalry than the ball itself?

Looking at the senior picture, we feel that Picton is a key to the entire situation in this area.

The Kinsmen form one of the top drawing cards on a softball diamond in Eastern Ontario. The club consists of a hard-nosed, closely-knit band of veterans who take a back seat to no one.

They have been as unhappy with the messing up of the game in this district as many of the rest of us. But they are in a good bargaining position when it comes to entering a league. They have in the past and will continue to play in the grouping they feel will prove the best drawing card in Picton.

I don't know if the Quinte-KASA will exist this season or not after ending on a sour "forfeit" note last fall. One or two of the Kingston clubs let it be known last spring that they were in "as long as Picton is."

Belleville's Ellis entry pushed the loop into existence when none of the teams from this immediate area would continue under "one-team law," sounding the death of the ancient B. and D. League. But some players quit part-way through the season and since, others have told us in confidence. "I'm all through with that kind of organization."

Belleville had about 20 players when the season opened but ended up forfeiting the finals to one of the three Kingston entries because it could not field a nine-man lineup.

Picton, I believe, would go back into the league if one or two organized clubs from both Kingston and Belleville joined and a strong, unbiased executive was formed. Picton manager Jim Guernsey told this writer last spring: "We will play with Ellis' because we think Kingston will draw crowds here, but otherwise, no." I don't believe that picture has changed much but whoever the Kinsmen play with, they will not be shoved around.

The Trent Valley needs Picton and/or a Belleville club in order to operate successfully. The re-vamped TVL tried it with four teams last year and it was not enough.

Another big question mark for the TVL is the status of Point Anne. That team was less than happy at times last year. They also have trouble keeping young players around without jobs. And the team also depends on money from the Canada Cement employees' sports fund to help operate. With the big layoff at the Point this winter, there may not be much money available in that fund.

Undoubtedly the TVL could go in a big way if — and its a big if — Trenton Carm's, Point Anne, Madoc. Picton, Belleville and a strengthened RCAF club entered.

As for the city Commercial ,it enjoyed a fine year in '67 and will likely be better than ever this summer. If Point Anne has a club and does not find the TVL situation to its liking, the Cementmen may ask to rejoin the Commercial. Would this league accept them back or will it bar TVL players for a year or two as it has B. and D. players in the past?

If the Commercial opens up, as it likely will if senior ball continues to slip here, it would be wise to make sure the cream of the senior players is evenly distributed to maintain the balance and rivilary on which the league thrives.

The Departmental will probably have five or six entries again but pitching seems to be the problem here. Many plants or shops can field teams but few have a pitcher who does not hurl in a higher league, thus making him ineligible.

Last summer, two clubs were permitted to use good, young pitchers from the city midgets. It kept both teams playing but amounted to bending the rules in order to keep the league operating. This year the rules will have to be changed one way or the other to assure equality for all.

Dennis Gets Pair

Bobby The Other

Slapping Hulls Shade Rangers 3-2

By DAVID MILLER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

What has four legs, four arms, two hockey sticks and two slapshots?

Answer: Dennis and Bobby Hull. The brother-act from Point Anne, Ont., lifted Chicago Black Hawks to a 3-2 victory over New York Rangers Wednesday night and into second place in the National Hockey League's Eastern Division.

Dennis, the younger, scored twice—both on slapshots from 45 feet, to bring his season total to 12. Bobby scored his 35th goal of the year.

Victim of the Hull barrage was goaltender Don Simmons, who recently joined the Rangers from Buffalo of the American Hockey League.

In other action Wednesday night, St. Louis Blues blasted Pittsburgh Penguins 9-4 and Minnesota North Stars defeated Los Angeles Kings 6-1 in two Western Division games.

The results left Montreal Canadiens first in the East with 57 points followed by Chicago with 56, Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs 54 each, New York 52 and Detroit Red Wings 46.

DENNIS HULL

Philadelphia Flyers still hold first in the West, but Minnesota's victory pushed the North Stars a little closer to the top. They now have 47 points, two fewer than the Flyers. Los Angeles and St. Louis have 44 each followed by Pittsburgh with 41 and Oakland Seals with 30.

Tonight, New York will get a chance to snap the Canadiens' unbeaten streak at 10 when they invade the Forum in one of five games.

Elsewhere, Chicago is at Boston, Los Angeles at Detroit, Oakland travels to Philadelphia and St. Louis visits Pittsburgh.

In New York Wednesday, Phil Goyette and Don Marshall scored for the Rangers who trailed throughout the game.

Chicago was nursing a 2-1 lead midway in the third period when Dennis flashed down the left side and unloaded a rising shot that caught the far corner of the nets behind Simmons.

Just 41 seconds after the goal, Goyette deflected Rod Seiling's pass through goalie Dave Dryden's legs to close the scoring.

Bobby's goal broke a 1-1 tie in the second period and he scored while New York's Arnie Brown was serving a tripping penalty—the only Ranger infraction in the game.

The Kings were bombed by Minnesota, but they can take some consolation in finally cracking the North Stars' goalie Cesare Maniago.

DON MARSHALL

Up until the 12:45 mark of the second period, Maniago had held the Kings scoreless for 223 minutes and two seconds in a string of five games which included three consecutive shutouts.

Howie Hughes scored in the second period against Maniago—the first Los Angeles goal against the Stars since Ted Irvine scored at 10:27 of the third period of a 2-2 tie Nov. 4.

Ray Cullen, Minnesota's leading scorer with 21 goals, led the North Stars with two goals while Wayne Connelly, Mike McMahon, Jean-Paul Parise and Bill Goldsworthy got one apiece.

Bill McCreary and Tim Ecclestone each scored two goals for the Blues in St. Louis in a game that was marked by a total of 54 minutes in penalties, including two misconducts and two fighting majors.

It was the highest goal production for the Blues in their brief history. Red Berenson, Frank Ste. Marseille, Gary Sabourin, Don McKenney and Gerry Melnyk each got one for St. Louis.

Paul Andrea, George Konik, Val Fonteyne and Keith McCreary scored for Pittsburgh.

KC Blues Shutout Omaha 7-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Tom Caley recorded his first shutout of the season Wednesday night as Kansas City Blues defeated Omaha Knights 7-0 in a Central Hockey League game.

In other contests, Dallas Black Hawks defeated Memphis South Stars 3-2 and Oklahoma City Blazers edged Houston Appolos 5-4.

Caley stopped 30 shots for his shutout. Norm Beaudin scored two goals and was given credit for an assist to lead Kansas City to victory. Other Blues scorers were Wayne Rivers, Gary Veneruzzo, Doug Harvey, Sheldon Kannegiesser and Max Mestinsek.

Hope Golf Classic

Knudson Three Strokes Off Pace

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The Old Guard, so to speak, was in at least temporary control today as Bob Rosburg, 41, and long Bill Collins, 39, led the way into the second round of the $122,000 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

Rosburg whose last tournament triumph was in the 1961 Bing Crosby National, and Collins, whose last big one was the 1962 Buck Open, fired opening rounds of 67, five strokes under par, and were one ahead of their nearest rival, Lee Trevino.

Toronto's George Knudson had a 70 and was just three strokes off the pace along with 11 others, including Billy Casper. Arnold Palmer, the favorite, had a 72.

Collins won top money of $2,970 in the pro-amateur phase of the Hope last year. But both he and Rosburg finished out of the money in individual scoring.

The top three players found the Indian Wells course to their liking, but from now on out the going may be rougher. Most of the pros rank Indian Wells as the easiest of the four in action.

Par is 36-36—72 on all the club tests—Eldora, Bermuda Dunes, La Quinta and Indian Wells.

Tom Neiporte, last year's winner, shot a first-round 76 at La Quinta. A year ago Neiporte started out with an identical 76 and followed with 68-68-68-69 for 349.

Thirty-nine of the 136 pros broke par in the first round.

Casper, who won the Los Angeles Open last Sunday, observed jovially: "I guess I'm a Thursday starter." Ordinarily tournaments begin on a Thursday.

Suffers Eye Injury

Minnie Menard Hurt

Minnie Menard, top scorer of the Belleville Mo-Hawks, suffered a severe eye injury last night in an exhibition game with the intermediate Napanee Pringles.

The accident occurred in the third period.

Menard raced in to check a Napanee player who took a slapshot to ice the puck.

The stick came up and caught Menard around the eye.

Coach Floyd Crawford said this morning the injury was purely accidental.

Menard was rushed to the Napanee hospital immediately following the accident and after preliminary examination was brought to the Belleville General.

The actual extent of the injury was not known at this time. Menard underwent a special examination by an eye specialist this morning.

Minnie is one of the few twenty-goal scorers in the OHA Senior "A" League. He has had two hat-tricks this season, and has been one of the factors in the Mo-Hawks' long string of home victories.

The Mo-Hawks had no trouble defeating the Pringles, the score being 12-5.

San Diego Eyes Playoffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Western Hockey League's two top clubs solidified their places in the standings Wednesday night while San Diego Gulls strengthened their playoff hopes with a 6-3 victory over Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League.

League-leading Portland Buckaroos edged Phoenix Roadrunners 3-2 at Portland while Seattle Totems remained two points behind with a 6-2 win over the fourth-place Canucks at Vancouver.

The Gulls took over third place, one point ahead of Vancouver and two up on Phoenix.

Five Rinks Unbeaten

QUEBEC (CP) Five rinks from Ontario, Quebec and Wisconsin emerged undefeated Wednesday after the second round of curling for the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy, top prize at the annual Quebec international bonspiel.

Joe O'Brien, a prize winner last year, skipped his rink from the Ottawa Curling Club to a 7-3 win over Jim Shaw's Burlington, Ont. squad.

The Elora, Ont., foursome directed by Bob McEnery edged an Outremont, Que., rink skipped by veteran curler Carl Ott, 7-6.

The Milwaukee, Wis., rink of Ken Moebius, one of nine United States squads entered in the bonspiel, played a draw game as they beat Mac White's foursome from Hamilton 11-7.

Georges Abraham did the same as he skipped his Port Alfred, Que., contingent to a 13-6 victory over Carl Hussey's Cornwall rink.

Eric Fowler's Otterburn Heights rink, the other undefeated Quebec entry, beat Neil Speicher's Toronto squad 9-6.

NHL Scoring

Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull were the only players to make any mileage in the National Hockey League scoring race Wednesday night as only two of the established Eastern Division teams played.

Mikita picked up an assist for Chicago Black Hawks in their 3-2 victory over New York Rangers and maintained first place in the race. Mikita has 55 points on 27 goals and 28 assists.

Junior A All-Stars

West Rallies, Nips East

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The West staged a five-goal comeback Wednesday to edge the East 5-4 in the annual all-star game of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series before 2,119 fans.

Tom Webster of Niagara Falls Flyers fired the winning goal early in the third period. After taking a quick 4-0 first period lead, the East, outshot 40-25, was never in the game.

All five goals were scored on Larry Doyle, goalie for Ottawa 67s, who played 10 minutes of the second period and five minutes of the third.

Other scorers for the West were Ed Hatoum of Hamilton Red Wings, Skeeter Teal of St. Catharines Black Hawks and Don Tannahill and Steve Atkinson, both of the Foyers.

Eastern marksmen were Jim Krulicki of Kitchener Rangers, Paul Lessard of Montreal Canadiens and Brad Park and Tom Martin of Toronto Marlboros.

Gary Edwards, the Marlies' goalie, played 45 minutes without giving up a goal, turning aside 26 shots. He started the game and took over again from Doyle in the third period.

Could Split Olympics

GRENOBLE, France (Reuters)—A South African anti-segregation committee Wednesday warned that the re-admission of South Africa to the Olympic Games in Mexico City this summer could split the Olympic movement.

The warning came from the South African Non-racial Open Committee after an International Olympic Committee report indicated it favored South African participation in the 1968 Games.

The IOC excluded South Africa from the 1964 Tokyo Games because of its policy of apartheid in sports.

"If South Africa takes part in the Mexico Games, it can only be after racial discrimination has been removed," the South African Non-racial Committee chairman, Dennis Brutus, said in a statement issued here.

POTSDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Clarkson College scored at will Wednesday night and overwhelmed Queen's University of Kingston 14-4, in a college hockey game. MONTREAL (CP) — Wayne Freitag scored five goals to spark Canada's Eastern national team to an 11-2 victory over a Montreal junior all-star team in an exhibition hockey game Wednesday night. Bob Aube contributed two goals to the Nationals' attack and Bob Goring, Derek Holmes, Bob Berry and Ken Laidlaw added one each to complete the rout.

Body Says Nancy's Amateur Status OK

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Ski Association has dismissed reports questioning the amateur status of Canada's world champion skier, Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C.

Owen Carter of Toronto, association treasurer, said Wednesday night Nancy is eligible for the 1968 Winter Olympics at Grenoble, France, because she rejected a $5,000 scholarship disputed by an official of the International Olympic Committee.

"It's well known and documented that she turned down the scholarship because it was based on her athletic ability and not on her scholastic ability."

Carter was commenting on statements earlier Wednesday by Col. John Westerhoff, secretary-general of the IOC, that the national Olympic committees of Canada, France and Austria were asked to verify declarations of amateurism from some of their members.

In Canada's case, it was Nancy and Westerhoff said his inquiry concerned a $5,000 scholarship she received solely because of her sport achievements.

Westerhoff told a French sports newspaper that the status of French skiers Jean-Claude Killy and Marielle Goitschel, Austria's figure-skating champion Emmerich Danzer and the U.S. swimming team, also were in dispute.

Carter said after Nancy's triumph in the World Cup competition last year, residents of Rossland offered her the scholarship.

Nancy, a student at Notre Dame University at Nelson, B.C., wrote to the IOC to ask how the scholarship would affect her amateur status, said Carter.

"She made specific inquiries and then turned down the scholarship."

Westerhoff said he raises questions about the Canadian skier in a confidential report to the IOC last Dec. 16. He said the scholarship would violate Olympic rules but admitted the Canadian Olympic committee later advised him that Nancy had returned the scholarship.

Elaine Breaks NZ Records

MORRINSVILLE, N.Z. (CP-Reuters) — Canada's Elaine Tanner cracked two New Zealand swimming records Wednesday as a 10-member Canadian swimming team opened a New Zealand tour.

The tour is being billed as the highlight of the New Zealand swimming season and the records by the Winnipeg swimmer in the 110-yard backstroke and 220-yard individual medley got the Canadians off to a flying start.

Miss Tanner's performance of two minutes, 34.4 seconds in the medley was almost two seconds better than the old time of two 36.3 seconds established by Judy Humbager of the United States.

Another Canadian to set a New Zealand record was Jeanne Warren of Vancouver who swam the 220-yard butterfly in two minutes, 34 7 seconds.

Canadians who placed in the top three in events included Marilyn Corson of Parry Sound, Ont., third in the women's 220-yard individual medley. Angela Coughlin of Toronto and Sandra Dowler of London, Ont., second and third respectively in the women's 220-yard freestyle won by T. Shipston of New Zealand in two minutes, 22 seconds.

Spurs Blank Manchester

LONDON (Reuters) — A goal by Scottish international Jim Robertson in the 13th minute of extra time gave the cup defender, Tottenham Hotspur, a 1-0 victory over the league champion, Manchester United, in an explosive English Football Association Cup third-round reply Wednesday night.

The match flared up in the 55th minute when Tottenham's Irish Republic fullback, Joe Kinnear, and Manchester United's England under-23 international, Brian Kidd, were sent off after an exchange of blows.

A near-capacity crowd of 57,200 watched the match.

The two clubs also meet in a league game Saturday.

Tottenham, which now meets Preston North End, scored from a corner kick by Jimmy Greaves. Welsh international Mike England headed the kick on to the cross-bar and Robertson was on the spot to score from the rebound.

Third Division Reading's hopes of cup glory were rudely shattered in their reply against Manchester City. The First Division club overwhelmed Reading 7-0.

Manchester City, leading 2-0 at halftime, turned on its full scoring power after the interval to completely riddle the Reading defence.

Centre-forward Mike Summerbee scored three goals and other goals came from George Heslop, Colin Bell, Tony Coleman and Neil Young.

Another Third Division side to be eliminated was Colchester United. It never recovered from West Bromwich Albion's three-goal first-half display and lost 4-0.

de Gaulle To Open Olympics

GRENOBLE, France (AP) — Gen. Charles de Gaulle may appear aloof and stern to most Americans but he has one thing in common with most Yanks, a French official disclosed today.

"You can hardly tear him away from the television set when a good game or sports event is on," said Michel Pericard, technical adviser for the Winter Olympic Games, opening here Tuesday.

"He's by far the most sports-minded of all French presidents. He loves a good sporting event. He is the only president to award the Legion of Merit to an athlete—figure skater Alain Calmat, among others.

"Sometimes after a ministerial meeting, the general will sit around for hours and discuss some sports contest or controversy with his aides."

So it is pleasure as well as state duty which is bringing the general to Grenoble next week for the official opening of the Games and later—Feb. 14—for the men's giant slalom ski race.

De Gaulle will make a six-hour trip by special train from Paris Feb. 5.

On the second visit, de Gaulle will stay at the Chateau de Vizelle, a stone edifice of the 17th century which once belonged to the Duke of Lesdiguieres and traditionally—before de Gaulle—was a summer holiday place for French presidents.

Helmet Wear Optional

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series announced Wednesday that protective helmets for players will remain optional for all teams.

"Every club in the league has enough helmets for every player and it is up to them," the association said in a statement following a closed meeting.

"We are not making them mandatory."

The meeting was held in conjunction with the annual all-star game won by the West 5-4 over the East.

Three OHA Jr. A teams, Peterborough Petes, Toronto Marlboros and Niagara Falls Flyers, ordered their players to wear the helmets following the death of Bill Masterton of Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League.

Czechs Shade Nats

PRAGUE (AP) — The Czechoslovak national hockey team defeated Canada's team 2-1 in a pre-Olympic Games match here Wednesday.

The teams were scoreless through two periods before the Czechs moved ahead 2-0 on goals in the fifth and seventh minutes.

Canada's only goal was scored by Garry Dineen.

The Czech news agency CTK said in its report that the Canadians demonstrated they were well prepared for the Olympics and showed more teamwork and less individual action than in previous years.

The five-year-old gelding, owned by Jack and Jean Fenton of Chesley, Ont., and driven by Ron Feagan, went the mile in 2:07 3-5 and returned $6.80, $3.20 and $2.70.

The victory was the second of the afternoon for Feagan, who earlier brought Don McKlyo into the winner's circle in the sixth.

Victories for C. J. R. in the first and Wee Joanie in the second produced a daily double of $87.60.

Doru followed Easy Ed to the wire in the fifth for a quinella return of $23.30 while the seventh-race quinella of $26.10 resulted from the efforts of Libby's Girl and Linda Creed.

Pro Grid Leagues' College Draft Confusin' But Amusin'

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a certain giddiness that overtakes pro football people after more than 22 hours spread over two days of drafting the nation's top collegiate players.

The chuckles came in bunches as representatives of the National and American Leagues completed their 17 rounds of drafting Wednesday night.

There was Minnesota scoring a thigh-slapper by picking Larry Kuharich, a defensive back from Boston College, in the 16th round. If that name is familiar, it's because Larry's father, Joe, is the general manager-coach of the rival Philadelphia Eagles.

Cincinnati, utilizing one of its 42 choices, picked Miami's Joe Mira, described as the little brother of George, the San Francisco quarterback. But, of course, lil' Joe, a flanker, stands 6-foot and weighs 185 pounds, somewhat bigger than brother George.

New York Giants selected Ken Parker of Fordham University as a defensive back on the 16th go-round.

Fordham dropped varsity football 13 years ago but went back to the sport on a club level a few years back. Parker is the first player to be drafted since the school resumed football.

Dallas Cowboys won the distance championship for a pick, selecting tackle Larry Cole of Hawaii in the 16th round.

There was a late-round squabble when Philadelphia announced the selection of defensive back Jim Scott from Arizona in the 17th round and Cincinnati howled that he was the same player the Bengals had picked in the 11th round as Wally Scott.

A quick check revealed that Jim and Wally were one and the same so the Eagles substituted Joe Forzani, a Utah State linebacker, for the final choice.

Earlier, Buffalo had created a fuss when it announced the selection of Memphis State tackle Chuck De Vleigher in the 13th round, then hurriedly withdrew the pick and substituted Dan Darragh, a William and Mary quarterback.

The Bills had learned, almost as soon as they originally announced De Vliegher's choice, that he had a bad knee and was a medical question mark.

When they came right back with him in the next round, one wag remarked: "He must have had an operation between phone calls."

Most of the big names were gone when the teams swung into the final 12 rounds of drafting Tuesday.

Heisman Trophy winner Gary Beban of UCLA had been plucked in the second round by Los Angeles after linemen headed by Southern California's Ron Yary and Tennessee's Bob Johnson had dominated the early selections. Minnesota made Yary the No. 1 choice and Cincinnati chose Johnson right after Vikings opened the draft Monday.

Midgets Tie, Novices Win

The Richard Ellis midgets tied Trenton 2-2 in EOMHA action last night.

In an exhibition tilt the Food City novice team edged Brighton by a 3-2 score.

D. Campbell scored to give Trenton a first period 1-0 lead. The second period was scoreless.

Trenton's Howie put his club two up early in the final frame but the Ellis youngsters came back with goals from D. McCormack and Thompson to knot the count.

Mike Meeker, Eric Powell and Bobby Crawford scored the Food City novice goals with assists from Powell and Eddie Grills (2).

Perry Panks and Glen Forbes with an assist from David Hillborn counted for Brighton.

BCI Hosts Cage Tourney Saturday

This Saturday, beginning at 8.30 a.m., the BCI Boys' Athletic Society will host its third annual Bantam Basketball Tournament.

Two separate tournaments are being held to decide a champion, with teams from Kingston, Cobourg, Newcastle, Oshawa, Whitby, Brighton, Peterborough and Belleville, taking part in the games.

The Belleville schools participating are BCI, Centennial, MSS, QSS, and Nicholson.

Petes Defeat Juniors

The Belleville Junior "B's" fell to the Peterborough Don Byes 9-1 in Peterborough last night.

The home team fired three goals in each period en route to their victory, while the Belleville club was able to muster only one goal, and that in the last period.

Terry Blewett, Bill Craigs and Gary Crowe scored in the first period for the Don Byes, as they outshot Belleville 17-11.

Ron Chittick scored twice in the second for Peterborough, and Blewett counted his second goal to stretch the lead.

In the third period, Rick Rosebush scored the only Belleville goal, assisted by Eric Maher. Meanwhile, Blewett scored again for the Don Byes, and Jim Grady and Al Houston added goals to further an already lopsided cause.

Overall, the Don Byes outshot Belleville 59-24, with an amazing 22-5 margin in the final period. Only seven penalties were handed out, with the home team getting five.

COMBAT INSECTS

BCI Bantams Pull Upset

The BCI juniors defeated Centennial at BCI last night as expected, but the BCI bantams pulled out a 39-37 upset victory over Centennial, a contender for the Bay of Quinte title in their division.

Red Townsend's junior Collegians have lost just one game this season, an upset by Napanee, and they were not about to stage a repeat performance of that defeat as they rolled to a 68-55 victory.

Dave Cass led BCI with an 18-point scoring total, while Dave Wright and Brent Gallupe added 13 points apiece to the cause. For Coach Bruce Faulds' Centennial squad, Frank Johnston was high scorer with 17 points, while John Koch had 14 and Larry Wannamaker 13 points.

Coach Doug Irvine's Centennial bantams upet Quinte last week to take a slight lead in the bantam division race. But Dave Talbot's BCI team, which is out of the race, came up with its finest effort of the season for the win.

Jamie Cass and Geoff Morton paced the Collegians' scoring effort with 11 points apiece, while Rob Woodley and Allan Gallupe had 9 and 8 points respectively.

John Lanning was Centennial's high scorer with 14 points. Victor Rabel added 8 points in a losing cause.

The following are the results of Wednesday, Jan. 31 Shuffleboard League play:

The Mohawks nipped the Leafs 3-2, as R. Richardson scored a pair of goals for the winners and D. Duffy got another. McKinney and Hannah scored for the losers.

One lopsided score resulted in Tyke play, as the Rangers clobbered the Barons 9-2, led by J. McSherry's five-goal total. S. McCally, D. Rushlow, M. Potts and T. Morgan got the other Ranger tallies. P. Nuttall and R. McBrian scored for the Barons.

Midget play produced a one-sided win as the Wings dumped the Canadiens 6-2. S. Muldoon, D. Murray, K. Hunter, A. Wilson, T. Lynch and G. Salmon got the Wing goals, while Tracey and Parks scored for the Canadiens.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

I am often asked, "Isn't it better to have many brokers trying to sell your property?" Surprisingly, the answer is no!

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: It stands to reason that several people trying to sell the same product should yield the best results. Yet, my wife says I am wrong.

Our quarrel is about our house. I will be retiring in three months. At that time, we will put our house on the market.

To get the best price, I want to list the property with every broker in the neighborhood. Makes sense, doesn't it?

I've always respected your opinions, Mr. Meltzer, because you are not afraid to give an answer, even if it hurts.—Mr. O. A.

ANSWER: I'm a bit embarrassed, because I must tell an old admirer he is wrong. If he lists his property with every broker in the neighborhood, he will get almost no action and probably an unsatisfactory price besides. He will find the successful, prominent, and active brokers will not even accept his open listing.

It costs a broker money to put a listing on his books, advertise it, have his salesmen service it, and take clients through a property. Accordingly an active broker, in turn, demands some form of exclusive listing before he will undertake a selling campaign.

An inactive broker, one just starting out, or one not too successful are the ones normally willing to sell on an open listing.

Accordingly, in spite of what may appear to be logical, the best price and the most action is obtained by listing a property with one active, reputable broker.

In many areas, a multiple-listing bureau provides the best method for selling a residential property. Before a broker will make a property available to such a service, he insists on an exclusive right-to-sell listing. With an open listing, the broker would have no protection, and he could not make the property available to the many brokers participating in a multiple-listing bureau.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: A salesman has just made me an unusual proposition. I buy a lot for $1,000 and receive one free. As I see it, I'm getting $2,000 worth of land for half price. Do you agree? — Mr. N. D.

ANSWER: You describe one of the classical land-promotion schemes where the gullible soon learn there is more plotting than plots.

I am sure of one thing, you are not getting something for nothing. Based upon my experience in similar type situations, I would venture that the market value of the two lots is about 25 per cent of the price you are being asked to pay — it could be as low as 10 per cent, but seldom approaches 50 per cent.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: What do you do if you suddenly discover you've been cheated? I have the proof.

I signed an agreement of sale to buy at $20,000, mainly because the broker told me the house was a bargain.

After signing, I visited the tax office and found the house was assessed for only $5,000. In bold type in the tax office is a notice which states, "It is a policy of this township to assess properties at 50 per cent of value."

The property I bought, therefore, is worth only $10,000. Do I have the basis for a lawsuit for misrepresentation against the broker? — Mr. S.

ANSWER: Although some of my assessor friends may take offence at this statement, I find that often assessments bear little relationship to value. I am sure that the property you bought represents such a situation. If you still have a doubt, spend about $50 and engage the services of a professional appriaser.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have followed your column for two years, and now I'm ready to make my first real estate investment. I want to buy a vacant lot next to my shop, but I don't know what to pay for it.

The butcher on the corner tells me he bought a similar parcel in the block for about $4,000 (he won't give me the exact figure.) The baker on the opposite corner tells me I wouldn't go wrong if I paid $5,000. It's all very confusing! Whom shall I ask? — Mr. I. M.

ANSWER: What about the candlestick maker?

I apologize for my sarcasm, but I'm trying to tell you that cobblers are authorities on lasts, divorcees on men, but when it comes to real estate values, I think you will find appraisers are best. For a$25 to $50 fee you should be able to receive a professional opinion as to the value of the lot.

• • •

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Five Inducted As Kiwanis Club Members

PICTON (Staff)—At the regular meeting of Picton Kiwanis Club last night, Carl P. Reid, charter president of the club and past Lieut-Governor for the district inducted five new members to the club.

Outlining the aim and principles of Kiwanis, Mr. Reid then proceeded with the actual installation. This year a new twist was added using a wooden arch which is assembled in stages during the ceremony. Following the building of the arch and in line with the tradition of the Kiwanis motto "We Build" the members of the club shook hands with the newly inducted members through the archway.

The rector expressed appreciation to the lay readers, Ernest Leaver, and R. E. Dale of Napanee; to the retiring warden, Harold Topping; to Charles Knight, the organist; and to Mrs. Charles Gray, retiring as treasurer after three years of service.

WALLBRIDGE — Wallbridge LOL held its euchre and dance Friday night.

OFA President Predicts Many Changes for 1968

NAPANEE — The farmers of Ontario will need courage to cope with the changes that are ahead of them in 1968, newly-elected president of the Federation of Agriculture for Lennox and Addington Roy Rogers told the annual meeting last week.

Mr. Rogers, a progressive dairy farmer of R.R. 4, Odessa was speaking of the single farm organization for which plans are now being discussed at the provincial level. He urged the farmers of this county to express their views on the subject.

The two present strong organizations are the Federation of Agriculture, and the Ontario Farmers' Union. Both are working for the betterment of the farmer, but in some respects their views and their methods are so divergent that it will be difficult for them to find a common ground and form the one strong organization which is necessary.

The group agreed, later to invite each of the three county locals of the Ontario Farmers' Union to send two delegates as representatives on the Federation. It was pointed out that this was according to the constitution.

Mr. Rogers succeeds Barton MacLean, president for two years. Grant Huycke of R.R. 2, Bath was elected vice-president and Hank Reinink of R.R. 3, Moscow is second vice-president. Secretary-treasurer is again Mrs. Harry Edgar. Clarence Milligan of Napanee was named county member to the board of the OFA.

To Your Good Health

Stroke Often Leaves Disability

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a stroke four years ago and was in a coma for six weeks. My whole left side was paralyzed and my eye crossed.

Now everything is O.K. except my left leg. My foot wants to turn over when I walk. I can do my housework and get around indoors but cannot walk outside unless I pick a lawn chair or something for balance. Is there something to do about this? — Mrs. E. S.

You are fortunate to have recovered so well after having been in a coma for so long.

There is frequently some remaining disability after a stroke, usually a weakness of a limb. In a case like yours, a brace may be necessary to support your foot, ankle or knee, or a special shoe may be needed.

An orthopedist or physiotherapist can evaluate your condition and make appropriate recommendations — one case is sufficiently different from another that I can make no specific suggestions that would be helpful. Hence I recommend that you see one of the above specialists.

I will add, however, that you are very wise in keeping as active as you do. This maintains muscle tone and prevents joints from stiffening. The consequences of a stroke are always much worse if a patient is not encouraged to remain as active as his condition will permit — or unless the patient is wise enough to do so without urging.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Two years ago I had a general checkup and was told I have gall stones. From then on I have watched my diet and have had only a few mild attacks. I am 55.

What is your opinion, to hold to my diet or choose the surgical way? — M. Q.

What does your doctor advise? His counsel should take top priority. The "few mild attacks" may be significant, however, and indicate that, even with diet, attacks will occur. They may not all be mild. If you will read my booklet, "You and Your Gall Bladder," which you can obtain by sending 25 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Molner in care of this paper you will find my reasons for preferring surgery once you know you have gall bladder trouble and why it is wiser not to postpone it too long.

Dear Dr. Molner: One nipple looks as though it had something caked on the tip of it. I had a baby about a year ago so I wonder if it could be milk caked on it.

I have wanted to go to the doctor but am embarrassed because it looks as though I'm not clean. Could you suggest something to take it off? — Mrs. C. J.

Dermatitis — a mild skin infection — can produce such an appearance, and it should be checked. If it were milk, it would easily wash off.

There are other nipple and breast disorders which also can appear crusty or scaly at first. You should not be embarrassed at going to your doctor; he has seen this sort of thing before. Anyway, if the rest of you is clean, he will have ample evidence that the nipple needs his attention.

• • •

Note to Mrs. C. H.: It is possible for a cystocele repair to have some effect on the vaginal size, but this can be corrected. Proper treatment would depend on the circumstances, and all I can do is suggest that you return to the surgeon who performed the operation, or to see another gynecologist.

Amnesty International States Greek Prisoners Are Tortured

LONDON (Reuters) — Amnesty International reported Wednesday that prisoners of the Greek military regime undergo torture such as beating, burning, electric shock and extraction of finger and toe nails.

Other prisoners are made to listen to the screams until they collapse with nervous breakdowns, said a report issued by Amnesty on the latest of its investigations into the plight of Greek political prisoners.

Amnesty sent a delegation to Greece at the end of December. The team included American lawyer James Becket, who was reported to have spent four weeks taking statements from released prisoners and relatives of those still under arrest.

Amnesty was formed in London in 1961 to aid political prisoners. It is a non-partisan organization working to secure the release of nearly 2,000 "prisoners of conscience"—who do not advocate violence—in 63 countries.

The report estimated that 2,777 persons were still under political arrest in Greece. It said that on the basis of first-hand evidence "the delegation can objectively state that torture is deliberately and officially used."

Most of the torture is carried out by the security and military police, the report stated. It said standard procedure for interrogation or intimidation was to flog the soles of a prisoner's feet and then make him race around the room.

More advanced tortures on women and men were said to include infliction of pain on sexual organs, beating with sandbags or knotted wire, jumping on a prisoner's stomach, tearing out hair, burning flesh, rubbing pepper or soap in the eyes and use of electric shock.

The report said one man testified that prisoners were beaten at regular intervals for up to five days by teams of four to six men applying boots, fists, sticks and planks. One account said one man had to run a gauntlet and ended up with his eye knocked out.

Life Down-under Is Not All Roses

LONDON (CP) — Life is not so hot after all in the down-under sun, say some disillusioned Britons.

But 24,172 of their fellow countrymen, apparently chilled by austerity at home, have applied in the last eight weeks for officially-aided passages to the controversial country in question—Australia.

This figure is 27-per-cent higher than the level registered in the same period a year ago.

Shortly after the Jan. 16 announcement of the British government's post-devaluation cuts in spending, Canadian officials said any sudden jump in emigration traffic bound for Canada would take some time to show itself. And up to that point, no new rush had become evident.

Australian officials announced their increased figures Wednesday as the disillusioned moans were being noted by reporters at London's Victoria Station.

There, 32 Britons were arriving after making the long boat trip back from Australia, where they had gone as emigrants.

Work opportunities, housing and even the renowned Australian heat came in for some hard slaps. One returnee dismissed the heat- pined after by many in dank Britain—as mere humidity.

Australians say such people usually form a minority of the migrant flow and would be inclined to groan in any case, regardless of their living place.

One of the returned Britons, a machinist, said the money he earned in Australia "went nowhere" because of expenses.

U.S. Dollars Finance French

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

Could any national policy be more absurd and self-defeating than our pouring billions of dollars into Vietnam, many of which find their way through French investors to Paris, where de Gaulle uses them to demand gold from the U.S.?

• • •

If LSD and such "mind-expanding" drugs were brought under medical control, and prescribed for depressions of the elderly, they would immediately cease to appeal to the young; and, in point of psychological fact, it is the old who can benefit most from "escaping reality," while the young need to immerse themselves even more in the real world.

The differences between a mere pedant and a true educator is that the pedant merely teaches his pupils, while the educator learns just as much (in a different way) from them as he teaches.

Speaking of the educational process, I have long felt that taking copious notes at a lecture is simply an elevated form of not listening; it is a way of avoiding attention by means of self-distraction.

While it is tritely true that every human being wants to love and to be loved, it is equally true that an excessive need to be loved makes it nearly impossible to love freely and fully.

It's ironic, but just, that the "pragmatism" of John Kennedy in accepting Lyndon Johnson as his running-mate in 1960 has resulted in the diminution of Bob and Ted Kennedy's influence, rather than otherwise — which shows how foolish it is to be "pragmatic" in the face of history's vast imponderables.

The concept of a personal, physical immortality seems to be more of an impious than a religious thought, a way by which we can put ourselves on a footing with God if we but obey what we believe to be divine laws; it's hard for me to conceive that the universe is arranged in such a cozy fashion, much as I might like to.

Whatever else may be said against television as a medium, it is indisputably the greatest of devices for bringing the essence of a political candidate right into the home, so that the perceptive viewer can observe the cold and beady eye, the thin lip, the slurred vowel, the insincerity, stupidity, or venality of the man himself.

Picton Youth Honored For Rescue From Well

NEW YORK (CP)-Acts of heroism involving three Canadian rescuers and an American who saved a Canadian are among those cited by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

The commission has awarded bronze medals and $750 each to Gerald S. Cornell, 39, Sifton, Man.; Joseph H. G. Allison, 19, Picton, Ont., and Howard F. Hammons, 38, Modesto, Calif. William Gordon Waite, 10, of Pouce Coupe, B.C., has been awarded a bronze medal and $500.

Cornell saved three young girls from drowning in Lake Dauphin at Sifton Aug. 8, 1965, after they had been caught by an undercurrent in water 10 feet deep. Cornell, who had plunged fully clothed into the lake, had to swim back to shore in an upright position, using only his legs. He held Linda J. Bazylewski, 12, and Janice M. Polloway, 10, in his arms, with Katherine L. Polloway, 11, clinging to him from behind.

Allison, a student, helped to save Lyle C. Mitchell, 24, a farmer, from suffocating at the bottom of a well at Picton July 30, 1966. Allison entered the well three times to tie a rope around Mitchell.

Waite saved nine-year-old John A. van Angeren from drowning in the Pouce Coupe River Aug. 16, 1965.

Hammons saved Marjorie E. Gilberds, 29, of Windsor, Ont., from drowning after she had dropped five feet from a sea wall into the Detroit River Oct. 25, 1966. Hammons reached her in cold 15-foot-deep water 30 feet from shore.

Beat Group Disregards Drug Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has complained of a "complete disregard for the law concerning drugs" by the beat generation. But it says there is no serious addiction problem among juveniles.

The annual report of RCMP Commissioner M. F. A. Lindsay, tavled in the Commons Wednesday by Solicitor-General Pennell, showed a 71.8-per-cent increase in offences under the Narcotics Control Act during the 1966-67 fiscal year ended last March 31.

This compared with a 14.9-per-cent increase in investigations of Criminal Code offences, to 170,746 from 148,670 the previous year.

Veecrop Tomato — The Horticultural Research Institute at Vineland Station has just released a new tomato called Veecrop. Veecrop is a tomato for processing, market and home garden which is considered to be early to midseason. It matures with Galaxy in season but later than Fireball. Firmness is about the same as Fireball but probably not firm enough for mechanical harvesting. Yield has been superior to Fireball and Galaxy. Like Fireball it has determinate growth habit, cold setting ability and uniform ripening fruit. It is resistant to verticillium wilt.

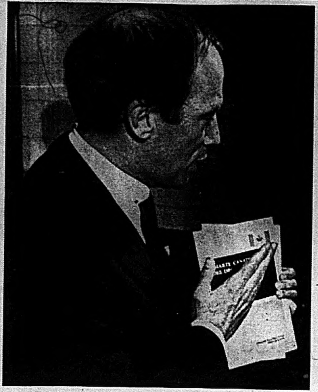
Johnson Would Settle Powers Before Rights



Bill of Rights Tabled

Justice Minister Trudeau holds copy of bill of rights tabled in the Commons Thursday. The new charter defines and would guarantee "inalienable" rights of Canadians. (CP Photo)

Parley to Study Bill of Rights

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson will lay before the federal-provincial Constitutional Conference Monday his government's proposals for gradual implementation of French language and education rights everywhere in Canada.

The proposals, as outlined in a white paper tabled Thursday in the Commons by Justice Minister Trudeau, would not force English-speaking provinces to adopt language and education rights for French-speaking minorities.

Rather, Ottawa would encourage them to agree in principle and then—with all deliberate speed—gradually implement the rights by legislation as the number of French-speaking residents increased.

This unique constitutional proposal, contained in a charter of human rights, would avoid the possibility of veto by any one province and bypass the difficulty of the so-called rule of unanimity of constitutional amendment.

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Trudeau will deal first with the language rights proposed in the charter.

Actually, entrenchment of a bill of rights in the constitution to guarantee language, education, non-discrimination, political and legal rights for all Canadians is the only subject Ottawa is prepared to negotiate on at the conference.

It is willing, however, to listen to the provinces on other subjects on the agenda—other constitutional changes and regional disparities.

Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec said Thursday changes in tax-sharing should come ahead of constitutional changes in the field of human rights.

But both Mr. Pearson and Mr. Trudeau have said if there can be no agreement on something as fundamental as human rights there is little or no hope of constitutional reform in other fields.

No immediate action on a charter of human rights is expected to come out of the three-day conference opening Monday.

Ottawa hopes, however, that a committee of all attorneys-general will be established to continue study of the federal proposals in preparation for another meeting in the summer.

Monday's proceedings will be open. Tuesday's and Wednesday's will be closed except, perhaps, for final statements.

The French language and education rights are the essential features of the charter of human rights, together with the allowance for gradual opting-in by the provinces.

Most other rights mentioned in the charter are taken from former prime minister Diefenbaker's 1960 Canadian Bill of Rights.

The 1960 Bill of Rights is an act of Parliament and applies only in fields of federal jurisdiction. Moreover, it can be repealed or amended like any other parliamentary legislation.

A bill of rights as proposed now would be embedded in the constitution and would thus be far more difficult, if not almost impossible, to repeal or amend.

One proposal in the Bill of Rights would declare inadmissible in court evidence obtained from an accused person not represented by counsel.

Bennett May Balk At Move

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia has warned the federal government he will never agree to incorporation of the Canadian charter of human rights into the constitution if it infringes in any way on existing provincial jurisdiction.

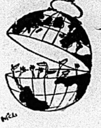
The premier is expected to defend strongly his approach to the constitution and the British North America Act at next week's federal-provincial constitutional conference in Ottawa.

Mr. Bennett suspects that Ottawa might use the human rights charter, outlined in the Commons Thursday, as a smokescreen to invade areas reserved for the provinces under the terms of the BNA Act.

The charter is expected to be a major topic at the conference, which starts Friday and is expected to last three to five days. The bill outlines language, education and egalitarian rights.

Some constitutional experts say that if the document affects areas of provincial jurisdiction, it would require unanimous ratification by the provinces to become law.

Premier Bennett, in remarks made prior to tabling of the charter in the Commons, said he will never agree to it becoming part of the Canadian constitution unless it is restricted to matters of federal jurisdiction outlined in the BNA Act.



The other half.

Hopes Slim --Dief

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker wished the government well with its Bill of Rights Thursday but added there is little hope the provinces will agree to it.

The former Conservative leader told an interviewer that as the father of the Bill of Rights passed by Parliament in 1960, he would be "very happy" to see the Liberal proposal enshrined in the constitution.

"But I think the high hopes that this will be achieved have an ingredient of political bravado," he said.

He noted it was impossible to put his Bill of Rights into the constitution because the provinces were unwilling to give up any of their jurisdiction over property and civil rights.

"I see no change in that viewpoint," he said. The provinces remained jealous of their rights under the constitution. They wanted to add to their powers, not subtract from them.

He labelled next week's federal-provincial meeting to discuss the charter a "pseudo-constitutional conference" which would not achieve constitutional change.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Warm, wet weather covering southern Ontario is expected to leave the region as Northern Ontario's sub-zero readings work their way gradually south tonight. Although colder air will bring an end to the rain, it is also expected to freeze areas of water and wet snow on the ground, creating slippery conditions.

Quebec Rejects Trudeau's Plan

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec has dismissed the federal government's proposed approach to constitutional reform as "putting the cart before the horse."

The Quebec government wants such reform to start with the question of division of power and tax revenue between the federal and provincial governments, he said.

The premier thus rejected the federal government's proposal to begin constitutional reform with a constitutional bill of human rights.

The rejection came four days before Mr. Johnson and other provincial premiers are to gather in Ottawa with federal government representatives for a conference on constitutional reform.

The premier was speaking at a news conference at which the Quebec government released a nine-page paper commenting on the proposal of Justice Minister Trudeau for a constitutional bill of human rights which would guarantee, among other things, French language and educational rights in English Canada.

The proposed bill was tabled Thursday in the Commons.

Prime Minister Pearson has said the bill should be the starting point for constitutional reform.

"The vital question is the division of powers between the federal government and the provinces," said Mr. Johnson.

Quebec would suggest to the federal-provincial conference that the human rights proposal be sent to a special committee for study.

Quebec itself planned to look after individual and collective rights by entering a provincial bill of rights in the Quebec constitution. The provincial bill would also safeguard the collective rights of Quebec's English-speaking residents on such subjects as their right to education in the English language.

Chrysler Strike Settled

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The United Auto Workers Union Monday faces General Motors of Canada Ltd. and Ford of Canada in its quest for increased wages and improved conditions.

The union ended an eight-day strike against Chrysler Canada Ltd. Thursday.

The union achieved wage parity with the company's U.S. employees, effective by 1970 at the end of the three-year contract; retroactive increases to Nov. 15, 1967; preservation of a variable cost of living allowance; parity of pensions with U.S. workers; retention of two 10-minute rest periods each shift; 11 paid holidays annually; workers compensated with short week benefits, and salary increases for assemblers of more than 70 cents an hour, to $3.67 hourly by the end of the contract.

U. S. Ready to Talk To Koreans About Ship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States makes ready today for a second bid to recover the USS Pueblo through direct talks with her North Korean captors.

These were the major developments in the Asian crisis:

—The state department announced Thursday U.S. willingness to engage in face-to-face talks with North Korea aimed at gaining return of the Pueblo and her 83-man crew.

The action followed a broadcast hint by North Korea that a settlement might be possible through new talks at Panmunjom, the Korean War truce site.

—President Johnson said U.S. bombing of North Vietnam will continue until the North gives "some better sign" that a halt would not result in stepped-up terrorism and aggression against South Vietnam.

—Military sources at the Pentagon indicated the heat is off, at least for now, on any call-up of army reserve or national guard ground units.

Prison Farm Inmate Moved After Threats

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A prisoner who led authorities to the unmarked graves of three men at Cummins prison farm has been transferred to another prison because of reported threats on his life.

Prison Superintendent Thomas O. Murton said Thursday the "indications of threats" against Reuben Johnson, 59, gave credence to Johnson's story that murdered prisoners were buried on the prison grounds.

Longshoremen Ask Pay Boost

MONTREAL (CP) — The union that bargains for 4,000 longshoremen in Montreal, Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres Thursday submitted demands for substantial wage increases in a new contract.

A spokesman for the International Longshoremen's Association said the union is seeking a wage increase of $1 an hour spread over a two-year contract.

The ILA is also demanding 18 days paid sick leave and pension plan improvements. The union met with management and federal labor conciliator C. E. Poirier.

The spokesman estimated the cost of the wage and paid sick leave demands at $5,000,000 at the end of two years.

North Vietnam Likely to Boost Armed Strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara reported to Congress Thursday North Vietnam is expected to increase sharply its armed strength in South Vietnam in the next few months.

His assessment of the conflict, as well as the whole realm of U.S. security matters, was presented to the Senate armed services committee at a closed session. A censored version was made public.

Viet Cong Losses Soar as Big Offensive Is Slowly Crushed

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese officials said today their forces were crushing the biggest Viet Cong offensive of the war with skyrocketing losses to the guerrillas.

But the Viet Cong were reported in control of much of Hue, the ancient imperial capital, and South Vietnamese dive-bombers still roared over the streets of Saigon attacking Viet Cong holdouts.

Associated Press correspondent John Lengel reported from Hue, 50 miles south of the demilitarized zone, that four battalions of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese controlled most of the streets in the coastal city. Lengel said U.S. marines and infantrymen and South Vietnamese troops were battling more to maintain their positions than to oust the Viet Cong.

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker went on television to assert that the Communists were being defeated with unparalleled losses.

The U.S. command said 10,553 of the Viet Cong had been killed in the four-day countrywide assaults on the cities and towns of South Vietnam. Combined U.S.-South Vietnamese losses were put at 917 dead and 2,817 wounded, including 281 Americans killed and 1,195 wounded.

Thieu said: "The back of the Viet Cong attack has been broken." He said there is still Communist resistance "in a few provincial capitals . . . but we can consider they have been totally defeated."

But as Thieu and Bunker broadcast, South Vietnamese bombers were strafing a block of houses near the racetrack in the southwestern end of Saigon to clear out Viet Cong troops.

There was fighting in at least half a dozen other spots in Saigon.

The heaviest fighting was reported in the southwestern section of the city around the Buddhist An Quang Pagoda.

Lengel reported the Viet Cong in Hue were attacking with machine-guns, mortars and rockets. He said the fire was so intense that two U.S. helicopters were shot down as they tried to collect wounded.

Viet Cong and North Vietnamese held a major part of the old walled citadel.

Lengel said refugees had poured into the city, swelling the normal 40,000 population enormously, and civilian casualties from the fighting were believed high. He reported 10 American civilians were trapped in the city.

Reports of civilian casualties were lagging far behind the military figures. Thieu in a preliminary report said 136 civilians had been killed and 1,841 wounded, including 90 killed and 1,082 wounded in Saigon.

The total of Communist dead reported by the U.S. command was more than three times the previous record for one week of war. But the American death toll was well below the weekly record of 337 last May, during a period of heavy shelling of marine posts below the demilitarized zone.

In Hue, 400 miles northeast of Saigon, Viet Cong troops were holed up inside the city's palace built by the Vietnamese emperors in the 19th century. While South Vietnamese planes bombed the citadel for the first time in the war, South Vietnamese infantrymen moving behind tanks stormed through two gates of the southeast wall and airborne troops pushed at the north corner of the two-mile ssuare fortress, surrounded by moats.

Government troops said they killed 200 Viet Cong as they inched back into Hue Citadel.

Across the river from the citadel, U.S. marines fought guerrillas through streets near Hue University and Dong Khanh girls' high school.

Martial law remained in force today throughout the country.

Guerrilla bands roamed through Saigon during the night, attacking police stations and blowing one up.

U.S. and government troops and police launched a house-to-house search for Viet Cong suspects today. Truckloads of troops drove up and down the streets to flush isolated snipers out of their hideouts.

Police moved shoulder to shoulder up Saigon's main Tu Do Street firing shots over the heads of people trying to reach the city centre.

Fighting in Saigon raged around the capital's biggest hospital, Cho Ray, the race track in the southwestern section and the South Vietnamese armored headquarters in the northwest.

The Viet Cong had cut the roads around Saigon, and food was becoming a critical problem for the city's 3,000,000 residents and refugees from the suburbs.

Board Representation to Drop From 131 to 16 in January

Representation on school boards in Hastings County will drop from 131 members sitting on 12 boards to a single 16-man Board of Education when new government legislation is instituted next January.

Officials throughout the county are showing concern over the new regulations announced by minister of education William Davis yesterday.

"The major problem will be in determining equal representation ofr the municipalities involved," Reeve Barbara Allen of Tweed said this morning.

Opposition to the plan has been based on the fear that ratepayers would lose a local voice in education.

In Hastings County — about 100 miles long and 2,400 square miles in size — the County Council will be handed the problem of assuring that outlying areas have a voice on the new board.

Representation will be based on assessment rather than population. The county will have the power to divide the rural areas into separate voting units once the towns, cities and separate school supporters get their representatives.

Local officials would not comment on how many representatives the outlying areas might get on the new board.

Election for the new unit will be held in September or October.

The Hastings County board will handle close to 25,000 students from kindergarten to grade 13.

At the present time Trenton has the only Board of Education in the county. Board representatives there favored a consolidation with areas of Northumberland County rather than a county wide unit.

Many changes in the education system throughout the county have been made of the past few years.

A Board of Education operated Belleville schools until 1952 when the present public and Secondary school boards were formed.

One of the reasons was the fact that ratepayers in outlying townships were paying for educating their children in the city but didn't receive any representation.

Over the years various other townships entered the secondary school system and an amalgamation Jan. 1 of this year joined the Stirling Rawdon and Centre Hastings High School boards to the Bay of Quinte Board

The northern part of the county is served by two high school boards — one covering Tweed Hungerford and the other serving ratepayers in the northern part of the county.

Secondary schools involved include Tweed with 225 students, Bancroft with 750 students, Stirling Rawdon — 190 students, Madoc — 653, Marmora 122 and the four Belleville schools together with Trenton High School.

The closing of schools at Stirling and Marmora was inherent in the decision to amalgamate the two boards with the Bay of Quinte Board and at least one of the schools may be closed in September.

Recent changes have also been made in the public school system in the county. Three years ago county school area number one was formed in the northern part of the county and an amalgamation of boards was instituted in the Tweed area last year.

Other public school boards include those in Belleville, Thurlow, Sidney, Frankford, Deseronto and Tyendinaga.

'Y' Fund At $116,458

At the halfway mark in the YMCA campaign it was stated at last night's report meeting at the Club Canara that the grand total had now reached $116,458.

There were 11 new quota busters who had brought in $300 or more and seven more plaques had been sold since the last meeting.

The total is divided between the teams who brought in $23,128 to date and Big Gifts which have reached the $93,330 mark.

There are only 11 more days to go in the campaign.

Automobiles Wrecked

This was remains of one of two cars wrecked in Cannifton crash which sent both drivers to hospital last night. One of the spectators was 15-year-old Paul Thomas, ironically injured in a car accident near same spot several weeks ago.

Police Investigated Two Car Crash

Provincial police today were still investigating the cause of a two-car crash on Belleville's northern outskirts last night that injured a man and woman.

In Belleville General Hospital today were the drivers of both automobiles, Mrs. Thomas Hookings and Cpl. Kenneth Bloomfield, 23, 213 Bridge Street East.

Mrs. Hookings suffered a fractured arm, kneecap, nose and ribs. Cpl. Bloomfield, stationed at Canadian Forces Base Trenton is in hospital with jaw, thigh and leg fractures and concussion.

Both automobiles were wrecked in what police believed was a head-on impact on a curve at the south end of Cannifton, near the MacDonald-Cartier Freeway.

The accident occurred shortly before 11 p.m. in heavy rain.

BERNHARDT — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather Marvel Galveston Bernhardt who passed away one year ago February 2, 1967.

Please God forgive a silent tear,
A fervent wish our father was here,
There are others, yes we know,
But he was ours, we loved him so,
Dear God take a message,
To our Father in Heaven above,
Tell him how much we miss him,
And give him all our love.

We will remember him.

And we, with God, will be at Home.

First for Loyalist

Quinte Area Benefits from Sponsorship

There's more to Don Pasquale than meets the ear — for the Quinte area.

The lilting melodies of the Donizetti opera classic may only be underscoring a significant community development making its debut here in a minor role.

The true significance of the Canadian Opera production at Centennial Secondary School Feb. 17 rests with its sponsor — Loyalist College.

It's a venturesome first for the district's youngest institution.

But its sudden appearance full centre on the stage of community activity prompts stimulating prospects for the future.

The possible pattern projects the college as a new local force in culture — in its broadest definitions.

The possibilities are exciting — encouragement to the individuals and groups who have been engaged in the pursuit and promotion of community activities.

Loyalist community involvement — whatever its future dimensions — is definitely a matter of intent.

"This venture is a broadening of the concept of the college, at least as far as the community is concerned," says Loyalist president J. Kenneth Bradford. "But this is a futuristic organization. You never know where it's going to pop up."

Don Pasquale is its first pop — perhaps the crucial one.

Still in its foundation throes — its administration scheduled to vital organizational problems — Loyalist obviously is testing the pattern of more intangible responsibilities.

Those intangibles hinge on the definition of Loyalist as a community college.

The community, in its students, not only participates in the college. The college also is participant in its surrounding social environment.

The Canadian Opera production is the first working test of the generalization, involving students and community.

For the Students: It's an opportunity of broader study.

Discussions on the operatic form of artistic expression in college English classes will precede the production here.

Volunteering for sponsorship duties extend the class lesson through working knowledge.

"From the point of view of the students a number of them have never had an opportunity to see an opera," reminds Mr. Bradford. "We're not forcing art on them. But we are hoping they will take advantage, now that it's here, to see another art form."

For the Community: It's another step in decentralizing the arts, mobilizing culture for regional communities.

It's not so much that we're bringing culture," defines Mr. Bradford. "The community has culture. We're just giving it an opportunity to have some thing like this."

What similar — and broader — opportunities the location of Loyalist might present the community are still tentative, not even in the design stage.

But, as a newly-arrived patron of the arts, contact with a possible trend has been established.

"Community participation — that's what it boils down to," says the college president.

"It's also a part of our overall picture here because we are interested in the art of living as well as how to live."

How the trend will develop once Loyalist is settled on its own campus, can now only be expectant conjecture.

Loyalist's library already has been promised community availability.

Extended to other areas of community pursuits, would such liberalism be reflected in the design of a campus auditorium, or recreational areas.

President Bradford emphasizes that Loyalist cannot commit higher authorities.

"But I would like to see as adequate a facility as possible for local activities of this sort", he says.

When we get into the design of the building itself, this will be one of the factors we will consider. I don't know how we will eventually develop. After all, we're talking about something you can't pin down to dollars and cents. It's part of the whole concept of education in its totality."

Don Pasquale is a sparkling one-night stand. It's sequel could well be a brighter, lasting local scene.

Field Study Area Proposed To Meeting by Naturalists

A proposal for the inauguration of a field study area within a 30 mile radius of Belleville has been made to members of the Quinte Field Naturalists.

The proposal was made by Terry Sprague, 1968 club president at the January meeting of the club.

Mr. Sprague said the project would necessitate the keeping of accurate records concerning ornithology, entomology, botany and geology, plus notes of amphibians, reptiles and fish in the area.

While the project is still in its formative stages, Mr. Sprague hoped that within 10 years the club would have comprehensive set of records on the natural history of the Belleville Prince Edward county district.

Guest speaker for the club's first meeting of the year was Charles Duesberry, lifetime resident of the city and recognized internationally as an authority on the different species and habits of fresh water fish. Mr. Duesberry spent several years as a commercial fisherman.

He has made a life study of the different breeds of ducks and 25 years ago noticed a trend indicating that wood ducks and some other species might become extinct.

This prompted him to make wood carvings of a pair of wood ducks with suitable painting. Field naturalists attending the meeting saw how this hobby has grown until it is the only complete collection of surface feeding ducks on the North American continent, and possibly in the world.

Hazardous Roads

Hazardous driving conditions cut travel on country roads in the Quinte district today as heavy rains bared a winter-long layer of glare ice.

The dangerous conditions of some township roads dislocated school bus schedules.

Madoc township school, north of Madoc, was closed for the day due to the hazard.

The rain, which moved into the south end of the district Thursday afternoon, continued intermittently through the night.

By 7 a.m. today more than a half-inch of rain had been recorded at Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

The base duty forecaster said wet weather would ease some time this evening — to be followed by a drop in temperature.

By early tomorrow the mercury was expected to dip slightly to a low of 30-32 degrees.

This compares to a low last night of 36 and an expected high today of 40.

Fire Starts In Garbage

TRENTON — An estimated $300 damage was caused to a two-storey frame dwelling on King St. Thursday night, after fire broke out in a pile of garbage in a closet.

Fire Chief Cecil Ellis said the fire occurred at 134 King St. at the residence of Friday Bowman.

No one was injured, he said.

Project Will Be in Aid Of Retarded

TRENTON — Host for last night's civic banquet at the country club, Kiwanis president Frank Miron announced an upcoming club project in aid of the retarded.

Without elaborating, Mr. Miron said Trenton Kiwanians will organize a drive and solicit support for a workshop training centre for retarded children and adults in the area.

"After leaving special schools, there is too frequently nothing for these people to do," the Kiwanis president added.

Threat of Spring Flood Lessens

The mild weather of the past week has opened up the Moira River resulting in there being little probability of a flood this spring.

That is the feeling of City Engineer Wilbur Purcell, and of the Moira River Conservation Authority officials who today said that the river "looks good."

Mr. J. H. McLeod, secretary-treasurer of the Moira Authority, said there was now an open channel in the river from below the CPR bridge in Belleville to above Cannifton.

"The river is cleaning well and we don't anticipate any further flood threat this year," said Mr. McLeod.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said the river level was away down from the peak reached several weeks ago when several basements in the downtown area were flooded.

He said the river was now down to almost harbor level.

However, a check done a week ago by engineering department personnel indicated there was still considerable frazil ice at the river mouth and even extending out into the bay.

But he said the channel cut in the river ice at the time of the January flood threat had opened up and above the upper bridge the river was running free almost for its full width.

But with the continued mild spell together with rain, the level of the river is expected to show some rise again as surface water makes its way into the main stream.

And from the standpoint of a flood threat it could be fortunate the river opened up before the rains came.

Pump house official report that from yesterday afternoon until eight this morning one half inch of rain fell in Belleville.

Two Honored at Civic Banquet

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald pulled a surprise out of his civic bag of tricks last night in announcing the award of Centennial Medals to citizens.

The mayor chose a Kiwanis Club sponsored banquet for town councillors, board members, and officials as the setting for his surprise proclamation.

And nobody could argue with the selection of recipients.

Former mayor Kenneth Couch and civic stalwart O. W. Larry received standing ovations and shook dozens of hands after it was learned they had been nominated for the special silver medallions awarded to Canadians for service to their community and country.

Mr. Larry, town clerk-comptroller for the past 20 years, delivered an apt acceptance message:

"I recognize I am only one of 20,000 in this country to be so honored — but what means more to me is that I am one of two in this community. It has been a privilege to serve you."

Service by both men "beyond the call of duty" earned them this long-overdue recognition, said the mayor.

Mr. Couch was a town councillor from 1938 to 1942, and served as mayor from 1947 to 1952. It was during his tenure as mayor that O. W. Larry was appointed as town clerk.

A guiding force behind the establishment of the expansive Centennial Park, Mr. Couch could be found on the site many evenings last summer cutting lawns or pulling weeds.

It was also during Mr. Couch's term as mayor that Trenton began a stage of industrial expansion.

Much of the investment in development needed to attract industry to Trenton sites came from Mr. Couch's own pocket, said Mayor MacDonald.

"If the committee work handled by Mr. Larry was thrown back on council's shoulders, we'd be working 24 hours a day," Mayor MacDonald said, in announcing the second Centennial Medal presentation.

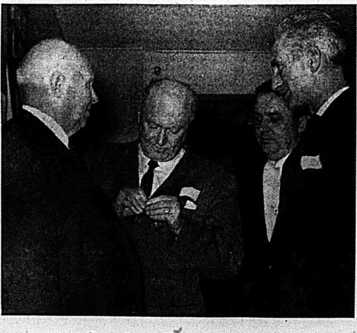
He termed the civic veteran "the power and thought" behind the town's industrial development, "unquestionably an asset to Trenton."

The mayor broke the closely-guarded secret to both medal recipients earlier this week. To everyone else, the awards came as a complete surprise.

Last night's second annual civic banquet was termed an unqualified success by Kiwanis Club officers.

Police and fire chiefs mingled with school trustees, public utilities commissioners dined with library board members, and hospital staff chatted with industrial commissioners.

That's what the evening was supposed to accomplish, and it did.



Service Recognized

Kenneth Couch and O. W. Larry pin on centennial medals presented at last night's Kiwanis Club meeting in Trenton. Kiwanian Frank Miron and Mayor James MacDonald look on.

City's Needs

It is deplorable that Belleville's Foster Ward has been without a sanitary sewer installation since the 1940s.

That the ward is being serviced only now is a reminder that the essential needs of the people can be neglected.

True, there are other projects demanding attention. The Dundas Street bridge and the community-centre arena have already been mentioned. There is also the issue of the CPR tracks, as yet undecided because of cost and other factors.

There is always the danger though of missing the wood for the trees. Such matters as sewers and road maintenance are of prime importance. Just because they are routine is no excuse for overlooking them. Servicing of prospective industrial sites is another.

What about litter? And cracked sidewalks and broken road surfaces? Improving Belleville's image generally — there is plenty to be done. Sewers in Foster Ward is one such project.

The approaches to the city — how do they strike the visitor to Belleville? Is it not a reproach to the community that the prospect on the easterly side of the Cannifton Road en route to Highway 401 is taken up by an unsightly car dump?

Flower borders by the river side in summer — where are they? Would such decorative touches not enhance the river bank on the way into the city? A tourist bureau at the riverside park just off 401, staffed perhaps by students. That also would help to boost Belleville's image.

We are slow to change, but ringing the changes, even if it is only in small ways like this, are part of the business of living.

Lampreys at Bay

Lake Superior is an inhospitable place for a number of reasons. The largest body of fresh water in the world, Superior in a storm can be a ferocious sea lane for shipping.

The history of the Lakehead area contains references to ships that have gone down in lake tempests. Isle Royale, United States (Michigan) island parkland whose long craggy outline is visible on clear days from Port Arthur, is a particular hazard for vessels caught in a storm en route to the Lakehead or Duluth.

And while the lonely Superior coastline extending for some 200 miles across the border into Minnesota has an austere sort of beauty, its waters do not remind the visitor of Caribbean warmth. Even in summer it is too cold for swimming.

For marine life, however, it has been something of a haven including an unwelcome guest in the shape of the sea lamprey. For years Canadian and U.S. marine biologists have been waging a war of attrition with this voracious species. And from Washington there is word that the battle is being won, with the lampreys in decline and the lake trout increasing.

U.S. Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall says the lake trout increased in 1967 by almost 35 per cent. Control measures introduced in 1958 have taken an increasing toll of the lampreys while the trout population has shown steady gains.

Plantings of salmon in Lake Superior and Michigan have also had what Mr. Udall describes as "spectacular results".

It is encouraging to observe this successful venture involving scientists of both countries. From this it may be concluded the lakes once again will become a rich source of food, now they are free of the depredations of the lamprey.

A Strange War

The usual conflicting reports surround the savage fight that erupted around the United States embassy in Saigon the other day.

The Americans ultimately secured the building, but only after the last of some 20 Viet Cong commandos who held part of the building for six hours had been killed.

The Viet Cong lay dead, but they had shown that seemingly impregnable targets such as the new embassy are still vulnerable.

Meanwhile at Danang the Viet Nam conflict took yet another violent and macabre turn. Sightseers, dressed in their Sunday best, to mark the lunar New Year holiday, strolled through a devastated suburb where earlier North and South Vietnamese troops had engaged in a bloody fight. Here there were reports of badly wounded soldiers and civilians staggering from the ruins and dying among the curious onlookers.

It is a strange war. In Saigon life continues as usual, yet the city is always threatened by sudden violence and incidents like the above at Danang where war, daily routine, and civilians on vacation may with equal suddenness find themselves so to speak in each other's laps.

Rrepresentation on Local Boards Is Explained

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I, through your columns, reply to Mr. Joe Cox, secretary of the Quinte Home Builders Association, whose letter appeared in your issue of Saturday January 27, 1968.

Mr. Cox was kind enough to call me on Friday to advise me of his letter to the Intelligencer, as he had been unable to reach me the day he was contacting aldermen earlier in the week.

I pointed out to Mr. Cox that council very early in each year meets in caucus to consider applications, oral and written, from citizens wishing to serve the city on various boards and commissions. In the case of council representation where required by law, council members advance their own names or those of other councillors; quite often the seeker of an appointment will list his qualifications, and when this is not done those councillors who have no knowledge of the citizen or of his experience make a point of requesting this information from other councillors or staff at the time of nominations. The names of all candidates for each position are listed on the blackboard and when the number of applicants exceeds the number of appointments to be made, ballots are handed out to the councillors and a secret ballot is held. The Clerk and The City Manager tally and check the ballots, and the person(s) with the most votes are appointed. The fact that a person held a post the previous term is no guarantee that he (or she) will be re-elected to that post. We may make mistakes on occasion, but this is the democratic way.

Mr. Cox and his association are very well intentioned and are keen followers of council and its deliberations; they, no doubt, feel that they are justifiably annoyed at their representative not receiving this appointment, but, I do not agree with their suggestion for us to appoint yet one more committee, as all the information required by the councillors, who are, after all, elected by the people to act on their behalf, is available at city hall. Council has no authority to abrogate their responsibilities to small committees not responsible to the people. A good example of this is the suggestion of an alderman of the City of Belleville to appoint a three-man committee to once again look into the pros and cons of the new Community Centre that the taxpayers of the City of Belleville are going to build; all that would be necessary to defy or delay the wishes of the people would be the appointment of two persons to such a committee who could by their actions deny common justice and enable council to by-pass its community responsibility.

I would like to take the opportunity at this time to state that as a citizen of Belleville, I am proud of the fine newspaper that we have in the Intelligencer, and I admit to reading it, first page to last, each evening; I have only one suggestion that I pass on for your consideration: with regard to letters to the editor, many papers now print only those letters that the writers thereof have the courage to allow their names to be printed with their views. After all, this is not Russia — no one need be afraid in this great country of ours to have an opinion and to stand up and be counted. I have found myself several times lately in the position of defending the Intelligencer when people say "do you really think there was such a letter"? — you know, and I believe, that you indeed have the writer's name and address on file, but why should anyone be ashamed of being identified with their opinion in this free country of ours. Please do not promote such opinions by allowing the small minority of contributors to hide behind your skirts when seeking to put their opinion in print.

K. J. SODEN, Alderman.

Editor's Note: Letters to the Editor may appear under a pseudonym, if desired, provided the writer's signature and address are included as identification. Letters bearing only a pseudonym are not acceptable for publication.

Support for the YMCA

Support
Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The gracious and kindly reception received by those who contacted heads of industry and financial institutions in the City of Toronto asking for financial assistance in support of the Belleville Family YMCA Captial Fund Drive was most gratifying. Their interest in the YMCA's across Canada is of kindness and support to an institution that has done so much for the youth of our country.

The people of our city should be grateful that industry and financial institutions are concerned that the people of Belleville who work for them have the use of the Belleville Family YMCA. Industry and financial institutions who do not have any direct contact with our city were most gracious in their contributions.

I am sure those of us who live in the city will be motivated in our efforts, time and contributions on behalf of the Belleville Family YMCA because of the generosity and kindness of those who live outside of our community.

Regional Outlook

Peterborough Examiner

The main argument against the county as a regional government unit is that the counties are lagging far behind in municipal administration and, in many cases, they have not even started to use the basic tools of good civic government. There are certainly some problems with regionalized government which will have to be met: Working out best form of representation on regional level; finding enough assessors to undertake yearly assessments of property, as proposed by the Smith Report; equalizing taxes between the urban and rural areas of a regional government so that the urban area will not be unduly taxed while supplying benefits for rural taxpayers.

Winter Navigation and The Maritime Ports

Trois Rivieres Le Nouvelliste

Each year, the transport minister spends large amounts of money to maintain seven ice-breakers on the St. Lawrence river mainly to prevent flooding. And still . . . they prefer to keep these ice-breakers in port and not call on them until it is too late, until after the ice has formed on the river.

There's no shadow of a doubt that the transport minister could enforce a reasonable policy which would involve having ice-breakers not only to break ice jams and prevent flooding but also maintain a navigation channel open all winter. To be sure, the minister would have to increase his fleet of ice-breakers. But the move would be worthwhile. Economically not only the ports of Trois-Rivieres and Montreal would benefit, but other things as well—navigation companies would equip themselves as a result and ship traffic would also increase. . . .

How do you explain the apathy of our legislators towards this idea of St. Lawrence winter navigation? The answer very simply is that they want to protect Maritime ports, notably the port of Halifax, which profit greatly from the closing of interior ports during the winter. The economy of the Maritimes isn't the most vigorous, and since our governments take no real energetic steps to help this region out of its stagnation they dare not lift its exclusive hold on port facilities during the cold season.

Home or Career for Women?

Battle of the Sexes Circa 1880

Ottawa Journal

Funny the way we can get so embroiled in problems, so close to them, so to speak, that we can't see what causes them.

Trouble with the world is that we all lack communications—and that's because of poor education.

Trouble with the world is that we are all fighting each other—and that's because of poor education.

Trouble with the world is that we can't spread our wealth, use our resources, organize our economy — and that's because of poor education.

Right?

And what's wrong with education?

Women. We've given them too much rein, or reign.

Not that we weren't warned!

In 1880 when things were quiet enough so that intelligent men could think, a man wrote an editorial in the Bystander. The Bystander was an intellectual-type "review" of high repute in Toronto at that time.

Here is what the man said, and what man among us will say he was wrong?

"It seems that at Toronto University the co-education movement has come to a crisis. We cannot attempt to discuss the subject in all its bearings here; but we would remind those on whom the responsibility rests that there are three distinct questions:

"Ought women to receive a higher education than they receive at present? Ought they to receive the same education as men? Ought they to receive it in the same place with men?

"The first and even the second questions may be decided in the affirmative without settling the third, in which are involved moral and social considerations which it is the fashion to treat with levity, but which, as the experience of Europe, in the matter of female student life, shows, ought not to be so treated.

"If expediency is opposed to the change, there can be no plea for it on the ground of right; neither sex can have a right to use a public institution if the institution would be injured by such use; women have no more right to force themselves into a male university than men have to force themselves into a female college.

"For our own part, we avow a mistrust of the movement as part of a general attempt to efface the line which the hand of nature has traced between the sexes, and to turn woman from the partner into the competitor of man. We are of the number of those who believe that the sphere of woman's usefulness and happiness, and therefore her dignity, is domestic, not public or professional life; that her guiding star is affection not ambition.

"Instead of giving us better wives and mothers, co-education, we suspect, would prevent a good many women from becoming wives or mothers at all; the movement is, to no small extent, a revolt against what women have been persuaded to consider the slavish burden of matrimony and maternity; while men, let them pay lip homage to prevailing sentiment as they may, will practically seek in marriage, not a "copartnership," as Miss Anthony calls it, with a rival intellect, but the fireside happiness of union with a genuine woman.

"Nor are we sure that the future has not a reward in store for the administrators of any male university who may decline to yield to the current of prevailing sentiment, and to change the character of their institution while it is doing good work in its own line.

"After all a current may be heady, yet not deep, and the real feeling of the community may be the other way: such in fact is the experience of certain institutions on the other side of the line which have rushed into co-education. We should be sorry to be bigoted or illiberal in this or in any other matter; but the hand which is laid on the mutual relations of the sexes is laid on the keystone of human happiness, and whatever is done ought to be done with a full view of the consequences, not under the impulse of vague sentiment or individual ambition."

B52s Still Keep Watch

Yorkshire Post

If it were not for the regular Arctic flights of B-52 bombers carrying nuclear bombs, ready at any moment to give retaliatary attacks across the Arctic to a Russian aggressor—flights maintained day in, day out, year in, year out, ever since the height of the cold war — Denmark could not dream of having real general elections at all. For her, it would be the old dreary story of one constituency, one candidate — and everybody must vote for him in the so-called 'people's Democracy.

The Canadian government proclaimed western B.C. a "protected area" 26 years ago today—in 1942—and began deportation of Japanese. Even Canadian citizens of generations' residence were treated as aliens, deprived of property and moved east. At the end of the Second World War a number of Japanese were shipped to Japan and war measures were upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada and the British Privy Council.

Fifty years ago today—in 1918—the Austrians were repulsed by the Italians at Monte di Val Bella: United States and German artillery were active over American-held lines in the Lorraine sector of the Western Front; British troops made successful raids southeast of Monchy and northeast of Poelcapelle.

Bell Agrees Not to Invest in More Manufacturing Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — Pushed hard by a determined group of New Democratic MPs, Bell Telephone Co. of Canada agreed Thursday not to invest in any more manufacturing companies.

Company officials, including president Marcel Vincent, also consented to a number of other amendments to a private bill before it was approved by the Commons transport committee.

Committee chairman Joseph Macaluso (L—Hamilton West) said the amendments gave the bill a good chance of getting approval from the Commons before the present session ends, probably in late March.

David Lewis (NDP—York South) successfully pushed for an amendment that restricted Bell to investing only in research and development companies that "are not manufacturing products for sale to the company or to any other customers."

Raymond Rock (L—Montreal Jacques Cartier-Lasalle) said the amendment was too restrictive and MPs were using a form of blackmail on the company.

But the amendment passed 11 to 2 with one MP noting that the company did not object to the amendment.

Bell Vice-President A. J. de Grandpre was main company spokesman as the more contentious clauses of the bill were either deleted or amended.

He insisted a clause allowing Bell to invest in any other related company was aimed only at settling the controversy over Bell's relations with its subsidiary company, Northern Electric.

Bell had no intention of entering publishing, cable television or broadcasting as feared by some witnesses before the committee, he said. Bell had no objection to this being put into the bill.

The company wanted to follow the modern trend of diversifying its investments.

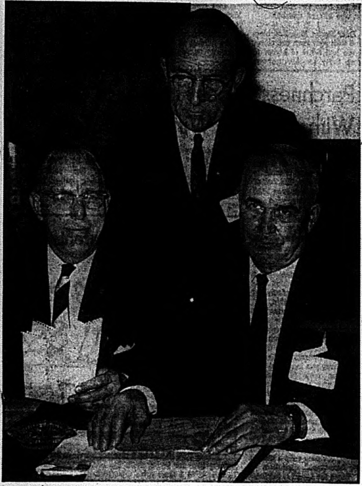
"But in view of our natural monopoly position, we are prepared to limit our investment to research and development companies only."

Under the bill, Bell may increase its capital to $1,750,000,000 from $1,000,000,000 and issue preferred shares.

But the company dropped its proposal that it seek approval from the Canadian transport commission for share issues.

It agreed also to establishment of an appeal board to settle disputes arising from Bell requirements that non-Bell equipment attached to Bell facilities meet the company's reasonable standards.

Mr. de Grandpre also said Bell has no objection to its common carrier operations in the cable-television field being subject to a government regulatory board.



Fall Fair Programs Checked

Central Fairs' Association directors Phil Dodds of Picton and Carl Thompson of Belleville, check convention program with secretary Gordon McCubbin of Warkworth. Convention is held to set fair dates and discuss fair programs.

New Attractions

Local Fair Board Favors Youth Appeal

A swing away from horse racing as a fall fair attraction in favor of western games or some other sort of attraction with youth appeal, is being noted by district agricultural societies.

Yesterday at the annual Central Fairs' meeting in Belleville, several area fair delegates said they had discontinued harness racing, mainly because of the heavy cost factor involved.

The swing today was toward western games, talent shows and other similar forms of attraction.

As one fair delegate told the meeting "a few of the older people miss the horse racing, but we have to cater to the younger crowd."

The discussion on the merits of harness racing as a fair attraction took place during a roll call of fairs during which delegates reported on the year's highlights.

Many of the fairs reported they had bowed to the trend of rising costs and had jacked fair admissions to $1 for adults. Others said they were holding the price line at 75 cents.

Another noticeable trend was that a number of fairs had adopted special rates for students. The idea was felt to be a good one otherwise "too many would climb in over the fence". Children are admitted free.

Record fair attendances were reported by several fairs, while others for some unknown reason showed a decline.

Kingston marked up the best attendance with more than 60,000 paying admissions.

Parades with a centennial year flavor seemed par for the course on last year's fair programs throughout the district.

District Director Phil Dodds of Picton said the role of the area fair director was to offer constructice criticisms.

He suggested that directional signs pointing the way to the fairground would be a help to strangers, and urged a continued campaign for beautification of grounds.

As district director Mr. Dodds said he was only too happy to give advice to fair boards on revamping prize lists and how to get more government grants.

"This is all strictly honest and is encouraged by the department," he said.

He felt there should be more commercial features but saw a danger of selling too much commercial space resulting in agricultural exhibits and women's work being confined in too small a space.

Mr. Dodds said all fairs had good features and suggested that fair officials visiting other fairs should be on the lookout for the better features to include in their own show.

Some of the "bests" in the 14 district fairs visited were listed by Mr. Dodds who gave blue ribbons to Belleville for its horse show; Kingston for its cattle show, Napanee for its swine show and to his own Picton for flowers, women's work and school displays.

The best potatoes were seen at the Coe Hill Fair. "I thought Coe Hill was blueberry country", he said.

Roseneath came up with the best centennial exhibits; Campbellford had the best centennial parade, and Madoc the best home entertainment.

Mohawk Fair with its program of Indian dancing and other features was said the "most interesting".

While the men were having their meeting members of the women's section held their own get together to discuss programs and fair features of interest to the weaker sex.

The meeting saw Mrs. Hilda Scrutton of Kingston step down as women's district director.

Mrs. C. Thompson of Campbellford is new women's director with Miss Geraldine Mowers of Napanee and Mrs. Bernard Hunt of Tweed as vice presidents. Mrs. Ronald Hamilton of Trenton is junior convener, and Mrs. W. A. Hume of Campbellford, secretary treasurer.

All officers for the men's section were re-elected for another term. Mr. Dodds is district director for 1968, Carl Thompson, Belleville is assistant director, and Gordon McCubbin, of Warkworth, secretary treasurer.

Floyd A. Lashley, director, Agricultural and Horticultural Societies Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, spoke to a joint session during the afternoon program. With provincial fairs director due soon to retire, it was possibly Mr. Lashley's last official visit to Belleville.

Mr. Lashley was introduced by Ben Bleecker, past president of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies with appreciation being expressed by Mrs. Hilda Scrutton.

The women's section guest speaker was Mrs. R. J. Penney of Kingston, past women's director. Colored slides of district fair highlights were shown by Mrs. Penney and Creighton Lockyer of Picton.

Presentations to Mr. Lashley, also to Ben Bleecker, Sidney Fitzgerald and Mrs. W. A. Hume, were made in recognition of meritorious service to agriculture.

The last three named were presented with copies of the "Ontario Agricultural Fairs and Exhibitions, 1792-1967" history book, published last year as a centennial project.

Mr. Lashley has been provincial fairs' director for the past 17 years. Mr. Bleecker is one of the few men to act as president of both Class A and Class B fairs; Mrs. Hume was president of the provincial women's section in 1951, and Mr. Fitzgerald was president of the OAAS in 1958.

Women Directors

Mrs. C. Thompson of Campbellford, (right), was named lady district director at yesterday's fairs' convention. Mrs. Bernard Hunt, Tweed, is vice-president.

Four Societies Want Saturday Fair Dates

The annual scramble for Saturday fair dates to take advantage of weekend crowds is on again in Central Ontario.

Yesterday at the annual meeting of the Central Fairs' Association held at Belleville no less than four different fairs came up with Saturday fair dates — all on the same day.

Fairs choosing the same Saturday (August 31) were Centreville, Odessa, Roseneath and Stirling.

District Fairs director Phil Dodds of Picton questioned the degree of interference one fair might have with another.

He granted that if the fairs were close enough to have the same exhibitors there would be conflict but otherwise felt the interference would be negligible.

With only 15 miles separating Centreville and Odessa, it was felt there might be conflict with fairs on the same day. The Centreville delegate said he would meet with Odessa officials and see if something could not be done.

On the other hand Stirling Fair officials said they would stick to their August 31 date.

Ray Shortt said Stirling had gone to the August date several years ago when the date was vacant.

"We have no intention of changing," he said.

Fair dates for 1968 set at the meeting were as follows:

Board Discusses Addition

DESERONTO — Paul Anderson, area superintendent of schools, and architects Charles Holt-Housen and Peter Mallotte met Wednesday evening with five of the six members of the Deseronto Public School Board to discuss the proposed addition to the school. They brought with them the blueprints, and also a scale model of the proposed addition which gave the Board a graphic picture of the completed work.

The addition would give the school the minimum of its requirements, containing a library, a kindergarten and a room for special education. At present the grade three classroom is in the hall of St. Mark's Anglican church, for which the Board is paying rent. No grants are available for such rents. The classroom vacated by grade three is being used for special education this year.

In addition, a general purpose room is proposed which would serve both as auditorium and gymnasium with facilities available so that it could be used as a regular classroom to ease overcrowding.

The first plans, which made provision for an extra classroom, would have cost $300,000. This would have included complete furnishings. The revised evening will cost $225,000. This plan includes the bare minimum which the school needs, the area school superintendent affirms.

The Board will meet with the Town Council at 9:00 p.m. at its regular meeting Monday evening to submit the plans, and to ask that debentures be issued to finance the project. The Department of Education will shoulder between 80 and 85 per cent of the cost, and the School Board has a surplus of between $12 and $13 thousand left from last year.

Method for Stuffing Beef Heart

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Would you please print a recipe in your column for stuffing a beef heart? I thought I would be adventuresome and bought one and now I don't know what to do with it. It is taking up space in my little freezer and should be used. — Diane B.

ANSWER: Good question. Congratulations for making an excellent buy and learning to do something different. Thaw your beef heart then make

BAKED STUFFED BEEF HEART
(repeated from May, 1960)

Select one beef heart (or 2 or 3 calf hearts). Wash and slit the heart, remove gristle and blood vessels and some fat from top. For the stuffing, chop an onion and a stalk of celery and fry gently in 2 tbsps. of butter or margarine, add 2 to 3 cups of soft breadcrumbs, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Thyme or rosemary goes well with heart — add a pinch to the stuffing. Fill heart with the stuffing, tie snugly with string into original heart shape. Brown the heart in butter in large frying pan on all sides. Transfer to baking dish or casserole; add ½ cup of water, cover closely and cook until tender at 300 deg. Fahr. A beef heart will require about 4 hrs. Calf or pork hearts will cook tender in a much shorter time — about 1½ hrs. To make Gravy of the drippings, over medium heat, to drippings in pan, add 1 cup hot water and 1 Oxo cube. Stir in flour-water paste made by mixing together until smooth 2 tbsps. each flour and water, until thick. Taste to see if this is salty enough to please you.

Another way of using economical beef heart is for lunch sandwiches.

BEEF HEART (for slicing hot or for lunch sandwiches)

In large saucepan add hot water to cover half beef heart and 1 tsp. salt, 1 bay leaf and 6 Juniper berries or peppercorns or ¼ tsp. black pepper. Simmer covered for 4 hrs. turning over at halftime. Use sliced hot, or cool in broth and after trimming away fat and arteries at top use sliced for sandwiches or cold meat plates. Lovely served with—

MUSTARD SAUCE:

In top of double boiler mix together 4 tsps. dry mustard, 2 tsps. granulated sugar, ½ tsp. salt, 4 tsps. white vinegar, 8 tsps. cold water, 2 large eggs. Beat with rotary beater to mix smoothly. Stir constantly over boiling water until thick. Remove from heat and double boiler and beat with rotary beater until smooth. Cool. Whip ¼ pint 32 per cent cream until stiff and fold i.. Store in covered jar in refrigerator. This will keep for one week.

Ann Landers

Life Not Ruined By Serving Time

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just read the letter from the woman who wrote about her 17-year-old stepson who was sent to prison. She said, "His life is ruined."

Will you please tell her, Ann, that his life is not ruined. It might be just beginning? I know another boy who was sent to the state penitentiary in ——— (please don't name it) when he was 17. He was a wild, incorrigible, hoodlum, and had been in trouble several times. The prison sentence changed his life. He was put to work cutting trees in a government forest. It was the first honest labor he had ever done — and he loved it. He decided to learn all he could about forestry and he soaked up knowledge like a blotter. By the time he had finished serving his time he had become an authority. This accomplishment gave him self-respect and a purpose in life which he never had before.

ANN LANDERS

That was 20 years ago. Today the "wild, incorrigible hoodlum" is one of the leading conservationists in the country. Few people knew of his background, but I think his story is worth repeating. It might give hope to others. — HIS AUNT.

DEAR AUNT: I'm sorry you asked me not to name the prison because that institution deserves praise. Too many reformatories and penal institutions concentrate on punishing inmates instead of rehabilitating them. The goal should not be retaliation but training and teaching prisoners to make an honest living so that when they leave prison they can be law-biding citizens.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two and a half years ago I divorced my husband. My children are now 5 and 7 years of age. I have not dated because I haven't felt emotionally ready but now that I've recovered from the traumatic experience of divorce I want to go out with men.

How does a mother explain to her young children that Mommy is dating? I want their lives to be better than mine has been and I don't want to give them any wrong ideas. — A BRIGHTER TOMORROW.

DEAR BRIGHTER: A divorced woman has the right to go out with friends — male and female — so why be defensive?

Make it a point to treat all male companions as casual friends in the presence of your children. Keep any hint of a romance out of the picture until you become genuinely serious — which I hope will not occur for quite some time.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter has been married for two years to a so-called Southern gentleman who is still calling me "Hey You." It would please me if he called me Mother or I'd glady settle for "Mrs.———" or even Betty, but this "Hey You" is getting on my nerves.

I'd like to tell him in a subtle way to change his salutation. How should I do it? — ARKANSAS TRANSPLANT.

DEAR TRANSPLANT, Why be subtle with a lummox? Tell him you've had enough of the "Hey You" and if he doesn't want to call you Betty, Mrs. ——— will do.

Successful Living

Mother May Teach Child of Kindergarten Age

Dear Doris: Next fall I will be having my oldest child start school. As we are 20 miles from the nearest town, it is impossible for me to send her to kindergarten, which means she will be among the very few who will miss this great opportunity.

Is there any way or place that I could obtain kindergarten books and teach her myself? — Isolated.

Dear Isolated: Indeed there is. Ask the kindergarten teacher or your provincial department of education. Many a child has missed this happy year and survived; but more and more attention is being given to the early training of young and eager minds.

• • •

Dear Doris: About low calorie and sugar diets, would be thankful to receive the chart telling what you can substitute for what and how much. The doctor says I am not diabetic but can only use sweets and acids in very small amounts or I have complications.

I have had so many operations, including a hind quarter amputation of left leg, due to cancer. But with the use of a wheelchair, can do all my housework for the two of us and do some entertaining; also gardening and flower beds in summertime.

So have not much to complain about. — E. W.

Dear E. W.: With that outlook you are an inspiration. Wheelchair homemakers deserve a special medal; and I know of several who are making an excellent job of it.

The chart has been ordered for you from the manufacturer who offered this help.

• • •

Dear Doris: May God bless you with your keen and clever brain and sense of humor to keep those sensible answers coming. I wouldn't miss your column for anything.

I'm five-foot-three, and 66 in June. I weigh 135 pounds. According to the doctor this is good but I have two inches of fat on my stomach which I hate.

Have you any idea how I can get rid of it? Guess I'm looking for too much.—Always a Faithful Reader.

Dear Faithful: According to me that weight is good too. Your diet must be about perfect. The tummy bulge — that unwanted two inches — is one of the hardest to smooth out, especially as you add on the years.

I think the pull - up - and - squeeze routine is about as good as any. You grab the spare tire and need it, moving gradually across the midriff or slightly below. Until its pink, every day.

That way you help nature break down the fat cells. Keep diet slightly below normal and do it for a month. You'll see results.

CLIMATIZE COMPLEXION — Winter sun reflected on white snow can cause burning and peeling. An opaque creme stick foundation helps block sun as Patricia Morrow, star of 20th TV's "Peyton Place," illustrates.

Parchness Goes Hand in Hand With Winter Wind and Sun

By Reba & Bonnie Churchill

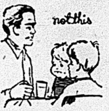
Outdoor girls with indoor complexions need to weather patrol their skin. Six out of ten find parchness goes hand in hand with winter wind and sun. It appears most prominently on the facial "T-zone" —across forehead, down nose, over lips to chin. To climatize complexion, many dermatologists suggest a protective buffer, such as a creamy underbase. Latter acts as a "shield" against sudden weather changes, replenishing oils and lubricating skin.

Most sports enthusiasts learn quickly that the glare of winter sun reflected on white snow can cause burning and peeling. And if the distribution of melanin in the skin is uneven, you may even find a faint crop of freckles. That's why the next beauty step calls for an opaque creme stick foundation, which helps block sun. Try wearing a golden tone to balance outdoor ruddiness. As Patricia Morrow, star of 20th-TV's "Peyton Place" illustrates, blend covering with a sponge or foam-tipped applicator.

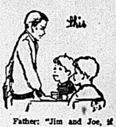
Since the mouth is the most active and moist facial feature, it is the first to chap and the first to require "on the spot" repairs. If skin is particularly dry, use a lip gloss. Apply it sandwich fashion — both under and over lipstick. Always stipple on top coat, so lipstick doesn't smear. For such speedy touch-ups, follow Pat's tip and tape tube to a glove, cuff or belt.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Father: "While we're all together, let's get a few rules straight. I don't want any more bad reports from school and you are both to spend three hours every night on homework."



Father: "Jim and Joe, if you are finished with your dessert, ask Mother to excuse you. I would like to talk with you in the study before you start your homework."

Dinner time should be a pleasant interlude for the family, not the time for laying down the law. Postpone disciplinary lectures until a more private moment.

Survey on Equality of Pay For Men, Women Conducted

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

The most carefully spelled out legal differences between men and women in Canada are the ones that touch on that surest status symbol of them all, money.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press on laws affecting women finds a difference in minimum wage for men and women in two provinces, Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. In Newfoundland it is 50 cents an hour for women, 70 cents for men. In Nova Scotia it varies on a regional basis, from 95 cents to $1.10 for men, from 70 to 85 cents for women.

It has been considered necessary to pass laws to get equal pay for equal work for women, and how effective the laws are is a moot point. Every province has one except Newfoundland and Quebec. Quebec has a general anti-discrimination law that includes discrimination on the basis of sex.

There have been efforts to have the basis for enforcement changed. The laws now are enforced only if an employee makes an official complaint, and then not automatically. In Ontario in January Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson of the Supreme Court of Ontario dismissed the action of Sault Ste. Marie policewoman Lois Beckett.

He was quoted as ruling that common sense dictates policewomen should be paid less than male officers. The judge said lower pay for women is in accord with every rule of economics, civilization and family life, and is not discriminatory.

The equal-pay laws are all relatively recent. Ontario's was passed in 1951. The federal government extended its employees' equal-pay status to cover all industries under government jurisdiction in 1956, after prodding by Ellen Fairclough, then Progressive Conservative labor specialist.

Women's groups are working on the laws, trying to have such words as "identical" changed to less definite expressions such as Saskatchewan's "work of comparable character."

There is no government law covering retirement plan arrangements, but the Canada Pension Plan has apparently had some effect on company regulations.

When it came into effect, some firms quietly raised their retirement age for women to 65 from 60. Many still retire women employees earlier than men, though, and many delay female employees' admission to the retirement plan. For instance, a man might join within a year of starting a job, a woman has to wait until she is 30

A crusade that is growing as more married women go to work has as its goal some tax rebate for child-care expenses for a married woman or sole-support mother who must have a housekeeper or school arrangement to be able to go to work.

Now if she has a housekeeper she may be able to make a larger-than-average deduction for one child, but she cannot make a deduction for care costs directly.

Until a wife earns more than $1,100 a year, her earnings are subtracted from the deduction her husband claims for her as his dependent.

If a Carter taxation commission recommendation is adopted, a family unit tax may be established. The wife's and husband's incomes would be added together for tax purposes.

In areas other than money there are differences, not always clearly oultined.

A father is usually considered the legal guardian of his children except in specific circumstances such as legal separation, and this could occasionally pose problems.

A father's signature may be sufficient and preferred in cases such as giving permission for an operation to be performed on a child or giving permission for a minor to marry.

Quebec reports that a mother's approval for an operation may still not be considered good enough if the father is known to object.

Marriage age generally has been a reform target for several women's groups. If a girl is pregnant and can get parental consent, there appears to be no legal minimum age for marriage except in Quebec. There it is 12 for girls, 14 for boys. In other provinces the age at which people may marry without parental consent varies from 18 to 21, lower with consent and lowest if the girl is certifiably pregnant.

Custody of children after a divorce is determined on the basis of each individual case. In Quebec the father has legal custody of the children unless the mother proves she is more fit to care for them than he.

Finally, in an area unrelated to the family, women may still not sit on juries in Quebec and Newfoundland.

In most provinces they may get an exemption just by asking for it, a right some women would like to see revoked.

In Alberta if one of the parties being tried by jury is a woman, she is entitled to have half the jury made up of women.

Manitoba, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec have some labor laws applying only to women, mostly governing hours of work, rest periods, the weights a woman may lift.

Two provinces, British Columbia and New Brunswick, have laws allowing women to take time off before and after a birth without fear of being dismissed from their jobs.

Brief by Council of Women Says Income Tax Act Discriminatory

OTTAWA (CP) — In a brief presented to Prime Minister Pearson Thursday, the National Council of Women attacked sections of the Income Tax Act as unjustifiable and discriminatory against married couples.

The brief also contained resolutions on child rehabilitation, Indian affairs, family planning and social welfare.

The council, which claims to represent about 1,800 women's organizations across Canada, objected to provisions in the Income Tax relating to marital exemption for dependent spouses.

In one section, it said, the act states that a taxpayer who supports a dependent in a self-contained domestic establishment may claim a marital or equivalent exemption of $2,000 if the dependent's income does not exceed $950 in a taxation year.

In another, the act stated that a dependent spouse was only permitted to have an income of $250 in a taxation year without consequent reduction of the marital exemption allowed the other spouse.

A 1965 amendment to the act included uncles, aunts, nephews and nieces as dependents to whom the $950 exemption applied.

The council objected to the $700 difference between the provisions and urged the government to amend the act so that the dependent spouse could have a $950 income without reduction of the other spouse's marital exemption.

Copies of Justice Minister Trudeau's A Canadian Charter of Human Rights and ready answers from Prime Minister Pearson and several cabinet members greeted the 12-member delegation.

Prime Minister Pearson said that a treatment centre should be in operation before October at Quinhon, 250 miles northeast of Saigon, in South Vietnam.

Bringing children to Canada for treatment might be pyschologically harmful, he had done so had found that in some cases taking such children far from home had been detrimental.

Finance Minister Sharp told the women the question of the taxation rights of a husband and wife are under study.

Arthur Laing, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, assured them that "we are going to adopt a policy of never again selling a single square inch of Indian land."

There are 6,000,000 acres of Indian land in Canada, he said, and the government is trying to encourage the Indians to develop it.

Canadian Women May Be Best Dressed at This Year's Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — A team of 21 Canadian women, whose sizes range from a petite seven to a large 18, may turn out to be the best-dressed girls at the 10th Winter Olympic Games in Grenoble, France, Feb. 6 - 18.

Sportswriter Myrtle Cook, who has been in charge of official wardrobes for women on Canadian Olympic teams since the 1940s, says the task of selecting a full wardrobe is not as difficult as it may appear.

"The first and most important step in dressing a team is to have the exact measurements of each girl. Girls are permitted and encouraged to supplement this wardrobe with clothes of their own."

Together with Frank Shaughnessy Jr., in charge of men's clothing, Miss Cook has come up with a co-ordinated wardrobe for outdoor, indoor and after-sport apparel.

The official wardrobe includes all the clothes the athletes might need for the difficult official ceremonies connected with the Games, for casual skiing and for partying. Governing groups for each sport take care of the actual competition outfits.

"Even though the girls can bring their own clothes along," says Miss Cook, "we warn them about weight problems with luggage."

Of prime concern in selecting an appropriate wardrobe is the weather situation in the country acting as host to the Games.

"For example," says Miss Cook, "we included raincoats among the official uniforms for the Games coming up because we learned Grenoble can be quite rainy at this time of the year."

Canada is one of the first countries to provide its team with after-ski wear, which this year includes mix-and-match ensembles and a pair of culotte pyjamas for lounging.

Red, white and blue will be the principal colors worn by the Canadian team. "We decided to get away from the pale blue so predominant at the 1964 Olympics held at Innsbruck, Austria," says Mr. Shaughnessy.

Instead, the girls will be sporting a great deal of white in the form of fur fabric suits, to be worn during flag raising ceremonies. Both men and women will wear colorful Hudson Bay coats over navy stretchies for the official opening ceremonial parade.

Maple leaf - embroidered piping brightens up many of the uniforms and practical red tote bags are handy accessories.

The official wardrobe is obtained for the team through donations made by Canadian manufacturers and designers. Accessory items also are donated.

Davis Expects Considerable Criticism on School Consolidation

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis said Thursday Ontario's school board consolidation program will involve replacing 1,012 public, elementary and secondary school boards next Jan. 1 with about 80 divisional boards of education.

Mr. Davis told a news conference 38 of the divisional boards will be based on southern Ontario's county system and 32 will be designated for given areas of Northern Ontario.

Metropolitan Toronto will continue to have boards for its six boroughs and Hamilton, Ottawa, London and Windsor will keep their boards of education.

Mr, Davis said that when the program becomes operative, the only remaining elementary school boards in the province will be separate school boards or public boards in isolated parts of Northern Ontario.

Net result of the program would be to reduce the total number of school boards to about 600 from the present 1,446.

The minister said the transition will be difficult and he anticipates "considerable criticism from some portions of the province."

But he said the major concern is to improve the educational system and give children a greater measure of educational equality.

Mr. Davis said a bill setting out the government's proposals will be introduced "very early" in the new session of the legislature opening Feb. 14.

He said separate school trustees have indicated they are "very genuinely interested in our policy of larger units of administration." But he could not say whether comparable legislation to deal with the separate schools would be brought down this year.

The minister said the government is considering the possibility of setting a date in September or October this year for election of the first divisional boards to give new trustees a chance to familiarize themselves with their jobs.

In future, board elections would be held on a county-wide basis. Trustees would be elected for two-year terms.

Mr. Davis said that in cases where present school districts overlap county boundaries, he would expect the county boards to make contractual arrangements allowing children to attend the school closest to them.

Eventually, divisional boundaries might be changed by special legislation.

During the press conference the minister also:

1. Promised that before the government goes ahead with consolidation it will invite comment and suggestions from the public and educational organizations;

2. Said a new system of provincial educational grants in 1969 will "substantially modify" the province's foundation tax plan, introduced in 1964 to equalize the financial positions of separate and public school boards;

3. Disagreed that consolidation would automatically mean greater bureaucracy and the building of lavish administration centres.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said he supports the idea of larger administration units in principle but objects to the "undemocratic and paternalistic" way in which the government is proceeding.

No Time for Trudeau's Bill on Criminal Code

OTTAWA (CP)—It now seems obvious that Justice Minister Trudeau's omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code will never get through this session of Parliament. It may not even be debated.

It would thus have to be re-introduced at the next session of Parliament, scheduled to begin some time after the April 4-6 Liberal leadership convention under a new prime minister.

The omnibus bill would, among other things, widen legalized abortion, authorize provincial lotteries, provide more effective control of firearms, ban reporting of preliminary hearings unless and until conviction and legally permit homosexual acts in private by two consenting adults.

Debate on the broadcasting bill now before the Commons may go on as late as Feb. 13.

This would leave only four weeks before the March 10 prorogation date suggested by cabinet full opportunity to campaign for a few weeks.

But Mr. Pearson Thursday listed several measures which will be dealt with by the Commons before it can get to the Criminal Code bill.

These include the tax increases on beer, liquor, cigarettes and personal income, increased unemployment insurance constributions and benefits and increased competition in the drug industry as a means to lower prices of prescription drugs.

The higher taxes on personal incomes present an opportunity to the opposition to berate the government at great length.

There are also signs of a filibuster against the measures affecting the drug industry.

All these factors militate against passage of the Criminal Code bill, even if it gets to the debate stage at all.

And even if the bill gets to the debate stage, many MPs consider it will require a month to get it through all stages, including the Senate, where there is hostility against some of its provisions.

Commons to Debate Income Tax Increases

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons will open debate on bills to increase excise and income taxes after completion of the current debate on the government's broadcasting bill, Prime Minister Pearson announced Thursday.

The bills, arising from Finance Minister Sharp's Nov. 30 mini-budget, would implement tax increases already in effect on beer, liquor and cigarettes and on income taxes. They also speed up collection of corporation income taxes.

After these bills, the prime minister said, the Commons will take up the planned increase in unemployment insurance rates; amendments to the Patents Act, ad amendments to the Food and Drugs Act making LSD—lysergic acid diethylamide—a restricted drug.

The massive Criminal Code amendments, including changes in laws on abortion, lotteries, homosexuality and drinking drivers, will follow.

Sunday School Lesson

Do You Want to Be Healed?

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

A strange question confronts the church and the world today. It goes beneath the easy assumption that men want a better world. But do they? Are they willing to give up their prejudices and exclusiveness in order to get it? Are they willing to accept the sacrifices and disciplines that would be required to bring it about?

The question is, "Do you want to be healed?" Jesus asked this question at the pool of Bethzatha in Jerusalem. (John 5:2) People believed that at certain times the water in this pool had special healing power. The porticoes were crowded with invalids waiting to enter the water at the right time. One invalid had sought healing here for 38 years, but had never had anyone who would put him into the water at the right time.

Because of His great interest in the sick, Jesus visited this pool. Seeing the man who had waited so long for healing, Jesus asked him, "Do you want to be healed?" (John 5:6 RSV)

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 4: "The Witness of Christ's Works" (Temperance), John 4:43 through 5:47.

This was a strange question for Jesus to ask. Of course, the man wanted to be healed. That is why he was there. But Jesus knew it was important for the man to face up to this question. For 38 years, he had been dependent on others. If he were healed, he would have to stand on his own feet. For 38 years he had been the recipient of other people's compassion. As a well man, he would have to start earning his own way. The man needed to face up to what would be required of him if he were healed. Was he ready to assume the responsibilities of being healthy?

An alcoholic has to face the same question. He cannot be helped until he really wants to quit drinking. He may say he wants to quit. He may even think he wants to quit. But down deep he cannot accept life without alcohol. Often an alcoholic has to come to the point of utter despair before he really wants to give up his drinking, and before he will accept the help of others and of God.

The church needs to ask this question of itself and of the world. People say they want to get rid of war, but do they? Are they afraid of what stopping the manufacture and sale of arms would do to the economy? Do they really want our cities to be healed of their festering ghettos? Are they willing to accept the changes that would be required to bring greater justice to more people?

Christians pray, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." But do they really want this prayer to be answered? Are they willing to accept the changes God would want to make in them and in the world if this prayer were answered?

The answer lies not so much in what people say as in what they do. They may say they want justice, yet never lift a finger to obtain greater justice for others.

Jesus believed in the principle of putting faith and concern into action. He based His own claims squarely on what men saw Him do. (John 5:36) He asked men to believe in Him because of the works He did. (John 14:11)

Missionaries have long practised this principle. A little girl was asked if she had heard the missionaries' gospel. She replied, "No, but I have seen it." She saw it in the medical clinics missionaries had established. She saw it in the schools they had built. She was too small to listen to much of what they said, but she saw what they were doing.

People are impressed more by what they see than by what they hear. The world is impressed not so much by sermons, for vast multitudes never hear sermons, but by practical evidences of the church's concern.

Millions will not be influenced by church pronouncements, for they are not listening to what the church is saying. If they are attracted to Christianity at all, it will be because of what churches are doing.

This is why so many religious leaders today are urging the churches to go where the action is, to evidence their concern for the young, the aging, the neglected, the lonely. As churches become involved in serving the needs of the people, they demonstrate their right to speak for God in the world.

Sputters to Halt

House Wrestles with Broadcasting Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons sidestepped a hurdle and dashed through 29 clauses of the broadcasting bill Thursday, only to come back and sputter to a halt before the big jump.

For the third day the House wrestled with the question of whether—and by how much—the CBC should take precedence over private broadcasting.

It was the 11th day of clause-by-clause study and a new element was added as the government House leader, Health Minister MacEachen, made the first move in the debate-limiting procedure known as the guillotnie rule.

If the full procedure is used, debate likely will be cut off by Feb. 13. But House leaders of the five parties could agree to limit it still further.

The Senate, meanwhile, closed shop until Feb. 20 on the grounds that it didn't have enough work to stay open.

Senator John Connolly, government leader, said the slow pace in the Commons meant there was little business on the order paper of the upper house.

However, one major bill—the government's legislation widening divorce grounds—went through the final parliamentary step of royal assent before the Senate's adjournment. It is to be proclaimed law no sooner than May 1.

Commons debate on the broadcasting bill formed into a pattern of division between supporters of free-enterprise private broadcasters and those who felt the objectives of the CBC should be paramount.

Conservative L. R. (Bud) Sherman (Winnipeg South), supporting free enterprise, said he agreed with a Conservative colleague that the debate had separated "the champions of individualism and independence from that sparkless, faceless army of people who would see this country complete its startling slide into state-ism, socialism and total welfare-ism."

Jack Bigg (PC—Athabasca) said private enterprises "can perform every service to the people of Canada better than ponderous Crown corporations.

At issue is an amended section stating that conflicts between the objectives of the CBC and the interests of private broadcasters "shall be resolved in the public interest, but paramount consideration shall be given to the objectives of the national broadcasting service."

The amended version, put forward Wednesday by Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) and accepted by the government, was rejected by most Conservatives.

OK'd

Divorce Changes Set

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill extending the grounds for divorce in Canada received royal assent Thursday night and will probably become law in the spring.

The last clause of the new act says it cannot be proclaimed law until three months after it received royal assent.

To adultery, virtually the only ground for divorce in Canada now, will be added sodomy, bestiality, rape, homosexuality, bigamy, physical and mental cruelty and, in carefully defined circumstances, marriage breakdown.

Under marriage breakdown a variety of conditions are listed-desertion, imprisonment, alcoholism, drug addiction and non-consummation of the marriage. But it will be up to the courts to decide whether the marriage has collapsed beyond hope of reconciliation.

Chief Justice J. R. Cartwright gave royal assent on behalf of Gov.-Gen. Michener in a Senate ceremony. The upper house passed the legislation earlier in the day, the Commons in December.

The Senate made one amendment Thursday, plugging a drafting oversight that would have affected Ontario's powers over annulment of marriage. The Commons approved the amendment.

The act gives jurisdiction in divorce cases to the provincial supreme courts except for Quebec and Newfoundland, where it will be exercised by the Exchequer Court of Canada.

The Senate rejected, on a voice vote, an amendment by Senator J. M. Macdonald (PC—Nova Scotia) to return the bill to committee with instructions to preserve Nova Scotia's court of divorce and matrimonial causes, which has functioned since 1841.

Individual Protests

Groups Criticize 'Police State Legislation'

TORONTO (CP) — Amendments to the Criminal Code, awaiting second reading by the House of Commons, contain "police state legislation" that interferes with peaceful use of firearms and threatens the existence of an industry, say spokesmen for Canadian shooting organizations.

At least four organizations are preparing briefs critical of some federal proposals for tighter controls over possession and use of firearms; and one spokesman said the justice department has received "a deluge" of individual protests.

All organizations said, however, that many of the Criminal Code amendments contained in an omibus bill presented by Justice Minister Trudeau are good ones.

The bill was given first reading by the Commons Dec. 21.

Basic criticisms are that the new firearms regulations give too much uncontrolled authority to the federal cabinet and the issuers of permits, interfere with the peaceful use of firearms and are lacking in detailed definitions.

If the amendments pass Parliament unchanged, these things were predicted in interviews this week:

Ontario Revolver Association: "The sport of target shooting with handguns will be dead in this country."

Shooting Federation of Canada: Law-abiding owners of firearms will be subjected to "police state legislation" that permits civil servants to make rules with the force of law.

Canadian Historical Arms Society: Red tape will hamper the legitimate collection of firearms.

A lawyer familiar with the manufacture of air guns: The legislation will "virtually close down plants of the only two Canadian manufacturers."

Canadian Wildlife Federation: The federal cabinet will have power to change laws without public debate and without reference to Parliament.

Dominion of Canada Rifle Association: Sports meets for cadets and scouts will be affected.

The proposed amendments would broaden the classification of "prohibited" and "restricted" weapons, give the cabinet order-in-council power to declare any type of weapon either prohibited or restricted and give courts the right to prohibit a person convicted on a firearms offence from having a firearm for five years.

Traffic Study Action Has Plagued Council for Seven Years

Present day traffic congestion in downtown Belleville warrants the construction of two new bridges across the Moira River — not just one.

That was the indication in a 1961 city traffic survey conducted by DeLeuw, Cather and Company Ltd. And what was true seven years ago apparently goes double today.

The above firm of consulting engineers seven years ago recommended construction of a new bridge at the north end of Church Street and also the Dundas Street bridge as the two main projects in a long term street development program.

They said the Church Street project would be needed by 1965 and recommended the Dundas Street bridge for construction following 1971.

But at the time of the survey the engineers under-estimated the traffic growth evident in the past few years.

Now a more recent traffic count and long line-ups of backed-up traffic in the downtown section of the city during rush hour periods indicate that construction of both bridges is currently warranted.

In 1962 city council retained Damas and Smith Ltd. to do pre-engineering studies on both projects but before their report was received council became interested in proceeding with the Dundas Street bridge ahead of the Church Street proposal.

However, the highways department asked the city to show reason for the reversed priority and accordingly in 1965 Damas and Smith were authorized to compile current traffic information with the view of determining the order of priority between the two projects.

The firm's traffic analysis report presented in September of the same year showed that relief is currently required at both the upper and lower ends of the central business district.

The report showed that construction of both the Dundas Street bridge and the Church Street bridge was now warranted.

With the traffic analysis report, the highways department consented for the Dundas bridge to have priority and Damas and Smith went ahead with their pre-engineering study for the Dundas Street project.

The firm came up with plans for a three phase project including construction of the river bridge, reconstruction of Dundas street between the river and the top of the "Devil's Elbow" hill and provision of grade separation over the CP railway.

However, property owners at the foot of the hill seriously objected to the high fill required in the vicinity of the present Dundas Street - Bay Bridge Road intersection which they claimed would seriously effect business in the area.

Accordingly Damas and Smith were authorized to investigate an alternative arrangement on the basis of providing no connection between Dundas Street and Parker Street or Highland Ave.

Council approved the alternative plan on Jan. 7, 1967.

Both plans recommended the railway grade separation as the first stage of the three stage project.

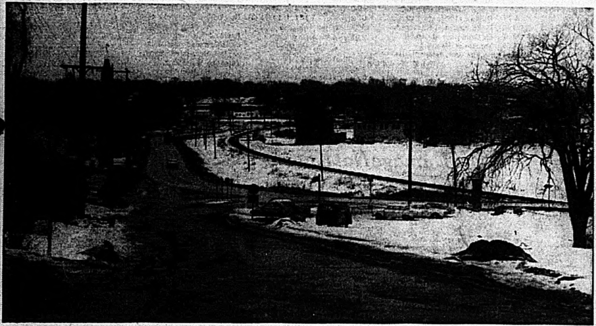
Several reason were given for the grade separation recommendation. These included the closeness of Dundas Street to the railway at the present Bay Bridge Road intersection and the fact that the bay bridge road intersection is immediately at the foot of the hill and on a 30 degree curve.

Also considered was the fact that Dundas Street, on reconstruction and extension over the Moira River, would become a major arterial road across the southern part of the city and that there would be increased traffic on the No. 14 highway route over the bay bridge.

For these reasons, the report said it would be impractical to consider continuance of the present Dundas Street - Bay Bridge Road intersection.

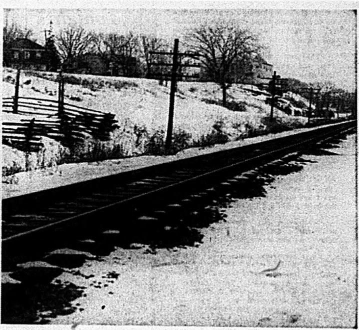
The Damas and Smith report recommends construction of the grade separation as the first phase of the over-all project.

And City Engineer Wilbur Purcell says the highways department is not likely to change its mind on the recommended phasing.



Bay Bridge Road Intersection Would Be Relocated

This is the section of West Dundas Street which would be reconstructed to bypass Highway 2 traffic away from the downtown area. View looking east from the top of the Dundas Street hill shows present Bay Bridge Road intersection and level crossing. Under the scheme Bay Bridge Road would be relocated to intersect with Dundas Street at the top of the hill.



Overpass Would Go Here

Proposed Bay Bridge Road railway overpass would intersect with Dundas Street at the above vacant area west of the "Devil's Elbow." The road would swing across north end of Zwick's Island and take advantage of natural elevation for overpass site.

Overpass or Bridge First: City Council at Crossroads

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Should the city commence construction of the long proposed Dundas Street bridge and roadway project this year, and if so, where should it start?

That's the question to be under debate at Monday's meeting of city council when Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle brings in his recommendation to go ahead with the Bay Bridge road overhead as the first stage of the three phase project.

But the motion is certain to see objection from some aldermen who feel the river bridge should come first.

Last week, after city engineer Wilbur Purcell outlined the various aspects of the Dundas Street project to council, Alderman Boyle said he would bring in a recommendation to proceed this year with the railway overpass.

This brought almost immediate objection from Alderman Keegan who said he would resign from council if the motion was passed.

He said construction of the overpass would be directly opposed to the wishes of Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott who, he said, took the stand that the river bridge should come first.

Dr. Scott is still in Florida recuperating from a severe cold prior to undergoing surgery in Toronto.

Ald. Keegan also opposes construction of the railway overpass as the first phase.

He says the overpass is not needed and if the railway tracks are eventually moved, it would become "completely useless."

But the argument that the bridge should come first is contrary to the recommendation of consulting engineers Damas and Smith.

On the basis of traffic counts and in consideration of the various physical factors involved, the city consultants claim the railway overpass should be the first stage of the three phase project (overpass, river bridge and connecting roadway).

And Ald. Boyle says he is prepared to take the engineers' recommendation.

The total estimated cost of the three-phase project is in the neighborhood of $1,800,000, all subject to sizeable government grants reducing the net cost to the city.

The cost of the railway overpass together with relocation of the Bay Bridge Road and approaches, is given as $486,000 of which the city's share would be $52,000 to $60,000.

Grants for the bridge and connecting roadway would be at a lower percentage.

The main purpose of the Dundas Street bridge and roadway project, is to bypass Highway 2 traffic away from the city's downtown area and thus ease rush hour traffic jams.

But the proposed railway overpass would have additional benefits for motorists who each day use the Bay Bridge Road to and from Prince Edward county.

First, the overpass would eliminate the present dangerous level crossing at the foot of West Dundas Street hill and at the same time would put an end to the seemingly endless waits while mile-long freights make their way in and out of the city.

And at the same time it would provide what is termed a "functional" intersection of Bay Bridge Road with Dundas Street. At present the intersection is compounded by a level crossing and a 60 degree turn immediately at the foot of the hill and only feet from the railway crossing.

As a further argument for the overpass, engineers point to the fact that with Dundas Street becoming the "through" Highway 2 route through the city, Bay Bridge Road would be light controlled. The claim is that traffic lights only 80 feet from a level crossing just would not work.

Council is generally agreed that the Dundas Street bridge is needed. The question is the phasing, and to some extent whether the overpass is required.

There is a feeling that the bridge, constructed as the first phase, would give considerable relief to downtown traffic congestion even before completion of the over-all project.

With this engineers don't agree. They say the bridge would be of little use until Dundas Street was reconstructed to provide a through artery to the western outskirts of the city.

The reconstruction of Dundas Street calls for a series of traffic islands and lane channelling for traffic direction at intersections. Without the reconstruction of Dundas Street only confusion would result engineers claim.

At the same time, however, Mr. Purcell doesn't feel there would be serious objection from the highways department to doing the bridge first — providing all three phases of the project were constructed.

"But if council wants to build only the Dundas Street bridge, they may as well forget about it — the highways department will not agree", he says.

Actually, he said, there was nothing to prevent the bridge being constructed as the first phase of the over-all project if this was what council wished.

"But I wouldn't advise it," he said. "Construction of the bridge alone wouldn't solve anything without the roadway.

If council decides to delete entirely the railway overpass, the city engineer says the city would have to convince the highways department that the present level crossing would work with the increased volume of traffic.

In any event it is claimed increased traffic would eventually demand construction of the overpass and in the interest of proper planning the feeling is it should be built now.

Another objection to doing the river bridge first is that detailed plans for the river crossing will take another eight months to complete and this would rule out a 1968 construction start. On the other hand plans for the overpass are now ready and the structure could be built this year.

With the grade separation concept, Bay Bridge Road would swing across the north end of Zwick's Island, over the railway overpass and emerge onto Dundas Street at the top of the hill just east of Holden Street.

This would allow easy turns onto Bay Bridge Road for traffic going either way on Dundas Street.

Then "through" traffic along the Highway 2 route would continue down the Dundas Street hill and on over the Dundas Street bridge just north of the present C.P.R. river crossing.

However, there is one aspect of the over - all project which might not sit too well with area residents.

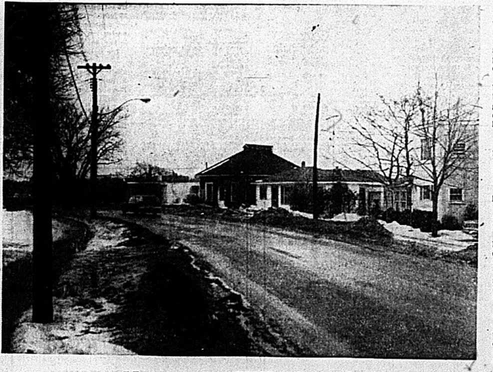
This is the fact that Highland Ave. would become a dead end street at its present intersection with Dundas Street.

The reason is that to meet the required five per cent grade requirement on Dundas Street hill it will be necessary to cut the hill back. The result is the intersection of Highland Ave. will be at a higher level.

But the city engineer says that so far he has heard no serious objection to the proposal to close off Highland Ave. and says further that a look at a city map will show that only a small section of the city would be affected.

In any event, the city's long range planning will be to reconstruct Bridge Street from Highland Ave., to Sidney Street which by early next summer will be paved south from the fairgrounds.

This, it is claimed, would still provide a direct route west out of the city for Highland Ave. area residents.



Houses on Hill Must Go

Under the reconstruction scheme proposed for Dundas Street these houses would have to go. The proposal is to eliminate the "Devil's Elbow" allowing the Highway 2 traffic route to continue straight ahead down the hill and connect with East Dundas Street at Fireman's Park.

SPORTS SLICES

The critical "barbs and slings of arrows" ranging from the seats of the alleged mighty to the business echelons have been aimed at this newspaper over the past three weeks.

And this department has not emerged unscathed. The only difference being, the editorial critics blossomed practically overnight while the first blasts at sports department policy are now drawing old age pensions.

Some of the gems of criticism aimed this way were masterpieces of grammar, spelling and suggestions so inane the wastepaper basket retched when they hit bottom.

And the majority of them emanated from that breed of sports heroes who have neither the guts or the courage to sign their names.

Another pet pastime of these rinkside, armchair and morning quarterbacks, is to call via telephone between two and three a.m., loose their barbs of criticism and/or grade three suggestions, and to a roar of suds-soaked background laughter, hang up when asked their name

We have been dubbed "homers"; team-lovers; caterers to personal friends connected with sport; lushes; paid mercenaries for teams and individual athletes; and using imaginary influence to swing things the way our "employers" want them.

On the more pleasing side of the picture we have had the finest co-operation possible from the sportsmen who sit in administrative and training seats.

The greater majority of coaches, managers and associations executives are true sportsmen insofar as their association with the news media is concerned But like. any other phase of life there is always a few bad apples in a barrel

This department's policy is to criticize when criticism is necessary and praise when the situation warrants it. Sportswriters of this newspaper have done both on covered events

The Belleville Mo-Hawks and Belleville Juniors have come under the guns of criticism for inept performances at times, but never has management turned on the newspaper for publishing the truth.

Sportswriters, like other human beings, are prone to err, but some people are a heluva long way from being "divine."

From anonymous sources come charges they are 'Hawks-Lovers," Leafs-Lovers" or whatever team is the pet foemen of the accuser. One letter-writing "hero" came out flatfooted with the statement that I was on the Bobby Hull pay-roll. (Hurry along that first cheque, Robert). The writer? Only he and his case of giggle-water knows.

Just for the record, there is no other daily newspaper in Eastern Ontario and perhaps the west, that devotes more space to minor sports than the Intelligencer.

Columns of nominal rolls are published every year. Scorecards when properly filled. are honored. We believe the youngsters get a "kick" from seeing their names published (when they are spelled correctly). The sports calendar is extremely popular.

But occasionally we feel like Leo Durocher during a world series.

The famous "Lip" had been baited by a fan sitting in a box seat near the third-base line where Leo was coaching.

He stood it for two days. On the third, after going through another verbal grilling, he strolled over to the fan, asked his name and address, where he worked and what time did he start.

The fan stared at him. "Whaddya wanna know that for, Bigmouth?" he sneered.

"It's like this," said Durocher. "You know so much how to do my job, I was going to take over yours tomorrow and you can take mine."

And Decatur remarked once, "Right or wrong I don't agree with this fellow. But I'll defend with my life his right to say it."

Are Los Angeles Kings the team to stop Montreal Canadiens in their sweep of the National Hockey League?

If they aren't, the only team left that hasn't had a shot at Les Habitants since they gave up losing Christmas Day would be St. Louis Blues.

ROD SEILING

Every team in the veteran Eastern Division has had at least one crack at Montreal since Chicago Black Hawks dropped Canadiens 3-1, Dec. 25. Since then they also have beaten every team in the expansion Western Division except Los Angeles and St. Louis.

The Kings get their chance Saturday in one of six scheduled games.

Canadiens won their 11th straight game Thursday, a 5-3 decision over New York Rangers, and extended their unbeaten streak to 15 games.

It was the second loss in the streak by New York with only Boston Bruins having boosted Montreal's stock more often—three times—in the 15-game period.

Toronto Maple Leafs, with 2-2 and 1-1 ties, are the only team to come close to victory since the Canadiens found the magic touch.

The Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks battled to a 4-4 tie in another Thursday game with Oakland Seals and Philadelphia Flyers tying 3-3, Los Angeles outscoring Detroit Red Wings 8-6 and Pittsburgh Penguins blanking St. Louis 2-0.

The Canadiens victory held them in first place in the east, two points ahead of Chicago and four up on Boston. Toronto is fourth, five points off the pace.

Philadelphia holds a three-point advantage in the west over Minnesota North Stars with Los Angeles another point back, two points ahead of St. Louis.

New York penalties hurt severely Thursday as the Canadiens scored three times when the Rangers were a man short—the goals by Dick Duff, Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Laperriere.

Claude Provost scored with the teams at equal strength and Jean Beliveau scored after New York goalie Ed Giacomin had been lifted for a sixth attacker.

The Rangers outshot the Canadiens 36-30, but only Rod Seiling and Camille Henry were able to beat Rogatien Vachon, in goal for Montreal.

Rookie Bill Fleet of Los Angeles and Floyd Smith of Detroit took possession of the Olympia Thursday in one of the most spectacular scoring duels in the NHL this year.

Fleet scored three goals and assisted on another for the winners while Smith had the first four-goal night of his hockey career.

Real Lemieux, with two goals, Howie Hughes, Ted Irvine and Bill White handled the rest of the Los Angeles scoring with Alex Delvecchio and Gordie Howe scoring for the Red Wings.

Roy Edwards started in goal for the Wings, but after Los Angeles got four goals in three minutes and five seconds of the second period, he was replaced by Roger Crozier at 10:07 of the period.

Although outscored the Red Wings directed 47 shots at Los Angeles goalie Wayne Rutledge compared with 27 shots on the Detroit net.

Dennis Hull again stole the thunder of his more famous brother Bobby, scoring twice to pace the Black Hawks including the tying goal with only a minute remaining after Bobby Orr had given Boston a 4-3 lead.

Chico Maki and Stan Mikita scored the other Chicago goals. Ken Hodge, Fred Stanfield and Ed Westfall scored early goals for Boston.

Kingston Juniors Tonight

The Belleville Junior B's struggling manfully along in the face of a dismal record meet the Kingston Frontenacs tonight in Memorial Arena. Game time 9 o'clock.

There will be gifts for "Mom and Dad" according to Juniors' manager Jim Matthews.

Despite their record the Junior B's will go all out to record their second win of the season particularly against time-old foemen from Kingston.

Plans are being laid for a colorful exhibition game between the City Fire and Police Departments and you'd better see this one.

The boys in brass and blue forget all friendship when they tangle on an ice surface and no punches, figuratively, will be pulled. And there could be a few of the real ones tossed around.

This classic takes places on Friday, February 23rd and will precede the last scheduled game of the Juniors with Kingston again providing the opposition.

Minnie Menard

Eye Damage Not Known

The actual damage extent to the eye of the Belleville Mo-Hawks' Minnie Menard will not be known for nearly a week.

This statement was given to sports editor George H. Carver last night by an eye specialist who examined Menard yesterday.

The eyeball received the full impact of the blow, he said. There was hemorrhaging and until this is cleared up nothing definite can be ascertained.

The specialist said there might be a slight permanent damage resulting to the eye.

Almost commensurate with the unfortunate accident came word from the OHA that Menard had drawn a four-game suspension following a stick-swinging hassle in the Kingston-Mo-Hawks' game Tuesday.

The suspension was ordered by the OHA committee convened by the association vice-president.

OHA president Jack Devine, in accordance with the constitution, was not allowed to preside at the meeting because it involved a member of a "home-town" team.

Turcotte To Ride Damascus

ARCADIA, Calif. (CP-AP) — Canadian Ron Turcotte will be aboard Damascus, 1967 Horse of the Year in the U.S., in Saturday's running of the 1¼-mile $100,000-added Charles H. Strub Stakes at Santa Anita.

The Grand Falls, N.B., native inherited the mount from Bill Shoemaker who broke a leg in a recent spill at Santa Anita.

Shoemaker had ridden Damascus in 20 of the horse's 22 lifetime starts. One of the other two rides was made by Turcotte in winning last year's Leonard Richards Stakes at Delaware Park.

Nancy On The Mend

GRENOBLE (Reuters) — The injured ankle of Nancy Greene, Canada's hope for an Olympic skiing gold medal, is "coming along fine," Canadian officials reported today.

Miss Greene, the world's top Alpine skier in 1967, has been preparing this week for the Olympics in the Chamonix area of the French Alps. She is due to arrive in Grenoble Friday.

Frank Shaughnessy, Chef de Mission of the Canadian team, said today:

"I have just spoken to Patricia Ramage, the ski team manager, who told me Nancy's ankle is coming along fine."

The injury put her out of competition for more than a week. She made a modest return last Saturday when she placed 24th in a World Cup downhill race at St. Gervais.

NHL Scoring Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

They aren't among the National Hockey League's scoring leaders, but Floyd Smith and Bill Flett owned the Detroit Olympia Thursday night.

Flett scored three times for Los Angeles Kings and Smith four times for Detroit Red Wings as the Kings won 8-6.

Gordie Howe scored his 23rd goal of the year for Detroit in the game and Alex Delvecchio registered an assist to maintain his tie for the lead in that department. Pierre Pilote of Chicago Black Hawks also has 33 assists.

Stan Mikita of Chicago scored once as the Hawks tied Boston Bruins 4-4 and maintained his points lead, now with 56 on 28 goals and as many assists.

But team-mate Bobby Hull closed the gap with a pair of assists and 55 points on a league-leading 35 goals and 20 assists while Phil Esposito of Boston stayed with the pace, getting three assists.

Esposito, a Black Hawk centre for Hull last season, now has 53 points on 25 goals and 28 assists. Howe, Fred Stanfield of Boston and Delvecchio are next in line, each with 48 points.

Green Bay Miracle Man Retires As Head Coach Of Champions

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Vince Lombardi, the Brooklyn-born miracle man who built football's mightiest dynasty in this small city of Green Bay, has retired to the executive suite after nine seasons as Packer head coach.

From now on, Lombardi, 54, will be only the general manager of the team he coached to five National Football League titles in these years.

The new head coach is Phil Bengston, 56, designer of the Packers' stifling defences.

It is the first time Lombardi, absolute ruler of Green Bay football as coach and general manager, has delegated a major share of his authority.

Bengston was sure Lombardi would not interfere with the running of the team.

"Our relationship has been very close and there's been a very real understanding between us as long as we've been together," Bengston said.

Speaking from a written text, Lombardi apologized, saying he had to because of the emotion involved.

"I felt I could not trust myself to say what I must say unless it is written," he explained. "Because of the nature and growth of the business and the corporate structure of the Packers, I believe it is impractical for me to try to do both jobs. I feel I must relinquish one of them.

Lombardi's emotion showed only momentarily during his three-minute talk. When it was over, tears were noticeable in his eyes.

The indomitable Lombardi is the only man ever to coach a team to three straight titles since the NFL adopted the playoff system in 1933.

Lombardi, who took over a team that had won only one game in 1958 and turned it into a contender almost overnight and a champion within three years, leaves after nine straight winning seasons.

His Packer team won 89 regular season games, lost only 29 and tied four. The Packers captured six Western Conference titles as well as five league titles and for the last two seasons have beaten the American League champions in the Super Bowl.

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The players always called him Phil when he was their defensive coach. They'll probably keep calling him Phil now that he's succeeded Vince Lombardi as head coach of the professional football champion Green Bay Packers.

"I really don't think coach Bengtson will mind," said defensive end Lionel Aldrige. "as long as he gets the kind of performance from us that he expects."

Performance is something Phil Bengtson, 56, almost always got as coach of the National Football League's most consistently stingy defence.

"As long as you work for Phil and produce, there are no problems," said Aldrige. "But this man is no softie. He can get tough when he has to or when he wants to. He can really get tough. Phil gets the respect he demands."

But he is no Lombardi, a coach Packer players called Vince, only when out of earshot, if then.

Lombardi retired Thursday as Packer coach after leading them to three straight NFL titles and two Super Bowl crowns.

"They are completely different people as far as their personalities go," said Aldridge. "But they both get the job done."

Lombardi is deep-chested and somewhat stocky. Bengtson is tall and gives the impression of spareness. Lombardi is quick to anger, aloof, moody, and seldom funny.

Bengtson has a reputation for wit. Although far from a chummy sort, Bengtson is not aloof from the players. He rarely lets his temper flare, but he does have a temper.

41st Season

'Papa Bear' Eager To Go

CHICAGO (AP) — George S. Halas celebrated his 73rd birthday today eager to direct his Chicago Bears in his 41st National Football League coaching season next fall.

Halas, a founding father of the NFL in 1922, waved a cast-embraced left hand and said in an interview:

"I'm looking ahead to the coming season when we should go to camp better-geared and in better frame of mind than in several years.

Halas, who has owned the Bears since organizing the club as the Decatur Staleys in 1920, said his annual physical checkup last week was favorable.

He minimized a hairline fracture of his left wrist sustained in a fall on a slippery floor.

"When I was going down, I made an instant decision to land on my left had instead of my right hand, because I use it more, to sign contracts and the like," quipped Papa Bear. "But the injury doesn't bother me at all."

Fort Worth Defeats Omaha 6-2

Nationals Stop Czechs 2-1

PRAGUE (CP) — Canada's Olympics-bound national hockey team downed Czechoslovakia 4-2 Thursday night to gain revenge for a 2-1 loss to the same team Wednesday night.

Czech observers said after the exhibition game that the "vehemence" and speed with which the Canadians played indicate the Nationals may be one of the best prepared teams for the Olympics.

About 13,000 spectators saw the Canadians spot the Czechs a 2-1 first-period lead, then score three unanswered goals in the second.

Gary Dineen of Montreal counted twice for the Canadians with single goals coming from Herb Pinder of Saskatoon and Steve Monteith of Stratford, Ont.

The Czech news agency said the Canadians put up a much better performance than Wednesday.

Dineen scored his goals within one minute of each other in the 12th and 13th minutes of the second period. Pinder scored the first goal when the game was only four minutes old and Monteith counted within two minutes of the opening of the second.

The Czechs scored half-way through the first period and just before the end of the period.

The Canadians are scheduled to have one more warmup game in Europe before going on to Grenoble, France, where the Winter Olympics open Feb. 6. The game will be played Saturday in Geneva, Switzerland, against the United States team.

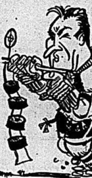
Bobby Hull's World Of Hockey

By BOBBY HULL

About halfway through this season there was a ripple of publicity after I scored my 400th goal in the National Hockey League.

The stories pointed out that only four players had gone through 400 in league play — Gordie Howe, off by himself; Rocket Richard, Jean Beliveau and myself.



GORDIE HOWE

Records don't interest me much, except maybe goals scored in a single season, which can lead to records set for money paid me by Chicago Black Hawks.

But getting 400 goals didn't interest me other than the curiosity of it. It is curious that the NHL doesn't count goals scored in the playoffs in the records. Playoff games are usually considered the most important of the year, especially at the box office by the owners, so goals scored in playoffs should be at least as impirtant as any scored during the schedule.

Fact is that Beliveau had 460 goals before this season began, including 61 in playoff competition. I had 410, counting 40 scored in Stanley Cup play. So that's why I say league records are often meaningless; your performance in playoffs isn't taken into account.

There was a lot of noise in Toronto during the first part of the year when Tim Horton played his 1,000th league game. There was a similar splurge of attention when George Armstrong performed in his 1,000th league game, in early January.

In my opinion, all the hurrays for Horton and Armstrong were a little late. They are solid playoff performers, as we found out when they knocked us out of the Stanley Cup semifinals, and both were veterans of more than 1,000 games when this season started.

I don't look to give the Leafs any edge, considering the robust checks they frequently unload on me, but I don't doubt that many of the playoff games Horton and Armstrong have played have been more vital to Toronto than some league games. Those playoff games should of course be counted in their endurance records.

This sounds like a carping column, not unlike some written by second-guessing sports writers, but I think the criticism is justified. Since we're in that vein, I argue that mementos are more important to most hockey players than records.

I hear the NHL awards a tie clasp with diamonds in it to players who have scored 250 goals. I hear Frank Mahovlich never got one when he counted his 250th for Toronto, and I'm still waiting for mine.

TODAY'S CUE FOR KIDS: I keep getting asked about the slap shot and how to control it. As a left-hand shot, I have my right shoulder more or less lined up on the right goal post, I also try to keep my body and my shoulders facing the net. That forces the goalie to remain back a fraction longer than usual because I'm still in a position to manoeuvre in on him. The less time he has to skate out, the more net I have to aim for. On the downswing, I try to hit the ice an inch or two in front of the puck with my downswing. If I get off a hard shot, it usually pulls to the right a few inches. This means that with a curved blade, the puck will hook in right on target.

Hope Classic; Colorful Clambake

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —Golfer Billy Casper examined the scoreboard at the Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic and observed: "You'd have to think the green and the black scores are in good condition."

To explain this mystifying remark, it must be explained that in what has been called a computer's dream tournament, there are four courses in play and, to distinguish them on the scoreboard, each course has its own color.

Green is the color for La Quinta and black is El Dorado, which are considered the two toughest to play. Indian Wells is red and Bermuda Dunes is blue for the two less difficult layouts.

Devlin and Kermit Zarley led the charge into today's round. Devlin shot a five-under par 67 and Zarley a 68 to tie at 138 after 36 holes.

Zarley has yet to play La Quinta and El Dorado.

Brewer, with a 69, was in a tie at 141, three shots off the pace, and Palmer, with a 70, and Casper, 72, were in the 142 ranks.

George Knudson, the 29-year-old Winnipeg native now playing out of Toronto, shot a 73 Thursday to go with his opening round 70 and a 143 total.

"I expect my game will jell over the weekend. After all," said Casper, "we're not too far away."

The first-round leaders, Bob Rosburg and Bill Collins with the rough courses yet to be played, drifted back. Rosburg's 74 gave him 141, and Collins' 75 left him at 142.

Professional John Schlee scored a hole-in-one Thursday on the 194-yard 16th hole at the El Dorado. Schlee, who used a four-iron, had to settle for just the ace because there is no longer a $50,000 reward for the feat in the tournament.

Fight Promoter

Wants New Officials

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Don Chargin, promoter of the Thad Spencer-Jerry Quarry heavyweight elimination series fight Saturday, would like to see new officials in the ring, and at ringside.

"We need a new set of officials to improve the scoring," he told reporters, "and I'd like to see a school for referees. An ex-fighter doesn't always make the best referee."

Quarry fought a disputed 10-round draw with former champion Floyd Patterson in their first fight and then scored a close 12-round decision over Patterson in their second meeting.

There has been man-in-the-street speculation that Quarry would get the officials' verdict in a close fight on the contention he is a sentimental favorite here—and that the officials could be swayed by applause.

Spencer, 24, 203 with a 32-7 record, is a San Franciscan but never has drawn well there.

Quarry, 22, now a Los Angeles resident, spent his boyhood in the San Francisco Bay area. He weighs 193 and has a 25-1-4 record.

Three Athletes To Compete In Russia

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian athletes Bill Crothers will compete in four indoor track meets in Russia during February.

Bailey and Hoffman, both of Toronto, and Crothers of Markham, Ont., will leave Montreal Feb. 7 and compete in meets at Leningrad Feb. 8-9, Tallin Feb. 11-12, Riga Feb. 14-15 and Moscow Feb. 17-18.

Red Wings Whip Marlies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Marlboros are in fifth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and they can blame it all on Danny Lawson of Hamilton, the league's leading goal scorer.

Lawson scored two goals and assisted on another as Hamilton Red Wings defeated the Marlies 4-2 Thursday night. The Red Wings now are in fourth place, six points behind first place Kitchener Rangers.

The Rangers, meanwhile, hung on for a 3-3 tie with the Petes at Peterborough.

Hamilton's victory came before 3,273 fans, the second largest crowd of the season in Hamilton Forum. Other Red Wing

OWRC Representatives Meet with Council

DESERONTO — Two representatives of the Ontario Water Resources Commission met with the Deseronto Council Tuesday evening to answer questions regarding the proposal for a sewage system received by the Council in December. The matter was laid over by the retiring council, and again at the two January meetings, in order to gain further enlightenment from the Commission before it would be put to a vote. The meeting Tuesday evening was arranged at the request of the Council.

As Council was meeting in committee, no details will be made public until the regular meeting next Monday evening. The hour of meeting has been advanced to 7:30, as the Public School Board has asked to meet with Council at 9:00 p.m. to lay before it a request for an addition to the school.

The first decsiion made Monday evening will be a momentous one for the town of Deseronto. Without modern conveniences the town cannot expand, and may possibly deteriorate. But the proposed sewer system to be built by the OWRC and paid for on a rental basis over 40 years, will mean an increase in water rates.

Sales Pitches for Commercials Starring Magic Out of Style

NEW YORK (AP)—They come and they go, the characters and personalities in the television commercials. And when their usefulness is over, they suddenly disappear unloved and unmourned.

Has anybody even missed the knight on his charger galloping around turning dirty clothes white with his magic spear? Or Wanda the witch who created marvelous hairdoes with a touch of her wand? Or that silly dove that lived in a lady's cupboard? Gone, all gone.

Obviously none of them had fan clubs.

Sales pitches starring magic is going out of style. Just about the only example of real magic left involves that white tornado rolling up such a storm cleaning a dirty corner that the state troopers come to investigate.

There are a lot of current commercials with swingy musical backgrounds and there is a marked vogue for products used by the young crowd to use unusual camera effects. Most disconcerting, however, are the ones that bid for viewer attention by disturbing flashs of light followed by dark on the screen.

For a while this season—some still are around—there were commercials with shock value: The neighbor who grabs her friend's toothpaste and scornfully throws it away while producing a tube of new toothpaste of the same brand. Even Katy Winters, who has spent years patching up people's lives with her deodorant, has been busy urging people to throw away the old stuff and get some of her new good stuff.

Just ordinary folks—ordinary folks such as none of us has ever seen—continue to discuss with passion and intensity the length and taste of assorted brands of cigarettes.

Humor plays an important part in commercials these days although whether one warms to Fran's mouthwash advice to the lovelorn or to Madge's clever method of manicuring nails with dishwashing liquid depends, presumably, on the individual's sense of humor. One series of cigarette commercials even takes precious air time to recall old jokes—"I feel like a ham sandwich." "You don't look like one." That, presumably, put the viewer in a jolly receptive mood.

Generally, there seem to be more commercials these days, particularly short ones. Their tone and quality seems to improve each year. And, according to some of the research people, the viewers' resistence seems to toughen constantly under the repeated exposure.

This viewer's favorite commercial? The stomach settler starring the headless character suffering from the blahs.

Aspirin Is Safe in Proper Dosages

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I read your articles on poisons in which you said, "And there is Aspirin poisoning." I had been taking two aspirin tablets three times a day to keep arthritis in check. Is that bad? Now I have stopped taking the aspirin, and am having pain in my shoulder and hands. — E. R. J.

Go back to taking your aspirin as usual. That is not an excessive amount for an adult. Some arthritis patients use more than that. (It is wise for a physician to adjust the dose to suit each individual patient.)

In proper dosage, aspirin is a very useful — and safe — medicine. In excessive amounts it, like almot any medicine you can name, may become poisonous.

The tragic fact remains that aspirin is the largest single cause of poisoning, and often killing children.

That is because people, regarding it rightly as a "safe" medicine, leave it where children can get at it.

It is a "safe medicine" for adults.

But the amount that is perfectly all right for an adult weighing 100 pounds or more can be five times as much as a 20-pound toddler can safely absorb.

A child may eat a whole bottle of aspirin, thinking it is candy. And then the child goes to the hospital.

The aspirin you are taking for arthritis will not harm you. It will help you — as you know from experience. Keep on taking it as directed. But don't leave your aspirin bottle where a small child can lay hands on it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Your article on Dupuytren's contracture interested me. I had the operation eight years ago and it was a complete success.

The doctor told me I would not be able to use the hand for six months but I made up my mind to show him. As the hand was gradually exposed, I massaged the fingers, and after all the bandages were removed, I squeezed a ball in warm water.

I even amazed the doctor because in two months (instead of six) I was back at work painting and imprinting and earning my living.

I know you receive many discouraging letters, but wanted you to know what can be done when one puts his mind to doing something and puts one's trust in the Lord.—A. N.

A doctor can't help being glad to be proved wrong in such a case. But it's still safer to estimate the time of recovery on the supposition that the patient won't try as hard as he can. There are many situations in which recovery depends in large part on how much effort the patient will expend. Thanks for a cheery note.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: We have been married 18 years and have five children. We do not want any more, and our sex life is becoming very unsatisfactory for fear of another pregnancy.

I do not want an operation and my wife does not want to take the birth control pills. My question: Is there an oral contraceptive pill for men to take? — J. F.

No such pill for men is available although studies are in progress seeking to develop such a drug.

Solution to your problem might be to resort to one of the older contraceptive measures. The pill has brewed up such a storm of popularity and publicity that people lose sight of the fact that other older methods can be just as effective when properly used.

• • •

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Pearson Offers Nova Scotia $2 Million to Keep Firm Open

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson has offered $2,000,000 cash as the core of a federal aid program to help Nova Scotia keep the Sydney steel works open.

The offer was contained in a Jan. 23 letter to Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia, which plans a takeover of the faltering Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. plant.

Mr. Pearson's letter was tabled Thursday in the Commons along with other mail on federal aid between the two leaders.

The Pearson letter said the once-only cash grant would cover the earlier federal commitment to pay half the plant's operating losses between Jan. 1 and April 30 this year.

He indicated the grant was much higher than the federal share of the expected loss.

The Pearson offer bypasses a Smith proposal for the federal government to pay half the expected $4,330,000 operating deficit between Jan. 1 this year and April 30, 1969.

Also rejected was a suggestion Ottawa lend Nova Scotia half the $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 cost of buying the Dosco assets.

The Pearson letter said federal involvement in keeping the plant open ends April 30. Moreover, Ottawa would not share in the ownership of the plant or help the province buy it.

A Smith letter to Mr. Pearson said all or most of the money paid to nationalize the steel works would eventually be recovered. The provincial legislature has authorized a takeover to avert a shutdown.

Mr. Pearson also re-affirmed an earlier federal commitment to split 50-50 with Nova Scotia cost of a study to determine economic viability of the steel works.

Mr. Pearson said that in reaching the decision the federal government took into account that Nova Scotia could also obtain federal aid through existing federal programs.

Mr. Pearson also said the federal government would be glad to discuss with Nova Scotia possible government claims against Dosco to see whether they could provide additional help.

These include $1,700,000 in federal money to build a wharf used by Dosco at Sydney, and a $2,000,000 federal contribution to help develop bulk handling facilities at the Sydney plant.

Cuba Enters Tenth Year Under Castro's Regime

HAVANA (AP)-Fidel Castro's government now is in its 10th year, still struggling toward economic daylight and still experimenting to find its own level of communism.

There is every indication that the 10th year will be just as tough and just as unpredictable as the first nine.

Despite setbacks in 1967, the economy and the people are hanging on. Prime Minister Castro remains firmly in charge. His ideas dominate and he provides the momentum to keep things going.

How did it go in 1967 and what are the prospects for '68?

On the plus side, the government continued to diversify agriculture, sending new products overseas and lessening the island's dependence on sugar, though it still accounts for 80 per cent of Cuba's foreign exchange.

There are those who say that if production comes from only half of what Castro has planted —fruit, vegetables, coffee, tobacco, trees, rice—the country will have its breakthrough.

Perhaps more significant are gains made by the beef industry. Many experts consider this Cuba's best bet to break its one-crop syndrome. Experiments with feeding sugar derivatives to cattle are encouraging, and artificial breeding offers unbelievable possibilities in Castro's view.

Elsewhere there was progress in fish, egg and poultry production and slow advances in light industry.

There were setbacks, too, in 1967.

The sugar harvest, still the indicator of everything economic, fell below the planned goal of 7,500,000 tons despite almost ideal weather and the biggest mobilization of manpower in history. The yield of 6,100,000 tons left Castro far from his goal of 10,000,000 tons by 1970.

The outlook for the current sugar harvest seems equally unencouraging, with rising indications it may not reach the 1967 level because of a severe drought.

For the Cuban people, 1968 promises to be another year of sacrifice and shortage. Added to food and clothing rationing will be the virtual end of overtime pay and fresh demands for voluntary labor.

Starting with 1959, Cuba has observed official "years" designated successively: Liberation, agrarian reform, education planning, organization, the economy, agriculture, solidarity with Socialist countries and finally in 1967 "the year of heroic Vietnam."

Castro has described his revolution as having four stages: Years of ignorance, years of agony, years of intense labor and years of triumph. He says Cubans now are between the third and fourth stages.

One Cuban, asked what he thought 1968 would be named, said he has no idea.

"Whatever they name it," he added, "I know it will mean more work."

Picton Guards Unit To Fly to Caribbean

OAKVILLE (CP) — An 1,800-mile airlift of more than 1,000 Canadian troops for the Caribbean will begin Feb. 9 in the first stage of an exercise to test Canada's United Nations standby peacekeeping force, it was announced Thursday.

Troops from the 1st Battalion Canadian Guards at Camp Picton, Ont., and elements of the 1st Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment of London, Ont., will spend about a week on the tiny, sun-baked island of Vieques, 15 miles off the coast of Puerto Rico.

The exercise, directed by Maj.-Gen. Jacques Dextraze, who once headed Canada's UN force in The Congo, is designed to test the men as well as new equipment. A medical study will assess the effect on servicemen of rap'd transition from cold to hot climates.

East Ontario Tourist Drive Planned by Auld

OTTAWA (CP) — A marketing plan urging a high-degree of co-operation between provincial government and local interests to promote tourism in eastern Ontario was released Thursday night by Tourism Minister James Auld.

The 32-page booklet was released during an eastern Ontario presentation by the tourism department.

The booklet said a survey has shown the prime markets for eastern Ontario travel promotion are central Ontario, Quebec, New York, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

"Concentrated promotion is needed in these areas over a period of several years before any attempt is made to broaden the market."

The booklet also reached these conclusions:

1. A low level of new business indicates the present selling job is falling short of its objectives:

2. Motels and camp sites are the two major accommodation factors in tourist travel with usage concentrated in the months of July and August;

3. A greater effort is needed to move east-west traffic off of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway to induce a north-south traffic flow through the area;

4. The area's major attractions—Canada's capital, the out-of-doors and history—should be captured in a symbol to be used in advertising and promotion;

5. Local governments, chambers of commerce, regional councils and the Eastern Ontario Development Council should co-ordinate their tourist promotion.

Waterways Tourist Is Most Profitable Kind

OTTAWA (CP) — The man who enjoys waterways more than highways is the most profitable tourist for eastern Ontario, the chairman of the Ontario Economic Council said Thursday.

William Cranston told a meeting of regional tourism and economic councils that the number of registered pleasure-craft in Ontario is expected to double from 400,000 by 1980.

The Rideau waterway—a cruising adventure perhaps unparalleled anywhere in North America—when linked to the Ottawa, the 1,000 Islands and the Trent and Severn systems, could profit from the waterways enthusiast,' he suggested.

Mr. Cranston said tourism in eastern Ontario in 1967 created 12 per cent of the area's jobs.

He said municipalities in the area have yet to introduce adequate land use or building bylaws although between 1951 and 1966 the number of cottages in eastern Ontario increased by 330 per cent.

Fish Found Spreading Disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evidence suggesting that fish in waters adjacent to heavily populated areas may become infected with human disease germs and then spread them back again was reported Thursday.

Two U.S. government scientists said that in white perch netted in rivers flowing into Chesapeake Bay on the Atlantic Coast they detected antibodies to a number of germs that cause such human intestinal or pulmonary ills as para-typhoid fever, bacillary dysentery, "pseudo-tuberculosis," and certain other infections.

They said this suggests the fish had been infected with such human microbes. Their theory is that the fish were infected by exposure to water contaminated with excrement from humans and other mammals.

In a report to the technical journal Science, they said such fish might pose a direct hazard to man through their handling and ingestion, "and indirectly by releasing infectious bacteria into waters that may be considered safe according to usual standards of analysis."

No Vulture Stance

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario minister of tourism and information said Thursday there will be no crash program to lure United States visitors to Ontario this year despite President Johnson's request that Americans restrict their travel to the Western Hemisphere.

James Auld said the reaction in Canada to the president's New Year's Day request "was perhaps just a little optimistic." Mr. Auld added that he was "not prepared to adopt a vulture-like stance."

Mr. Auld presented a tourist marketing plan for eastern Ontario to a gathering of regional tourist and economic councils.

He told the meeting he believes his department will be able to do a "solid, effective job for Ontario without the need for any spur-of-the-moment or short-term measures."

The World Does Improve

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It was a warm June 2, the beginning of a "long, hot summer."

It was one of the largest cities in the world.

In the streets there began, quietly enough, a demonstration on civil liberties.

As the demonstration gathered momentum, it turned into a riot.

For six days and nights, 60,000 rioters raged through the streets — and through the central part of the city.

More than 800 persons were killed or injured.

There was an orgy of senseless destruction, plundering and looting.

Jails were opened, and prisoners let out by the hundreds.

The city's largest bank was invaded and pillaged.

Government offices were raided.

Tens of thousands of people wandered the streets in gangs, and even the military were powerless to restrain them.

Nearly a week later, the riot subsided out of sheer exhaustion.

Only 21 rioters were executed, and only a tiny fraction of the plunderers and burners were ever punished at all.

The dates of this disaster were June 2 to 8, 1780.

The city was London, England.

The demonstration was by Protestants against Catholics.

They rose to protest the removal of civil restrictions against Catholics in England; they felt that if the Catholics were allowed civil rights, they would soon take over the country.

They felt that Catholics must forever be treated like second-class citizens.

And when the British government began to relax the severity of the laws discriminating against Catholics, they went amok.

This tragic incident became known as the "Gordon Riots," because Lord George Gordon, the English agitator, was President of the Protestant Association, which would have denied all such rights to Catholics.

All this happened less than 200 years ago. It is inconceivable today that Protestants and Catholics would war against one another.

Will we have to wait another 190 years before racial riots are as obsolete as religious riots? For they will be, have no doubt of it. Our grand-children will look upon Detrois and Milwaukee as we look upon London — with wonder, sadness, and disgust.

But must it take that long? Have we learned nothing . . . nothing?

Fifty Men Called Back to Work at Point Anne Cement Plant

By HARRY MULHALL

Staff Reporter

The idled Canada Cement Company plant at Point Anne may be back in production within the promised time.

A labor spokesman said today 50 men were due to be called back Monday — the advance guard of production crews to be back on the job in early March.

More than 130 men were involved in a layoff that began Jan. 1 as the company temporarily suspended production. At that time, resumption of work was promised within two months.

No company spokesman could be reached for comment this morning, but the labor officials confirmation indicated the back-to-work promise had been kept on schedule.

"About 50 are going back Monday morning", said Almon Lloyd, president of the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers local 219 here. "It looks like they'll be back in production by March 4".

The idled workers drew up to 80 per cent of take-home pay during the layoff — with standard unemployment compensation augmented by company work benefits.

Nonetheless, the financial cutback was no reason for rejoicing, the labor official indicated.

"This has been quite an upset for our people. It was the first time its happened to the majority of them", he said.

The New Year layoff, the biggest in recent company history — was blamed on declining demand for cement in the Toronto area, main market for the Point

Flood Sweeps Tot to Death From Arms of Her Mother

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Colder weather moved into southern Ontario today, bringing relief to flood-stricken areas.

The flooding, caused by warm temperatures and heavy rains, hit hardest at Chatham and other areas in Kent County.

At least one death was attributed the floods.

Kimberley Beattie, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Beattie of St. Marys, Ont., was swept from her mother's grasp by the swollen waters of the Avon River, 12 miles southwest of Stratford.

The child got caught up in the current after she and her mother climbed from their car which had dropped into a hole at the river's edge. The body has not been recovered.

At Goderich, two men tried unsuccessfully to save a pony from drowning and spent more than three hours in a boat on the flooding Maitland River before being rescued.

More than 50 Kent County families were forced to evacuate their homes.

About two blocks in Dresden were covered with from two to five feet of water and a boat was used to move persons from the town of 3,200, about 12 miles north of Chatham.

The Ontario department of energy and resources management, which issued a flood warning Friday, said flood conditions were not expected to improve in Kent County until late today.

A petition 43 days ago by Chatham homeowners for remedial action concerning flooding was turned down by city officials with the statement that the flooding was a rare occurrence that would not happen again in 40 years.

At Sarnia, the major north-south street was closed to through traffic because of floods. Low lands at Watford, 35 miles east of Sarnia, were inundated with from six inches to a foot of water.

37 Injured

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Ten cars of the Santa Fe Railway's crack passenger train, the Super Chief, were derailed in the Kansas City railway yards today. At least 37 persons were taken to hospitals.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A gradual clearing condition is slowly working its way eastward across the Great Lakes. Clear skies will last about 24 to 36 hours; then a new area of cloud is expected to spread on Sunday, ahead of a disturbance from the Rockies.

South Korea Requests More American Troops

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea has formally asked the United States for more U.S. troops to guard against invasion, government sources said today. There were hints South Korea might consider withdrawing its forces from Vietnam if the appeal was turned down.

There was no immediate comment from Washington or U.S. officials here. Their attention apparently was focused on a third meeting with North Korea reported to be scheduled for today at Panmunjom on the Pueblo incident.

Since the U.S. intelligence ship was seized Jan. 23 by North Korea there have been reports that two American divisions might be sent to Korea to reinforce the 50,000 U.S. troops now stationed here.

The Korean sources said the government is also seeking troops from its 15 other Korean War allies and that Foreign Minister Cho Kyu-hah had sounded out the ambassadors of France, Australia and Turkey on the subject.

Saigon Quieter, Hue Fight Rages

Frontier Drive Is Expected

SAIGON (AP) — Fighting subsided in Saigon today but still raged in Hue as the Viet Cong pressed their biggest offensive of the war into a fifth day with fresh attacks on at least eight other cities.

North Vietnamese gunners also opened up with the heaviest artillery bombardment in several weeks along South Vietnam's northern frontier, where U.S. troops are watching tensely in what they call "the big wait."

In the current phase—attacks against South Vietnamese cities —a senior U.S. official said the Viet Cong threw 36,000 men against 35 populated centres. They suffered a "substantial military defeat," he said, but still have the "capacity for a second wave of attacks."

The fell picture still was not clear. In Saigon, the guerrillas may have gone back into hiding. Reports from Hue listed some gains by the U.S. and South Vietnamese troops, but the U.S. command said U.S. marines who fought their way to the jail found the Communists had released 2,000 to 3,000 prisoners.

Canadians Believed In VC Hands

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. W. J. Newell, district superintendent of the Christian and Missionary Alliance in Canada, said Friday the church's mission at Dalat in South Vietnam may have been overrun by the Viet Cong.

Mr. Newell said Dr. and Mrs. John Hall of Ottawa and several other Canadians are believed to have been stationed at the mission, which normally houses 14 missionaries.

The Halls were to have been on a week's leave from the mission, but their whereabouts was not known.

LBJ View Questioned By Critics

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's assessment that the Viet Cong uprising this week did not achieve its military and psychological goals in South Vietnam has been challenged by congressional critics of his war policies.

But Congress members who favor those policies gave the president solid backing for his statement at a Friday news conference that the Viet Cong lost an attempt to overthrow the Saigon government and force the United States to accept a coalition regime.

Critics contended the fighting disclosed lack of popular support for Saigon's elected government. They said it also demonstrated American-South Vietnamese inability to defend even strongly-held cities.

Bomarc To Be Junked

WASHINGTON (CP)—The U.S., in consultation with Canada, plans to start this year on a $12,000,000,000 overhaul of the continental defence system against aircraft from the Soviet Union, China and Cuba.

This will mean, Defence Secretary Robert McNamara has indicated, junking most if not all the existing system, including the Pine Tree and DEW radar lines in northern Canada and the Bomarc missile which has such a controversial record in Canadian military and political history.

McNamara also has established a "continental" planning staff to ensure that missile and bomber defences are usefully integrated.

McNamara, in a lengthy report to Congress made public Thursday, placed an airborne radar system—called AWACS, for Airborne Warning and Congrol System—at the centre of the proposed revamping.

"We have consulted with the Canadian government, which has already indicated that it intends to continue its co-operation in the air defence of the continent," the report says.

Discussions have been held on two counts—the new aircraft-defence system, and extending the accident of the new unified Ca-Agreement expiring May 12.

In Ottawa, Defence Minister Cadieux said Friday that technical discussions are being held with the U.S. on the eventual phasing out of Canada's two Bomarc missile bases and the DEW line.

Plane Crashes Amid Houses

TORONTO (CP) — A twin-engine navy aircraft on a routine flight crashed into the backyard of a suburban Toronto home Friday night, killing the four-man crew.

Killed were: Sub-Lt. W. J. Boles, Dartmouth, N.S.; Sub-Lt. T. E. Kaersvang, Ingersoll, Ont.; Sub-Lt. M. G. McRadu, Saskatoon, Sask.; AB M. Schofield of Islington, Ont.

All were stationed at CFB Shearwater.

A passenger who got on at Shearwater, left the plane when it stopped at St. Hubert, Que.

Earlier reports that a fifth person was believed missing proved false after police completed a thorough search of the wreckage.

The Tracker, from the Armed Forces base at Shearwater, N.S., apparently overshot Downsview airport. It was circling to make another landing when it smashed to the ground in what eyewitnesses said was a nose-dive.

A four-year-old girl, Gail Chaiton, asleep in a bed 10 feet from where the plane struck, was not injured.

Her father Jacob, 44, dashed for her bedroom when he heard an explosion, and slipped and fell, cracking two ribs.

Alberta, Manitoba Reject Medicare

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Alberta and Manitoba Friday joined four other provinces in telling the federal government to count them out when the national medical care insurance plan goes into effect July 1.

Premier Manning announced the Alberta government decision at a news conference while his Manitoba counterpart, Walter Weir, released in Winnipeg a telegram to Prime Minister Pearson and outlined his position at a meeting in Minnedosa, Man.

While the results were the same, the reasons for rejecting the medical care partnership were slightly different. Alberta is opposed on the grounds it is "fundamently unjust" to use public funds to pay insurance premiums for those able to pay their own. Manitoba is opposed because it is not voluntary.

Other provinces that said earlier they would not participate are Ontario, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. Quebec said its own plan won't be ready in time.

The federal plan has just had a review by the federal government but its decision to go ahead on schedule was not altered. It calls for the provinces and the federal government to share equally the cost of medical care premiums and for provinces to provide coverage for at least 90 per cent of their residents.

Premier Weir, while saying Manitoba is deferring participation for at least a year, made it clear the province wants its share of any new tax revenues collected to pay for the program.

His telegram said:

"It should be made clear that the management of medical care is the constitutional responsibility of the provinces. Because of this, Manitoba will insist that if federal taxes are imposed to support a medicare scheme in other provinces, (a) proportionate share of such taxation must be paid to Manitoba."

Mr. Manning also drew attention to the provision for taxing citizens in all provinces, including non-participants, to pay the federal share of the program. He expected "violent opposition" to this feature and said his government "will be among the opponents."

The federal plan would cost about $60,000,000 in Alberta and would represent an increase of $12,000,000 to $14,000,000 over existing expenditures for the province. Total estimated cost in Manitoba is about $35,000,000.

Russ Paulley, Manitoba New Democratic Party leader, said he would call for a provincial plebiscite on the government's decision because Manitobans should not be "deprived of $17,500,000 of federal aid for the plan."

No Shadow For Groundhog Yesterday

That old weather forecasting groundhog who traditionally peeks his head out of winter hibernation on February 2, was apparently wrong again.

Yesterday was "Groundhog Day" and groundhogs throughout the land were supposed to wake from their winter's sleep to take a look at the weather. If the day was cloudy it was supposed to mean winter is over; if he saw his shadow it meant another six weeks winter.

Well, yesterday the groundhog didn't see his shadow, but apparently this didn't mean winter is over.

At any rate last night saw a temperature drop of close to 20 degrees and this morning a fresh blanket of snow on the ground.

And in the Quinte area we got off lucky.

Up at Sault Saint Marie from six to eight inches of snow fell and up at Watson Lake in the Yukon record low temperatures for the winter were recorded — a chilly 69 degrees below zero.

Lots to Talk About

Public Speaking Contest for Trenton

By MAURICE SWITZER

TRENTON — A group of grade sixers had a lot to talk about last night.

The first of three word-filled evenings came as junior elementary school pupils — 26 of them — chatted in the 1968 version of the Royal Canadian Legion public speaking contest.

Next Friday, grades seven and eight oratorial aspirants take over the Branch 110 auditorium stage, and the final installment locally comes Feb. 23, with the addresses of junior and senior high schoolers.

With a booking of 70 speeches in all, local Legion contest organizers had to adopt a multi-evening format.

At this stage of competition prizes come in the form of plaques or certificates of merit.

High stakes come in Legion Zone District, or provincial competition, when the youthful speakers vie for substantial cash or bursary awards.

Not just invaluable experience for the participants, evenings like last night's in the Legion auditorium are entertaining to the parents and schoolmate audience, who heard five-minute discourses on everything from polar bear to Lester Bowles Pearson; and from bacteria to Bobby Hull.

Picture, if you will 26 nervous, memory-wracked faces of 12 and under, each waiting a turn to stand alone on that very big-looking stage in front of what must seem like millions of people . . .

"For thousands of years, the red planet Mars . . ." began the evening's initial offering, from a confident little blond, green-frocked orator.

A few seats shuffle . . . one parent looks with bursting pride at the other.

". . . astronomers peering through their telescopes have puzzled. . ."

". . . and Mr. Pearson asked the reporter — don't you mean I've been nominated for a Nobel Prize. . ."

"Look mommy, there's Michael," a gleeful little voice pipes up from the back of the hall.

". . . for an Eskimo. . .er. . . um. . .for an Eskimo. . ."

Speakers aren't interrupted unnecessarily — doors to the auditorium remain closed until an address is completed.

". . .refusing to admit the possibility of defeat, Hull scored three goals in a display. . ."

The chairman informs the restless audience "Halfway through our program we'll pause — for those who need it."

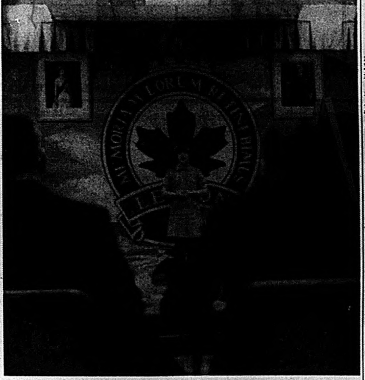
". . . was a Dutch scientist who discovered bacteria. . ."

A group of very dirty little boys enters to catch glimpses of scholarly schoolchums undergoining the ordeal on stage.

". . .he has not only sketched his way to fame and fortune, but. . ."

A short-lived agony — maybe a verbal stumble here or there, or a memory lapse in a phrase that came off perfectly in front of the bedroom mirror — but it's all over now.

Unless, of course, you're a winner!



A Budding Politician, Perhaps?

No Charges Pressed Locally

Clothing Thieves Arrested

A routine traffic check on a Toronto street may have put the brakes on a province-wide clothes-stealing racket which mauled Belleville merchants.

Toronto police said today they had begun a crackdown with the arrest of three men.

The arrests came after police found men's suits worth $25,000 in the back of a pickup truck during a traffic check.

The trio are Torontonians, Donald McManys, 30, and Gerald Bailek, 22, were charged Thursday with breaking and entering. Frank Herseg, 30, was charged with possession of stolen goods.

Police say that last year, about $500,000 worth of stolen suits were sold through retail outlets which knowingly or otherwise received the clothing from the thieves.

The theft trail stretches through 34 towns from Windsor to Sudbury to the Quebec border.

In Belleville, Dover's Men's Wear store was quietly looted of an estimated $25,000 in high - quality clothing.

Plaza merchant, Joseph Burke was victimized twice in six weeks. New Year's Day suits valued at about $10,000 disappeared, following a pre-Christmas theft of $4,000 in wool goods.

Inspector Harold Reid, Belleville's acting police chief, said this morning no charges have yet been pressed in the local robberies.

City police have yet to confer with metropolitan and provincial police investigators.

"We've got to get all the details yet," he added.

Meantime, the OPP special services branch has begun corelating information on the thefts to assist municipal forces across the province.

Provincial police hope that by compiling all information relating to clothing thefts and acting as an information bank for local forces they can effectively combat the racket.

The thieves usually pick a store's lock and take only the best clothing, said a police inspector.

After changing the label on a suit, the thieves look for a suitable buyer and can sell their wares, for instance, with a story that a brother is going out of business.

Police say a suit that retails for $100 can bring the thief $25 from a store owner and a night's profits might amount to $15,000.

Belleville Gets Set for 'Spring Thaw'

Bellevillians get their annual relief from the dreary dragginess of winter in less than two weeks time.

Spring Thaw is on the way —checking in here Feb. 13 at Centennial Secondary School with its parade of professional laughmakers.

The celebrated Canadian revue also has something to celebrate this year — its 21st birthday.

This year, Bellevillians will have had the opportunity of sharing four of those shows with the rest of Canada.

Its lightheartedness has been annually made available here by an organization with a serious community purpose — the Belleville branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Inaugurated in 1963 the association since has worked long and hard to assist the cause of mental health in its community.

Its main project has been of vital social significance to Bellevillians.

With no space available in the city's General Hospital for a psychiatric clinic, the association assumed responsibility and began renting quarters.

It was the first clinic of its kind in the Quinte area.

Any funds raised by Spring Thaw productions here go towards supporting that project.

However, this is a crucial year for the organization.

When it assumed the rental scheme, the association estimated it would only be a two-year project.

Now, it unexpectedly appears stretching into a third term, an association spokesman said, while work on the new hospital wing which includes quarters for a psychiatric clinic, is completed.

"Spring Thaw is our main money - making project," pointed out the spokesman.

However, it's probably the only serious community cause with such a light touch when it comes to raising funds.

Spring Thaw is now a tradition of Canadian light theatre.

This year's edition, which opened recently in Newfoundland, is a fast - paced production of 28 sketches, blackouts and musical numbers.

Under satirical fire as the topical program items this year are the House of Commons, Charles de Gaulle, the Dominion Drama Festival.

More Marching Mothers Are Needed for Canvas

They're looking for Marching Mothers.

Still being sought are women volunteers to help the March of Dimes canvass in Belleville and district Monday night.

Canvassers are needed for volunteers on Belleville's East and West Hills.

March of Dimes funds help support rehabilitation centres across Ontario for the handicapped.

Local volunteers for the canvass can call Mrs. Bennett at 968-7551.

Congregational Meeting

BRIDGE STREET UNITED CHURCH

The annual congregational meeting of Bridge Street United Church was held Tuesday evening in the Sunday School auditorium.

Dr. Harry Davis was chairman and Dr. J. Demeza recorded the minutes.

The meeting was opened by a memorial devotional period, during which a period of silent remembrance was observed in memory of those members who had passed away during the year, following which the annual report was presented for approval.

The Board of Session report for 1967 showed a total membership of 1682, a slight increase over 1966. Of some concern was the fact that 467 of these members were non-resident. Appropriate steps are being taken to reduce this number.

It was with a great deal of satisfaction that the Board of Session announced that it was recommending Mr. Brian Yealland, a member of Bridge Street United Church, as a candidate for the Christian Ministry. Brian is a second year Arts student at Victoria University. He will be presented for acceptance to the Belleville Presbytery when it meets at Bridge Street Church on February 13.

The nominating committee of the Board of Session presented the following names for approval by the congregation: to the Board of Session, re-elected were: P. L. Allcorn, C. E. Meyers, M. J. Lovelace, C. L. Massey, F. D. Pringle, D. G. Williams, G. Shaver, D. Thompson, Dr. R. Edwards, Dr. A. E. Miles and R. Cruickshank. New members included R. J. McKnight, C. H. James, Dr. Elizabeth Scott and Mrs. Ralph Morden. The last two named are the first women ever to be elected as elders on the Board of Session in Bridge Street United Church.

Re-elected to the board of stewards were: D. G. Burr, J. Parrott, L. Jones, P. C. McGuire, G. O. E. Moore, F. B. Deacon, Wm. Belch Sr. and Wm. Holway. New members included Mrs. Ralph Walsh and Mr. Wm. McBride.

The financial report of the committee of stewards was most encouraging. Total envelope offerings amounted to $45,214.70 as compared to $40,569.69 for 1966. A slight deficit of $3,186.03 was incurred chiefly due to the fact that $6,984.23 was spent on extraordinary building repairs during the year.

Total contributions to the Building Fund amounted to $9,875.96 and reduced the overall debt to $35,700. The original debt was slightly in excess of $200,000. This steady reduction in the building fund debt is a source of great pride to all members of the congregation.

The Director of Christian Education, Mrs. Ross Jeffries, in reporting on the many youth organziations, felt that the only area of concern was in connection with declining Sunday School attendance among teen agers. The Board of Session will study this problem in some detail in the near future.

The Missionary and Maintenance Fund objective of $22,000 was reached by the close of the year. Included in this amount was $1,486. specifically donated for the "World's Hungry".

The organization of United Church Women raised a total of $7,157.61, of which amount $3,580. was allocated to the Unified Budget Fund. Two bales of clothing for Overseas Relief, totalling 384 lbs. were sent to Toronto, along with a cheque for $35. to help defray shipping expenses.

The AOTS Men's Club was active during the year and raised an amount slightly in excess of $1,000.

After the annual report was adopted as presented, tribute was paid to Dr. Davis and Rev. Alfred Poulter for their dedicated service of Christian ministry and leadership in the Church and community.

Refreshments were served by the United Church Women.

REDUUCE BEAUTY

MOSCOW (AP) — Tape-measure traditions of Western beauty contests were criticized in the Soviet trade union publication by a woman writer who said they reduce beauty "to a simple matter of arithmetic." Iriana Yermolayeva said contests should focus instead on brains and skill. She noted Russian girls in 1967 won such international titles as Best Stewardess, Miss Spirituality, Miss Madame Butterfly and Miss Amazon.

Danish Princess Weds German Prince Today

COPENHAGEN Reuters — Princess Benedikte of Denmark marries a German prince in a castle chapel today surrounded by a glittering array of European royalty gathered for the second Danish royal wedding in eight months.

Princess Benedikte has a reputation of being shy and was overshadowed recently by her sisters — Crown Princess Margrethe, heir to the throne, and Princess Anne-Marie, wife of King Constantine of Greece.

But today the 23-year-old princess will be firmly in the lime-light as she marries Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg in the chapel of Fredensborg Castle, the Danish royal family's 18th-century summer home about 25 miles north of here.

Among the guests will be Constantine, who arrived here Thursday on his first trip outside Rome since flying there after his abortive counter-coup in December.

Scandinavian royalty present will include King Olav and Crown Prince Harald of Norway and King Gustaf Adolph, Crown Prince Carl Gustaf, Princess Sybilla and Princess Christina of Sweden.

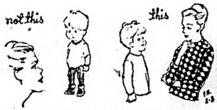
From Britain come Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother and Mr. and Mrs. John Ambler. Mrs. Ambler, grand-daughter of King Gustaf Adolph, is Princess Margaretha of Sweden.

Danish Queen Ingrid is Prince Richard's godmother and he was educated here. He first met his bride in the autumn of 1966. They became engaged last March.

The princess, considered by many to be the most beautiful of Denmark's three royal sisters, has a flair for clothes and is charming and forthcoming in her public appearances although shy in private.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Bobby, I can't stand it when you jump around and act so wild. For goodness sake, quiet down!"

Child: "Don't you like me, Mommy?"

Mother: "We don't race and jump in the house, but you may go out in the back yard and run around if you wish."

Children need correction and discipline, but it should be given in a kind and friendly manner. A child should realize it is his actions, not he, that you dislike.

"Opportunity and Responsibility" was the theme of the sixth annual meeting of Belleville Presbyterial United Church Women held recently at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, Stirling, Presbyterial president, presided for all the sessions.

The theme speaker for the opening session was Rev. Elgie E. M. Joblin, associate secretary, Board of Home Missions.

Mr. Joblin spoke on the work of the Home Missions Board in Canada.

Special music was supplied by the Young People's Handbell choir of Picton United Church under the direction of Mr. A. A. Benvie.

Greetings were brought by Rev. J. B. Small of St. Paul's United Church and by Mr. D. R. Williams, chairman of Belleville Presbytery. A fellowship hour closed the evening session.

On the second morning greetings were extended by Mrs. D. R. Williams, president St. Paul's United Church Women and by Mrs. R. C. Ellis, president, Bay of Quinte Conference United Church Women.

An interesting feature at this time was a presentation "Have You Missed An Opportunity?" with Mrs. F. J. Smith, Newburg as spokesman and co-ordinator. This was presented in five parts. A skit "Encounter" by Cherry Valley United Church Women; a skit "So What's New?" by King St. Trenton United Church Women; a playlet "You've Got To Be Taught" by Selby United Church Women. Two readings were also given.

The afternoon session opened with worship conducted by Marmora United Church Women. A solo was rendered by Mrs. Bruce Glendinning, Stirling.

The theme speaker was Rev. Brian Thrasher of the North Kingston Parish who spoke of his work with the youth in the heavier populated section of downtown Kingston. He related some of the methods and projects used in trying to meet the needs of these young people.

Mr. Williams conducted the installation of officers and the following officers were installed: past president, Mrs. K. E. Weaver, Stirling; president, Mrs. H. Pierson, Wellington; recording secretary, Mrs. Henry Gray, Picton; corresponding secretary, Miss Helen Sexsmith, Napanee; treasurer, Mrs. E. Ward, Picton; vice-presidents for the regions: Hastings South, Mrs. Norman Campey, Carrying Place; Hastings Centre, Mrs. George Williams, Springbrook; Prince Edward East, Mrs. T. H. Kerr, Picton.

Holy communion was conducted at the close.

Lifeline Counsellors Hear Psychiatrist

Lifeline Counsellors met at Holloway St. United Church Jan. 31 for the monthly training session.

The 24-hour a day telephone service for the troubled and depressed has been in operation since October. About 35 volunteer counsellors are now manning the telephone and another 25 are taking the 17-week training course.

Counsellors and new trainees heard an address by Dr Evelyn Williamson on the recognition of emotional and mental illness.

After outlining the types of mental illness, along with statistics on their incidence in the United States, the speaker suggested some practical pointers for telephone counsellors.

She explained that to have a helping relationship with a caller, the listener must be empathic, respectful and genuinely caring enough to have a supportive role.

This means the counsellor must know himself and his prejudices, discipline his feelings and learn the art of creative listening in order to help the caller remove the roadblocks in his thinking. The role is not that of an advice-giver, but of an available listener.

Following the address the group reviewed a film illustrating that under stress later in life the problems of childhood may recur in a different form.

News was received from Australia this week that the Belleville Lifeline has been accepted as an affiliate of Lifeline International. The local group has processed over 100 calls since October.

BIG SEASON

LONDON (AP) — Christie's London art auctioneers, reported a record turnover for the autumn season. They said prices paid were 50 per cent higher than in the similar period last year and most of the boost was from the sale of Monet's La Terrasse a Ste. Addresse to the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art for $1,411,200. Everything was up — paintings, silver, porcelain, jewelry and wine, they said.

AUSTRALIA — FIRST HAND

"The store around the corner from me sells Sara Lee cakes, made in Bramalea, Ontario." — Judi Linton.

* * *

Upon arriving in Sydney, Australia, Judi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Linton, 345 Bleecker Ave., was fortunate enough to obtain a nice flat, which was about a five minute ride from the Girls' High School where she teaches, and twenty minutes from Sydney's downtown.

Her flat has a bay window which overlooks the harbor, considered one of the world's most beautiful, and during the day big ships, yachts and sailboats may be seen, while at night all the lights are on, a magnificent sight, and yacht clubs dot the coast.

Sydney, which is about twice the size of Montreal, has several fine residential areas but the shopping area is not particularly big cityish, mainly she finds because high-rise buildings are just now coming into existence. The shops are English in style, and supermarkets are small, while delicatessens, which are small grocery stores with fresh vegetables, fruits and butcher shops are popular, but she finds the food costs high and writes:

"An apple sells for 5 cents; a loaf of bread, smaller than ours is 21 cents; a pint of milk 20 cents; a dozen eggs, 65 cents (remember that their dollar is worth 20 cents more than ours); five pounds of potatoes are 40 cents. Pork is hard to get and chops are 75 cents a pound if you can find them.

"Everything is packaged in small lots: pints of milk, half pounds of butter, six ounces of peanut butter, two oz. of jam. It's hardly worth packaging," Trudi feels and mentions that paper bags are scarce. "To get a paper bag is like pulling teeth. If anything, they will grudginly give you a small carton to carry your groceries in."

Such tings as a radio battery costs 52 cents, while the laundry — "even the laundromat is 40 cents instead of 25 cents" and she finds drug stores or chemists as they are called, most expensive. "A simple pressed powder with no compact is $1.15."

On the other hand, clothes are less expensive. "You can get a cute summer dress for around ten dollars and a pair of good looking shoes for six, while silk sells for about three dollars a yard. Nylons don't run, they split, but wear well, and of feminine interest she says that the big thing there now "are those Swiss straw bags that cost a fortune at home if you can get them. Here you can get the spools of straw (every color imaginable) and you can make them up yourself. You crochet them and put a lining in them. You can buy the handles to go on them. I'm making myself one — a white one . . .

Shopping down town in interesting in one way. Between streets there are umerous arcades filled with small shops. In one block I counted four arcades.

However in one of the suburbs is a shopping centre which when it was built two years ago, was the world's largest indoor shopping plaza. It's very similar to Yorkdale, except it is on three floors, instead of just one. Also, it is almost impossible to get to by public transportation as Yorkdale is. But the shopping is almost betther than downtown — with fewer small shops.

There is a fantastic centrepiece in the foyer. It is made to look like perpetually falling rain in the shape of a column. Actually, it is made up of thin harp-like strings. Water is mixed with glycerine to make it oozy. This mixture rolls slowly down the wire and as it does, it beads every two inches on each of the hundreds of wires. This mixture is continually pumped back up and around.

It is most effective!"

Some Are Incapable Of Showing Affection

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Yesterday, my mother criticized me sharply because I always seem to be 'hanging on' my boyfriend. She said it looks cheap and I ought to stop it.

ANN LANDERS

I went to my room and thought over what she had said. I decided she was absolutely right. Then I asked myself, why do I do it? The answer seemed clear — because I am starved for affection.

I've always wanted my mother's approval more than anything in the world. She has never shown me that she cares about me in the way most mothers do. The mothers of my friends caress their daughters and kiss them hello and goodbye, but my mother has never done this. Once, when I asked her why she never showed me any affection, she sai, "I guess I am not the type."

Please print my letter. My mother never misses your column and it might be a good thing if she saw this. — ARCTIC CIRCLE.

DEAR CIRCLE: Hugging and kissing is not proof of love. It may well be that your mother feels more deeply about you than some mothers who are forever caressing and petting their children.

Some people are virtually incapable of expressing affection. I feel sorry for them because often they are painfully aware of this limitation but they are too inhibited and self conscious to do anything about it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My first marriage was such a miserable failure I felt as if I was not worth the powder to blow me to hell. Two years later, I met a man who wanted to marry me. I was determined that a would be the perfect wife.

My husband says he is satisfied with our marriage. Well, he should be satisfied because I have bottled up every emotion that might make him angry or uncomfortable.

Whenever we have a disagreement, I smile and say, "Yes, dear, you are right." When I want to do something and he doesn't want me to, I always give in without a word. No matter what — he has his way.

This has been going on for six years and now I am about to explode. My throat has been so tight for six months that I feel as if I have a goiter although the doctor says it is nothing but "nerves."

Now, I am getting pains in my chest and my heart pounds so fast I have trouble breathing. Is it possible that this is also nerves? What should I do? My husband thinks all psychiatrists are quacks. He will not let me go to one although I have a feeling it's what I need. Can you help me? — SINKING FAST.

DEAR SINKING: Go to your family doctor and tell him exactly what you have told me. He will surely recommend a specialist and suggest a clinic where you can be treated. Six years of masking hostilities with a smile would drive anyone around the bend. I'm surprised you haven't cracked before now. Get going at once and good luck to you, dear.

English Figurines Pictured Exciting Personality Subjects

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Staffordshire potters often made figurines depicting the important figures of the day. Royalty, murderers, politicians, stage stars, and other celebrities were popular subjects. The factories made figures with a popular appeal that would sell quickly.

An unusual piece of English Staffordshire portrait pottery was of Isaac Van Amburgh, an American animal trainer. He performed with his animals in London, England, in 1839. He appeared in the cage with lions, tigers, and a lamb. A figurine was made showing the tamer and his animals about 1840.

Q. Our teen-agers can't understand us when we claim that hoops are old time toys. They are not just plastic rings used to spin around the waist. Could you tell the history of the hoop and some of the games it inspired?

A. Hoops have been popular toys for generations. The Indians had a game in which a hoop was rolled across the field and each boy tried to shoot an arrow through the centre. The Indian papoose was often entertained by a hoop that held dangling beads above his head. This was just an early version of our present day cradle gym.

During the nineteenth century in America the hoop was rolled with a stick. It became such a fad in Philadelphia about 1812 that pedestrians had to be careful when walking on the sidewalk.

Manufacturers developed a method of packing different sized hoops with one inside the other. This made easier and cheaper shipping. Thousands of hoops of varying diameters could be found throughout the country.

"Hoop and Graces" was a popular game. Two girls with two hoops and two sticks played the game. Each girl rolled her hoop toward the other girl who tried to catch it on the stick and roll it back. If a hoop fell a point was lost.

The idea of a hoop revolving around the waist seems first to have been used commercially with the plastic hula hoop about 1952.

Bad Posture Causes Aches and Pains

Dear Doris: You got to the heart of the matter in Shorty's letter — about postural support during work. She was the little switchboard operator with the back-breaking problem of reaching her plugs or the floor.

Posture is not just sitting or standing straight; it includes using (rather than abusing) the body mechanically, correctly, with minimal stress and strain, in whatever job a person does.

Often people do not realize they are abusing themselves until an ache or pain develops. This is more common than is realized, and many times could have been prevented.— —Barbara — Your Favorite Physiotherapist.

Dear Barbara: And the person who is too tall stoops until be aches. The one with a sprained ankle limps, until he throws his whole back out of kilter.

Many of us bend over a desk without straightening up for hours — and court dowager's hump even at eighteen. Or they slump in a chair. This is so common I distribute a leaflet about it called "Don't Slump Into a Hump", which readers may have for ten cents and a stamped envelope.

Dear Doris: In May 1966 you gave me the address of Clubs in California and suggested that I write to find out how to start a club in Ottawa.

Well, I did write and now we are organized and just about to be chartered. It was not easy but with the help of a few dedicated women the club is now in existence.

Doris, I am sending you literature explaining how Toastmistress Club can help a woman improve herself. I thank you for your advice. Grateful.

Dear Grateful: You are more than welcome. Some of our Timid Souls would scarcely believe the plus value that a club like Toastmistress can add to a personality.

Reading from the folder you sent me, members are helped to overcome timidity, expand their vocabulary, be good conversationalists, evaluate what is heard and read, express opinions with poise, cultivate resources within themselves, make life exciting.

I'll send details to anyone writing in.

Dear Doris: I would like to know the name of the author of the poem called "Autumn", which begins as follows:

"Along the line of smokey hills
The crimson forest stands
And all day long the blue jay calls
Throughout the autumn lands."

I believe there are two more verses. Every autumn I vow to find out who wrote it, but forget until the spell of falling colored leaves brings back memories of my youth on the farm — plowing with horses and hearing the call of geese flying south.

Also the chug! chug! of the steam thrasher coming up the road. Most of all the smell of the freshly plowed earth. — Calling for the Author.

Dear Calling: You sound like a poet yourself. Can anybody help?

California Cooks Prepare Tuna Salad Fit for A King

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: In California we enjoyed a lovely salad made with lettuce, large chunks of the very best canned tuna, lots of sour cream, sections of tomatoes, salt and pepper. I have made this up since then but there seems to be something missing. Any suggestions? — Betty B.

ANSWER: Yes, I know and have made the salad.

TUNA SALAD ROYALE
(Serves 4)

- One 7-oz. can solid tuna, drained and coarsely flaked
- 2 tbsps. drained, chopped sweet pickle
- 1-3 cup chopped inner celery
- 2 tbsps. best quality mayonnaise (not salad dressing)
- 2 tbsps. dairy sour cream (or a little more)
- 1 or 2 tsps. lemon juice
- 4 firm but ripe medium tomatoes, peeled and quartered
- Lettuce cups

In a bowl combine drained, coarsely flaked solid pack tuna with the pickle and celery. Add lemon juice to mayonnaise and sour cream. Gently mix with tuna and vegetables. Taste. You may want to season it lightly with salt and white pepper and a little Accent. Dry four well-cupped lettuce leaves and place in centre of salad plates. (Green glass ones are beautiful.) In each place a fourth of the tuna salad. Surround evenly with 4 tomato quarters. Pass additional mayonnaise at table.

Constitutional Parley Faces Uncertain Fate

OTTAWA (CP) — Eleven men will gather at a conference table on Parliament Hill Monday to find out whether there is any prospect of agreement between Ottawa and the provinces on a first cautious step towards a new Canadian constitution.

The meeting of heads of government could become a landmark in the nation's history ranking with the conferences of the Fathers of Confederation more than a century ago. But it could also collapse quickly into discord.

Prime Minister Pearson, just nine weeks from political retirement, will launch the conference by laying before the 10 premiers federal proposals for constitutional change. Each of them will react in turn with his own province's ideas.

Core of the federal approach will be the draft charter of human rights revealed Thursday by Justice Minister Trudeau. Ottawa's view is that unless agreement is possible on something as fundamental as human rights there will be no use tackling constitutional reform in other fields.

Main point in the federal charter is a gradual implementation of French language and education rights by every province.

Initial reaction Thursday from the premiers indicated there will be considerable opposition to the federal stand that individual rights and freedoms must be the first order of business in this long-awaited review of the British North America Act.

Premier Johnson of Quebec has insisted priority be given to enlarging powers of the provinces.

Dief Says JFK Wanted To Run Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker said Friday that the late President John F. Kennedy "wanted to run Canada and that's all there is to it."

Mr. Diefenbaker was asked in an interview with The Canadian Press why he thought the U.S. State department had issued its statement Jan. 30, 1963, saying that Canada was not pulling its weight in North American defence.

"Because Kennedy was not able to push us around—and I used the word push advisedly," Mr. Diefenbaker replied promptly.

LaMarsh Comes to Boil, Sears Cowan, Gregoire

OTTAWA (CP) — State Secretary Judy LaMarsh, coming to a boil over the long Commons debate on broadcasting, let the steam of her scorn rise Friday to the back-bench seats of fellow Liberal Ralph B. Cowan and independent MP Gilles Gregoire.

She accused them of working together to block passage of the broadcasting bill as long as they can.

Mr. Gregoire, an advocate of Quebec independence, "apparently has nothing else to do than impede the business of the country,' she said.

"He has said clearly that it is his intention to destroy the country." Now, with Mr. Cowan's help, he was starting to destroy Parliament.

Miss LaMarsh said Mr. Gregoire, independent MP for Lapointe, "is not going to have my co-operation in his efforts."

The government may apply a time limit on further debate under Commons rules. The way was cleared for this on Thursday with an introductory motion that could, if follow-up procedures are applied, end the debate by Feb. 13.

The bill, which aims to define national broadcasting policy and to establish a new regulatory agency in place of the Board of Broadcast Governors, was introduced last fall. It has occupied virtually the full time of the Commons since the session resumed Jan. 22.

Friday's debate ended with the Commons still arguing about the powers to be exercised by the regulatory agency, which will be called the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Verona Man Heads Napanee Authority

NAPANEE — George A. Grant, Verona, was returned as chairman of the Napanee Region Conservation Authority Wednesday. He has held the post since 1958, a year after the authority was formed.

Arthur Graham, Richmond Township representative on the 17-municipality authority, was returned as vice-chairman at the semi-annual meeting.

Harry W. Vince, Napanee, provincial appointee on the authority, was named chairman of the water control advisory board. William Raycroft, Ernestown Township was chosen chairman of the forestry advisory board.

Other chairmen are: Claude H. Knight, Napanee, conservation area advisory board; Nelson Kennedy, Camden Township, wildlife advisory board; Mr. Knight and I. H. (Tony) Jennings, rules and regulations committee.

The 17 municipalities in the authority will be assessed almost $10,000 for general conservation, an increase of $1,500 over last year. It plans capital schemes amounting to an additional $9,000 throughout the year.

Levies will be $7,200 for general conservation and administration; $775 for the Second Depot Conservation area; $500 for the Napanee conservation area; $500 for forestry; and $810 for operation and maintenance of water control.

Shipping Head Fears Strikes

MONTREAL (CP) — Shipping company executives Friday gloomily predicted 1968 will be another year of labor trouble on the Montreal waterfront and suggested it may even be a crisis year as to whether the big inland port has any real future.

W. R. Eakin, president of the Shipping Federation of Canada, told a press conference that contract demands by the International Longshoremen's Association could not only cause a strike this year but could spell the end of Montreal as a major port.

The ILA announced its demands for a new contract Thursday after a meeting with the federation presided over by C. E. Poirier, a federal labor conciliator. The federation said it completely rejected the demands.

Mr. Eakin said the only solution in a grave situation is for federal trusteeship over the port.

Capt. J. P. Martin, chairman of the federation's labor relations committee, told the press conference the wage demands of the longshoremen would more than double wages paid out to longshoremen in the port in 1967.

Last year, he said, the Montreal's 3,000 dockers received $14,000,000 in pay cheques. The new wage and benefit demands would add a further $14,110,000 to this figure.

"If accepted, the union's demands with respect to working conditions would represent a return to a situation more restrictive than that existing in the 1940s and as such constitute a betrayal of the long-term interests of the men themselves," Capt. Martin said.

The ILA is claiming an hourly wage increase of $1 spread over two years. The current basic wage is $3.43 an hour. With fringe benefits a longshoreman grosses about $4 an hour.

Man's Dust Alters Seasons

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Summers are shorter and winters longer, with lower temperatures than in the past, and the reason is that man is kicking up dust, a research meteorologist says.

R. A. Bryson, director of the centre of climatic research at the University of Wisconsin, in an interview Thursday at the American Meteorological Society's annual meeting, defined "dust" as any particle of any substance that gets into the air and remains for an extended period of time—such as industrial smoke, auto emissions and smoke from forest fires.

A MESSAGE OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO PEOPLE IN THE QUINTE AREA-

MAURICE H. ROLLINS

I am often asked by prospective home buyers if it is wise in today's market to postpone buying a new home? In view of the tight money problem being experienced by the housing industry, is it wise to delay buying a new home until the market improves? It appears many potential buyers may be weighing this decision at the moment.

My answer — BUY your home if it's at all possible.

It's difficult to imagine a time when it would be wise to postpone buying a home when you can afford it. The home buyer in earlier tight money periods — 1959 for example, was smart. He bought his home for about $15,000 at that time and it is probably easily worth over $20,000 in the market today.

Many times, you hear discussions on the high cost of housing, but this same type of discussion has been going on for the past 15 or 20 years. Do you envy the man paying $56 a month on a mortage obtained 20 years ago? He is benefiting from a major decision that looked just as costly to him at that time. Today his income is far greater, his home is almost paid for, and its value has zoomed as well, yet his monthly payments remain the same as when he first bought the home.

That home buyer is well ahead of the game as today's purchaser will probably find himself in the same position 20 years from now. Today's mortgage payments will look just as good to the man who buys his home now when compared with payments required on a home some 10 - 20 years in the future.

Two years ago, a certain builder was selling his most popular model for $18,800. Today the comparable house is $21,950 although the builder's profit has declined. His bookkeeping on 42 items of land, labor and materials costs show an increase in every department over the two-year period. This trend will likely continue.

To expect a reversal of this trend is wishful thinking. Some degree of inflation is inevitable as the nation's economy continues to grow. Houses will cost more tomorrow. If you can buy today, it's wise to do it. Then you can enjoy tomorrow the increased value of your investment.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander

Staff Sportswriter

Perhaps the largest crowd in the two-year history of the Mo-Hawks is expected to witness the debut of Sunday senior hockey here tomorrow.

Guelph Regals will attempt to snap the Mo-Hawks' eight-game home-ice win streak in a 1.30 afternoon clash.

Since this column was written before the results of last night's Belleville-at-Barrie game was known, fans will have to look elsewhere on these sport pages to see exactly where the Mo-Hawks stand today.

But win, lose or draw last night, Sunday's game here is a big one that promises to provide action and thrills galore for the district's many hockey fans.

Getting away from the importance of the game itself for a moment, the fact that it is being played on Sunday afternoon is news itself.

For as many years as this writer can recall, talk of Sunday sport in Belleville has prevailed. Efforts in past years to have it made legal failed but the bylaw making Sunday sport possible went through by a whooping margin in last December's election.

And while team managements have not made any official announcements pertaining to such matters, Sunday hockey on a regular basis will almost assuredly result if fans show sufficient interest during the remainder of this season.

.. It could be the answer to a lot of managerial problems. Senior and junior club bosses could divide Friday nights and Sunday afternoons for home games and likely make everybody happy.

Indications point toward favorable fan reaction since a couple of junior "B" games recently drew well, considering that the home club was in last place and out of the playoff picture at the time.

Fans have in the past shown to some extent their appreciation of a good sporting event on Sunday. For, while the law said it could not be done, many events have been held through a little imagination by the organizers. Often a "collection" was taken at the gate rather than admission being charged and good crowds have turned out for minor baseball, minor hockey, senior baseball, soccer, commercial hockey, etc.

Returning to tomorrow's senior debut, one can't help but think that this "first" could not have come at a better time for the Mo-Hawks.

As was mentioned, they have won eight consecutive games in Memorial Arena and in most of the eight have played exciting hockey.

They are also making a determined bid to climb out of the league's lower brackets and into a playoff position ,thus catching the fan's interest at just the right moment.

After all, what do fans love more than an underdog that suddenly threatens to upset the favorites?

And the Mo-Hawks have been making signs of doing just that. If by any chance they won in Barrie last night and Galt defeated Guelph at the same time, Belleville could yet climb as high as fifth place.

It is only a mathematical chance of course and the Mo-Hawks are more likely to grab sixth or seventh spot but this is quite an improvement for a club that a few weeks back was in last place and threatening to drop out of playoff contention.

The Regals are a rough, tough squad and prior to last night had lost something like four or five games in succession — all by a single goal That must sound very familiar to the Mo-Hawks.

Fans will also recall the last couple of times these two clubs clashed. Belleville won a riot-tinged 2-1 decision here on a Tuesday then outplayed the Regals in Guelph on Friday but dropped a 1-0 thriller.

Disputed Goal Gives Barrie 1-1 Tie

BARRIE (Special) — A fighting band of Mo-Hawks from the shores of Quinte split the points with the Barrie Flyers in a senior "A" puck pow-wow here last night. The score was an overtime 1-1.

Actually the Mo-Hawks should have won the game. They outplayed the Flyers from whistle to whistle and were the victims of a debatable goal in the third period that sent the game into overtime.

WAYNE BROWN

Al Stitt's high shot struck the cross bar and allegedly went into the net. The referee waved no goal but the Flyers argued hot and heavy and the official changed his mind.

The tie strengthened the Mo-Hawks hold on eighth place. They now hold a six-point margin over Oakville beaten last night 8-3 by Woodstock. Last-place Orillia bowed to Collingwood 8-3.

The tie, however may prove to be a costly one.

The Mo-Hawks goalie Larry Holmes suffered wrenched ligaments in a knee. He will undergo medical examination in Belleville today.

Holmes went down on his knees to stop a Flyer blast and two of his team-mates, backing up, fell on top of him.

The Flyers wore large chips on their shoulders no less than four Mo-Hawk players going off for stitching repairs in the first period. Eddie Marineau and "Shaker" Baker each brought home four sutures.

Rugged as the game was only nine penalties were dished out by the official.

Mickey Cherevaty and Robertson of the Flyers drew majors for fighting in the first and Ralph Plane backed up from no one getting a pair of minors.

Disappointed at the quirk of fate that deprived the Mo-Hawks of an all - important road victory Coach Floyd Crawford was nevertheless happy over the team's performance.

"It was another of those all-out efforts that marked their last two home victories, he said. "They have never played better on the road, and were as good as they were at home."

"The boys were really hungry," he said. "They outplayed and outshot the Flyers throughout a game they won, but didn't count as such.

He said the walking wounded would be ready for Sunday's game with the Guelph Regals and although Larry Holmes said he would be ready to play, Crawford has his doubts. The reliable Joe Junkin is standing by.

The chip-on-the - shoulder theme was evident from the start. Within four minutes Adams of the Flyers decided to take on Plane - and well - you know Plane. Both got the gate for roughing.

Exactly 28 seconds later Robertson tangled with Micky Cherevaty. The punches started to fly and when the smoke had cleared both sat out a five - minute major.

Seven of the total nine penalties came in the first period. It wasn't funny, albeit four Mo-Hawks went into stitches.

MICKEY CHEREVATY

The workhorse of the Mo-Hawks, Weiner Brown scored the lone goal driving home the puck on a ganging power play early in the second period.

Hec Lalonde and George Godson were in on the play.

The Mo-Hawks continued to dominate the play and some good work by McKibbon in the Flyers hangar kept them off the scoresheet.

Came the third period and Al Stitt raced in flanked by Howie Forbes. He drilled a high hard shot at Holmes which struck the crossbar as noted and the arguments started.

The Mo-Hawks efforts dispute-wise had no effect on the mind-changing official.

The Mo-Hawks entertain the Guelph Regals here tomorow (Sunday) afternoon. Game time 1.30.

O'Brien To OGA

Henderson Heads Country Club

By GEO. H. CARVER

Sports Editor

Norman Henderson popular member and director of the Bay of Quinte Country Club was named the 1968 president at the annual meeting held recently.

He succeeds past-president

GEORGE OBRIEN

George O'Brien who stepped down because of another important golf assignment.

Mr. O'Brien has been appointed a director of the Ontario Golf Association succeeding T. A. Carruthers.

[illegible] members of the board of directors are veter- [illegible] Armstrong, John Gee and Jack Belanger. Newcomers are Phil Huddleston, Abe Tobe and Steve Bowerman.

The various committees chairmen were appointed at the meeting.

Vice-president Jack Belanger will be in charge of greens; games captain is Steve Bowerman; the president will be the house chairman; Stan Armstrong will look after membership and Phil Huddleston publicity.

Club professional George Balazs will round out a two-year contract. Steward Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Haines will again cater to the inner and outer men and women. Henry Guertin takes over a second term as course superintendent.

Les Lennox the popular secretary-treasurer will start a fourth year in that capacity.

The annual meeting was one of the best attended functions of its kind in years, over sixty being present.

Outgoing president O'Brien expressed his appreciation to the news media, his board of directors, and the membership in general for their cooperation.

He served as president for three years — in 1963 and 1964 and again in 1967.

He was instrumental in organizing and operating the club's first "Festival of Golf" in 1963, an annual sanctioned Civic Holiday event that has met with continued success.

Much of the credit for the Festival success goes to the club pro George Balazs, who was responsible for many of the top pros of the province competing here.

During the O'Brien regimes a new pro shop was built, clubhouse improvements made, and a new repair shop installed beneath the pro shop.

Membership rose from over 300 to the present 600 using the club facilities.

President Henderson is a worthy successor to the outgoing head of the board.

He is a six-year member and was named to the board a year ago.

He is known as an indefatigable worker with the interests of the club and members uppermost in his mind.

NORM HENDERSON

"I have been given a fine board of directors" he said "and we are looking forward to a banner year in 1968."

"With the co-operation of all concerned, I believe this year will be one of the best in the history of the club," he said.

Juniors Edge Frontenacs 2-1

By GEO. H. CARVER

Sports Editor

Belleville Junior B's manager Jim "Snipe" Mathews flipped a cartwheel and chortled in his best Jackie Gleason manner "How Sweet It Is".

Choach Charlie Drake herded his puckchasing ducklings in to the dressing room nest like an old biddy hen. He quacked "It was great".

Trainer "Soapy" Smith's' face was split with a big broad grin". I knew they could do it", he bubbled.

Rightly so. For didn't their Junior B's turn spoilers last night and set the Kingston Frontenacs back on their haunches 2-1 before a small but improved attendance.

It was the Junior B's second victory of the season as against 21 defeats and one tie.

Hopelessly out of the league playoffs, the Juniors battled like they were in the final game of a Stanley Cup series.

They travelled at top speed throughout the game and thoroughly deserved the win.

And they should pin a gold medal on their goalie young Gig Hunt.

The fast-skating hard-shooting Frontenacs poured 53 shots at the goalie and he hurled 52 of them back at them.

The youngster turned in a brilliant performance and was easily the difference between victory and defeat.

At the other end the Junior B's fired but 26 at the Kingston goalie, two of them paying off.

The teams split a dozen penalties, one of them costly to the Juniors. All were minor sentences.

Steve White and Peter Fleming stood out up front for the Juniors each coming through with a goal and an assist.

Doug Geen and Ernie Fuller also got assists.

White shot the Juniors into the lead midway through the first period firing the puck past Gruel on a neat play with Fleming and Fuller.

The period ended that way

Pete Fleming put the Juniors two up after six minutes of the second period combining with Geen and White for the tally.

The Frontenacs down 2-0 going into the third period went all out to cut the margin.

They broke the egg at 10.23 of the frame, Harvey scoring on a ganging attack from Seale and Loudon.

Oh No, Not Again!; Leafs' Johnny Bower Ready To Hang 'Em Up

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Is Honky the Goose on his last wing?

Is Old Jawn about to end an era in professional hockey?

JOHNNY BOWER

Is this the last National Hockey League season for John Bower, legend and goalie for Toronto Maple Leafs?

Bower says he's 44 but the NHL record book says 43. He's been in professional hockey 23 years, since joining Cleveland Barons of the American League from Prince Alberta, Sask., Black Hawks in the 1945-46 season.

He's been with Toronto since Billy Reay, now coach of Chicago Black Hawks, bought him from Cleveland for the Leafs in 1958.

Bower, who a couple of years ago made a hit record titled Honky the Goose, has been rumored (again) ready to hang up his pads.

Asked about it Thursday, he replied:

"I just don't know. Sometimes I really think it would be a good idea.

"I'll tell you this: Everything is ready for me to quit.

"I have a good job I can start tomorrow, or anytime. And I know I can't go on playing hockey forever.

"Some day I'll have to retire and maybe it ought to be when things are going well, like now. Still, where could I make this kind of money."

But Friday, after a Leaf workout prior to an extended road trip, he said:

"Some guys are always asking me if this is my last year and I always give them the same answer—this is my last year.

"It's a joke. I don't know when I'll retire."

There are some persons in the league convinced Bower never will retire—simply dissolve into the red line that marks the goal crease.

Foremost among these is Punch Imlach, coach and general-manager of the Leafs.

"Bower quit? That's crazy. Why, he's better than he ever was. And his age means absolutely nothing.

"He's got a job with us as long as he's good enough and I don't care if he's 90."

Another is Cesare Maniago, now with Minnesota North Stars but at one time in line for Bower's job.

"I guess I made the same mistake a lot of people have made when I first came to the Leafs.

"I told myself that Bower would be around for a couple of seasons at the most. It looked as if the Leafs had me in mind as a successor.

"Then Toronto traded away Ed Chadwick for Don Simmons. That made me think maybe they were getting Simmons ready to succeed Bower.

"Wrong again.

"Quite a few people have tried to succeed Bower—myself, Chadwick, Simmons, (Gerry) Cheevers. They're all gone while Bower rolls along, looking as good as he ever did."

The latest new-apparent is Bruce Gamble.

But Bower already has worked more games this year (28) than he did last season and has a goals-against average hovering around the two mark.

Now he's ready to go again Sunday in Philadelphia against the Flyers, leaders of the Western Division.

Bob Hope Classic

Palmer Shoots 67; Shares Lead

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer was back knocking on the door today in quest of his third victory in the $122,000 Bob Hope golf classic.

Arnie moved out of the fringes of the early round leaders in the third round Friday and went into today's fourth round of the 90-hole marathon tied with young Tom Weiskopf at 209.

The 209 is seven strokes under par for the distance in an event which winds up Sunday.

Arnie shot a 67, five under par, Friday, the lowest round he's had in the new year. He won the Hope charity-fund-raising tournament in 1960 and again in 1962.

Weiskopf stroked a 68 to gain a position he held alone in the 1967 Hope affair.

Play is over four par 36-36—72 courses.

Four professionals were tied at 210, one stroke behind the leaders—Bob McCallister, with a third round 68; Gay Brewer and Charles Coody, with 69s, and Bruce Devlin of Australia, with 72.

Billy Casper was at 211 with five others including George Knudson of Toronto, who had a 68.

But for a bad break, Casper might well be in a tie with the top two.

He was in the middle of a backswing when a fan, standing on a rocky slope looking down on the fourth hole at Indian Wells, slipped and rocks began to tumble down.

He had to re-tee and wound up with a two-over-par five-two strokes which turned out to be the difference between 211 and 209.

Palmer had a similar bad break. He had only one over-par hole. His drive on No. 2 hit a course marshal 50 yards away.

"It was the shortest drive I've had all year," Palmer related.

Junior "A"

Ottawa Whips Hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Everybody got into the act Friday night in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Ottawa 67s broke a long losing streak by beating St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-1, Toronto Marlboros broke Montreal Junior Canadiens' unbeaten streak of 10 games by trimming the Habs 6-2, and first-place Kitchener Rangers won their 11th in a row, clipping Peterborough Petes 8-3.

To top it all, Tom Webster zoomed into contention for league goal-scoring honors by connecting for five goals and two assists to pace Niagara Falls Flyers to a 9-1 rout of Oshawa Generals.

Webster now has scored 38 goals to tie with Dan Lawson of Hamilton Red Wings in the goal-scoring derby.

His seven points also give him a total of 93 for an 11-point league lead over runner-up Garry Swain, his team-mate on the Flyers.

Aussie Finds U.S. Track Wins Easy

NEW YORK (CP) — Ralph Doubell of Australia won the half-mile race at the Knights of Columbus indoor athletic meet here Friday night and then expressed wonderment at how easy the victories have been coming.

The triumph, in 1:51.5, was his fourth straight on the U.S. indoor circuit.

"I never expected to find winning in America to be as easy as it has been," said the slim, 22-year-old Aussie.

Doubell runs another half-mile in Philadelphia tonight, and then goes home for the serious business of winning a spot on Australia's Olympic Games squad.

Just as he did a week ago in beating Bill Crothers in the Millrose 880 here, Doubell went into overdrive at the sound of the gun announcing the final lap. He sped past Preston Davis of the U.S. Army and ended up winner by 15 yards over Benedict Cayenne of Trinidad.

For Davis, who complained of a sore throat, it was three losses to Doubell in three races at less than a mile.

"The paces have been very slow," said Doubell. "I like it that way—I'm a kicker."

Noel Carroll of Ireland, who set the meet record of 1:51.1 in winning the half-mile in 1967, was fourth this time in 1:53.6 and Brian McLaren of University of Manitoba Varsity Track Club fifth in 1:55.6.

MacLaren, whose entry was not announced in advance of the meet, was a member of Canada's silver medal-winning 1,699-metre relay team at last year's Pan-American Games in Winnipeg and also won the bronze medal in the 800 metres.

College Hockey

OTTAWA (CP) — Only five points separate five contenders for the individual scoring championship of the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Intercollegiate Athletic Association's hockey league.

Coming into the final month of play, Gerald Langepier of Sherbrooke university holds the lead with 14 goals and 15 assists for 29 voints.

Mike Lowe of Loyola is one point back with 28. Tied for third are Roger Wilding of Loyola and Jim Webster of Sir George Williams. Both have 26 points.

Loyola holds the lead in the league standings with 20 points, having lost only one game of the 11 they've played. Sir George Williams is second with 14 points while Sherbrooke and Bishop's are tied for third with 13 points.

Andre Hinse and Ken Campbell both scored three goals to lead the Oilers in the one-sided contest and Len Haley, Danny Johnson and Mike Byers had two apiece.

Steve Latinovich, Doug Shelton and Jean-Paul LeBlanc got the Dallas markers.

In other Friday games, Oklahoma City Blazers beat Fort Worth Wings 4-1 and Memphis South Stars and Kansas City Blues tied 5-5.

Grant Erickson had two goals for the Blazers and Ron Buchanaa and Wayne Cashman added the others. Bob Falkenberg scored for Fort Worth.

Ken Block scored twice for the South Stars in their tie with Kansas City. Andre Pronovost, George Standing and Germain Gagnon had one goal each for Memphis. George Guilbault, Claude Cardin, Larry Billows, Larry Hornung and Gary Veneruzzo tallied for the Blues.

SHAWVILLE, Que. (CP) — Roger Laurin scored at 13 seconds of the first period tp spark Buckingham Aces to a 6-2 victory over Shawville Pontiacs in an Ottawa District Hockey Association game Friday night.

Scoring for Buckingham were Laurin and Hubert Brind'Amour with two goals each and Jacques Lanthier and Gilbert Goulet with one each. Ivan Saunders and Mervin Wren scored for Shawville.

Barons Defeat Kings 5-2

Hockey is called the fastest game in the world and the way goals were scored in the American League Friday it's easy to see why.

Cleveland Barons got two goals within 30 seconds and went on to defeat Springfield Kings 5-2.

Bob Barlow scored with only 44 seconds remaining in the game to give Rochester Americans a 1-0 victory over Buffalo Bisons.

Andre Lacroix scored with just 54 seconds remaining as Quebec Aces bounced Phoenix Roadrunners 6-5 in an interlocking game with the Western League club.

Dick Meissner scored with only 58 seconds gone in the first period to start Baltimore Clippers en route to a 3-2 victory over Providence Reds.

In a second interlocking game, Bobby Leiter scored with less than five minutes remaining for Hershey Bears 4-3 win against Vancouver Canucks before 10,609 fans.

League-leading Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds increased their margin by four points Friday with a 4-2 victory over Garson-Falconbridge Combines in Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A action.

Ron Guzzo paced the Hounds with two goals while Dave Smith and Lloyd Bentley scored single goals.

Brian Proctor paced the Eagles with three goals while Gord Gallagher scored twice and Dennis Tymchuk, Jerry Laderoute and Albert Adams counted one goal each.

Scoring for North Bay were Don Grierson and Jim West.

Montreal Drubs Gaels 8-6

Tie-breakers were the order of the day Friday in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association intercollegiate hockey series as the University of Toronto climbed into first place and the University of Western Ontario Mustangs and the University of Montreal each grabbed a share of fourth.

The Blues tied McMaster Marlins 2-2 at Toronto to move one point ahead of the idle University of Waterloo Warriors.

Mcaster's third-place position remained unchanged.

The Mustangs defeated McGill Redmen 5-3 on home ice for a share of fourth place with Montreal, who beat Queen's University 8-6.

Legion Curling

Two Rinks Share Lead

NORTH BAY (CP) — Rudy Steski of North Bay and Bobcaygeon's Ted Shea still share the lead in the Ontario provincial legion curling playoffs. But both fell from the ranks of the undefeated in Thursday's action.

Steski and Shea have five wins and two losses. George Holborn of Sutton has moved into the second spot with a 4-1 record.

Steski, the North Bay skip, picked up his fourth victory in the morning round with a 4-3 decision over Earl McDougall of Brockville, but bowed to Pres Lavier of Exeter by a 10-8 count in the second round. But in the sixth round he whipped Ken Myers of South Porcupine 14-1.

Meanwhile, Shea won in the fourth round 10-6 over the Exeter entry but dropped a 7-4 decision to Holborn in the next round.

In Thursday night's action, the Bobcaygeon rink defeated Marcel Dewitte of London to keep pace with Steski for the lead.

The Sutton entry, skipped by Holborn, defeated Bill Conway of Dundas 10-8 in the fourth round, then followed with a 7-4 win over Bobcaygeon and an 8-4 verdict over the Exeter quartet.

Snowmobiles for Business and Pleasure

More than 100,000 of these snub-nosed vehicles are skimming over snow-covered fields, frozen lakes and even highways in Canada much to the chagrin of provincial highways department officials who are faced with the job of trying to find the best way to control their use. Snowmobiles are finding many uses as evidenced by these photos. At left a member of the Ontario provincial police puts one through its paces. A family enjoys an outing (top right) while another enthusiast uses his for racing (bottom right.) In the far north, Eskimos are using them to replace Husky dogs.

Problem of Automation Solved By CPR and Railroad Trainmen

OTTAWA (CP) — A job-cutting agreement hammered out in two years of hard-nosed bargaining between the CPR and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has established a new formula for the protection of railway workers threatened by automation.

It goes farther than any previous pact towards ensuring that workers will suffer no adverse effects from job reductions brought about by new techniques.

The agreement sets the terms by which 2,000 yard service jobs are to be eliminated during the next five years or so. It is another step in the job-cutting process that began on the railways 10 years ago with the introduction of diesel locomotives, improved signal systems and automatic sorting yards.

Yard-switching crews, responsible for sorting freight cars to assemble or break up trains, have for years consisted of a foremen and two helpers. With automated yards, the job now can be handled by a foreman and one helper.

Two years ago the CPR, taking the lead for all other Canadian carriers, approached the trainmen's union with a plan to reduce yard crews to two men from three by a process of attrition.

Basically, the CPR plan was to eliminate one job every time a yard worker resigned, retired or died. No regular man would be dismissed, nor would he be forced to move to another location. No wage reductions would be made if the work changes forced a man to work less than 40 hours a week.

The union countered that this was inadequate. It argued for protection of seniority rights, ensuring that a senior man with a preferred day job would not be forced to move to an afternoon or night assignment.

When the dispute went to arbitration, the railway cited previous attrition agreements signed with locomotive firemen and telecommunications workers. It said their protection was inferior to that being offered to yardmen and no added protection for yardmen was justified.

The CPR contended that if senior yardmen were allowed to keep their preferred day jobs they would be occupying unnecessary positions while the railway was being forced to hire new employees for productive assignments.

"Such a requirement does not exist in any past settlements of such matters in the railway industry, nor to our knowledge has such a requirement been placed upon any industry in Canada," the CPR brief stated.

The union lawyer, Maurice Wright of Ottawa, based the trainmen's case on a conciliation board report last year which said the crew reduction should be carried out with "no distress to the work force."

Forcing men in preferred day jobs onto afternoon or night shifts would be a breach of this goal.

The CPR finally agreed to observe these seniority rights despite its misgivings and that pattern will be followed in subsequent agreements with other lines.

Lieut.-Governor Speaker at School Opening

PICTON (Staff) — The official opening of the new Hallowell Township Central School will take place Friday, March 15 at 8 p.m. It was announced this week that the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, The Honorable Earl Rowe, will be guest speaker for the event.

The largest of all new central public schools in Prince Edward County, "Pinecrest" is located on the outskirts of the village of Bloomfield and replaces all former school accommodation in the area, including the Bloomfield school.

NEW CURRENCY

JAKARTA (AP) — Indonesia's new rupiah currency, featuring a picture of the country's first general, Sudirman, instead of the sidetracked President Sukarno, has turned up initially in small denominations in military pay envelopes. In the face of devaluation rumors the Suharto government said the new currency would have the same value as the old, and the changeover would be gradual.

Vandals Damage New Arena

CAMPBELLFORD — Vandalism has plagued the staff of the new Campbellford Arena.

Since the new building was opened in January for skating, hockey and curling, hockey sticks have been rammed through dressing room doors, fist or feet have been pushed through washroom doors and window sills and benches have been cut with skates.

Although refuse containers are available, the floor is littered after hockey games and public skating.

The arena manager has warned that anyone caught doing wilful damage will be asked to pay for the damage and will be

Stock Market Rallies Friday

By FRITS ROOS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices on Canada's major stock markets continued to tumble this week but losses were cut in a sharp rally Friday.

Oils and refineries, industrial mining issues, steels and uraniums paced the decline.

Only golds were strong again while banks and other financial institutions posted fractional gains.

The western oils index, which has surged since the beginning of 1967—especially since the start of the current winter drilling season—tumbled 9.49 to 202.95.

Analysts pointed at the surprisingly low sale of Crown oil and gas lease acreage in Alberta this week. One oilman said that 1968 may well become a year of consolidation unless there is another major find in the Rainbow or Zama fields.

Hudson's Bay oil dropped 2¼ to 38¾ despite increased earnings.

Great Plains fell 3¼ to 19¼, Dome Pete 2½ to 57, Union Oil 1⅛ to 50, Canadian Superior and Central-Del Rio 1½ each to 41¾ and 20⅜ and Husky and Canadian Gridoil 1¼ each to 22 and 10⅛.

Among industrial mining stocks, Inco tumbled 5 to 116¾, Noranda 1⅜ to 47⅜ and Falconbridge 1½ to 100. Alcan, which reported a drop in earnings, slipped ½ to 26¾.

Steels continued to slide despite reports of unchanged and increased net earnings by Dofasco and Stelco, respectively. However, profits before taxes were down in both cases while Dofasco reported a slight drop in sales.

Toronto's industrial index slipped 3.10 to 156.57 after it dipped to January, 1967, levels on Friday. At the close it was back to the level immediately following the devaluation of the British pound last November.

Employment News

By: J.R. Staveley

Manpower Counsellor

The role of the Canada Manpower Centre in the well being of the community is a close one. It may be compared to a central exchange, free of charge and impartially, to which any person can turn for information, advice and action regarding employment and the related fields, manpower mobility, occupational training of adults, and immigration settlement, in addition to other programs designed to benefit not only the individual but also the community and Canada.

There are more than 250 Canada Manpower Centres located strategically across Canada, all having the same objectives and working in close liaison. It will be of interest to note the area of this responsibility of the local Canada Manpower Centre.

At the present time, the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre, whose area manager is Mr. H. W. Karn, extends north from the City of Belleville to beyond Lake St. Peter and southward across the Bay of Quinte to include the villages of Rossmore and Ameliasburg. Thus, the Canada Manpower Centre includes all of the County of Hastings, except part of the Township of Sidney and the Town of Deseronto. In addition it includes that portion of Prince Edward County covered by the Township of Ameliasburg. The total area coming under the scope of this office is approximately 2,250 square miles. The area presents a picture of a diverse economy, representing both primary and secondary industries together with an increasing services field.

During the past week this office had a great deal of activity in sending workers to regular employment in other areas of Canada through the assistance of the manpower mobility program.

The local labor demand, influenced no doubt by the mild weather has shown an increased demand from the construction field, together with a number of openings for special skilled tradesmen. The demand for additional female workers remains very light.

At this season of the year the Belleville and District Winter Employment Campaign Committee urges all to support its work.

If seeking employment or thinking of re-entering the labor market, contact the Canada Manpower Centre, at 324 Church St., Belleville or telephone 962-8681.

Scoharie

SCOHARIE — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rutter are enjoying a three-week holiday in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Hobson and Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Foster attended the Motor Show in Toronto Saturday night.

Mrs. Ruth Hobson stayed with her granddaughter, Lisa, while her parents were away.

Mrs. Joanne Marlieb, Toronto, visited her parents for the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Simpson, Larry, Debbie and David spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sutherland in Toronto.

British Mini-skirts Are Upstaged By Bra-less See-through Blouses

Transparent Blouses Create 'New Look'

LONDON (AP) — British males, attuned to mini-skirted girls, lifted their sights to higher things today as the bra-less see-through blouse hit London.

The new fashion was unveiled, so to speak, at a boutique on London's Carnaby Street, where three girl assistants—including a Canadian—wore no bras under low-cut chiffon blouses.

In no time at all, the boutique had attracted a large number of potential customers and interested males.

"I do feel a little embarrassed wearing it," said one of the shop girls, 19-year-old Marlene McDonald of Toronto. "It's a bit of a shock to look up and see a man looking straight at you—but not in the eyes.

"I would never wear one outside in the street. But I might at a swinging party when there were other girls in the same predicament."

Christopher Ward, columnist in The Daily Mirror, gave this verdict on the see-through:

"My own view is that when I take a girl out to dinner, I do not want to see her naked bosom hovering over the spaghetti.

"For one thing, it would spoil a perfectly good appetite, and for another, it isn't actually very romantic.

"There is a time and a place for bare breasts, and a restaurant has never, in my opinion, been the place."

A lot of men, however, would call Ward a spoil sport.

London designer Ossie Clark said: "Bosoms are for looking at."

A spokesman at London's Savoy Hotel said they would not necessarily refuse a girl admission because her breasts were visible under her blouse.

"It depends on the girl," the spokesman said.

A bra manufacturer spokesman said: "We need all the support we can get just now."

Fuel Peewees Win Opener

Smith Fuel peewees ran roughshod over Trenton last night taking the first game of the OMA playoffs best-of-three series by a 13-2 score.

Grant Goegan banged home five of the Smith goals also getting two assists.

Tim Whalen scored three with an assist; Wally Dainard two and one; Andy Rickeets one and four; Mark Coates one and three; Peter Crawford one and two and Bruce Sutherland an assist.

McAlpine and Thompson scored for Trenton.

The second game will be played Sunday afternoon here at 4.30.

To Your Good Health

Timing of X-rays Matter of Judgment

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: Six months ago I had a skin test for tuberculosis that proved positive. It was followed by an X-ray which showed nothing.

The doctor explained that as a rule the skin test and X-ray should be repeated every six months, for 18 months, but rambled on to say that he thought once each year would be enough.

I was given no sputum test nor any of the INAH drugs that you mention as being a wise precaution. After reading your articles I can't help wondering whether I am wrong in following this doctor's advice and waiting three years for three X-rays. — Mrs. J. B.

Circumstances affect the urgency of testing — was this a routine skin test you had? Or were you closely associated with someone who came down with active TB? Without knowing this and other facts, I would be presumptuous in second-guessing your doctor's advice.

However, the following facts may give you an insight into some of the problems involving suspected TB infections.

The skin test shows one thing only: Whether the body has been invaded by the tubercle bacillus, or TB germ.

It does not indicate whether you have or ever did have an active case of TB. You may have picked up the germ but fought it off.

Since a skin test, once positive, generally remains positive, there is little point in repeating the test. You'll just get the same answer again.

X-ray of the chest is another matter. Its purpose, naturally, is to learn whether the disease has attacked the lungs. X-rays at six-month intervals are very reasonable, and after known exposure often may be carried on for two years. (After that, annually is a good idea for everybody.)

In cases of known close exposure to the disease, X-rays at even closer intervals might be warranted — as for a wife whose husband has just been found to have active TB. There is, indeed, a matter of judgment involved, rather than a hard and fast rule.

Sputum tests are not usually of any great value unless the X-rays are positive or suspicious. (Sputum tests are of considerable use in knowing when to release a patient with an arrested case, however.)

As to the INAH (Isonicotinic acid hydrazide) drugs, it would be wasteful and pointless to give them to everybody just because of mild suspicion of exposure to TB.

They can be (and are) given to people who have been closely exposed to active TB and therefore are in considerable danger of contracting the disease. The drugs also should be given if a skin test has been negative and a later one is positive. They also are, these days, being given to patients with arrested cases who were treated years ago, or treated without receiving these drugs. The purpose then is to guard against a relapse.

Without knowing your circumstances and history, Mrs. J. B., I don't like to be didactic about how often you should have X-rays, but would guess at every six months or perhaps every year. I do not see any point in sputum tests or INAH drugs unless there is more to your story that I do not know.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there any danger in using an underarm depilatory for a 13-year-old? — Mrs. S. M.

No, if it does not irritate the skin. If it does, then resort to shaving.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: When I was a child I remember hearing that eclipses of the sun and moon had bad effects on unborn babies, and caused them to be deformed or retarded. Could this be so? — Mrs. R. S. R.

No. It's superstition.

Kings, Galt Top Tied

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woodstock Alcans needed only 66 seconds Friday night to defeat Oakville Oaks 8-3 in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series.

That's all the time it took Woodstock's Dan Mahony to score three goals, a splurge that began the rout of the Oaks who led 2-1 at the time.

Mahoney's string in the first period came at 11:29, 11:53 and 12:35. He also scored another goal in the third period to further embarrass the lowly Oaks, who had to start the game with 11 players after some team members turned up late.

In other action, Collingwood Kings moved into a first-place tie with Galt Hornets by trouncing Orillia 8-3, Barrie Flyers and Belleville Mo-Hawks battled to a 1-1 overtime tie, and the Hornets dropped a 6-3 decision to Guelph Regals.

Minor Hockey

In BMHA novice action here yesterday the Amerks edged the Bears 4-3 and the Rangers turned back the Canadiens by a 5-1 score.

Mike Allison had three goals for the Amerks with J. McAuley getting the other. McIntyre had an assist.

S. Jianopoulos scored twice for the Bears, Rick Sprague firing home the other.

Woodley and Hayman each had two goals for the Rangers, Marek also scoring. Bunnett, Bates, Allen, Beare and Potts had assists.

In an exhibition game Food City blanked Cobourg 2-0. Mike Meeker and Ross McLeod doing the scoring.

Mickey Whalen and Mike Crawford drew assists.

Nothing Radical in Bill of Rights

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Justice G. A. Gale of Ontario said Thursday he sees nothing radical in Justice Minister Trudeau's proposed Canadian charter of human rights.

"Many of these safeguards now exist in the practice of the law," he said.

The charter, which will be presented to the federal - provincial conference on the constitution next week, aims at strengthening and enshrining political, legal and language rights in the constitution.

It would also stop police from interrogating persons without counsel and restrict their powers in gathering evidence; wipe out racial discrimination in admission to professional bodies; protect the freedom of those who have no religion, and extend language rights as proposed by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Arthur Maloney, a Toronto lawyer prominent in civil liberties issues, said Mr. Trudeau appeared to be "on the right track" and added that the question of statements to police has to be reconsidered.

He added that having counsel present when a person is questioned would not materially affect the number of convictions but would result in more satisfactory and intensive police investigations.

But Joseph Sedgwick, another Toronto lawyer, disagreed.

"That's what's happening in the United States," he said. "But what do you do when a Mountie arrests a man in some desolate spot 500 miles from the nearest lawyer?" he asked.

Constable Arrives in Deseronto

DESERONTO — Vallent Goed, 23, reported for duty with the Deseronto Police Department Thursday morning. He is married, and comes from Hamilton. He has had a year and a half's experience with the Police Department in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

From the 16 applications for the position received, three applicants were interviewed and Mr. Goed was selected. Chief Herbert Moody, who had arrived January 22, was present at the interviews.

From December 1, when Chief Lynn Thomlinsin left Deseronto to become a constable with the Napanee Police Department, Deseronto police duties were in the hands of the OPP of the Belleville detachment, until the arrival of Chief Moody. While the provincial officers were efficient and "did a good job" as town officials expressed it, they could not possibly have an officer in the town at all times. Consequently, there was a rash of break-ins and vandalism during the first two weeks of December, with 16 cases reported.

At the end of the two weeks men from the fire department took up night patrol of the town and the trouble stopped. However, the volunteer firemen are all employed during the daytime and found it too hard to keep on with the night work as well. Consequently the Council decided to set up its own police department once more. Chief Moody was selected on the advice of the Ontario Police Commission advisers.

The town has been free from trouble since he took up his duties, Chief Moody reported Thursday.

Miss Canada Gets Lift

Suspected Bank Robbers Flee in Police Cruiser

KITCHENER (CP) — Three hours after a branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank was robbed of $15,000 Friday, two men suspected to be part of the group disarmed two police officers and escaped in their cruiser.

The two men entered Fleetline Motors and asked the proprietor, Harold Schlueter, to call them a taxi.

Mr. Schlueter became suspicious and called the police from another part of the building.

When the two officers arrived and began questioning the men, one pulled a revolver and said: "Don't move. . . . I'll shoot. . . . I'll kill you."

They then took the policemen's guns and keys to the cruiser and fled.

Mr. Schlueter, accompanied by one of the officers, followed in the company truck before losing sight of the cruiser. They later found it abandoned four blocks away.

Police squads searched a large plaza in the eastern outskirts of the city on a tip that at least two of the four suspects were inside. They found no sign of the robbers.

A. A. Ralley Re-elected as Board Head

PICTON (Staff) — A. A. Ralley, charter chairman of the County's new Planning Board, was re-elected to the position at the board's inaugural meeting for 1968 Wednesday night. Mr. Ralley, South Marysburgh Township's representative on the board and a teacher at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, said "We have built up a storehouse of planning information and I believe we are on the right track. I think we have reason to be proud of our work as a new board."

Among the problems he predicted the board might be called on to deal with in the coming months and years, he cited pollution, urban use of good agricultural land and chaotic development.

He said the process of planning involves four stages: Taking stock of the existing region, protecting land by uniform building bylaws, subdivision control and an official plan, obtaining the optimum use of the region and finally, the end results of the planning efforts. Mr. Ralley said he wants to continue to encourage "ideas and participation by individuals and local organizations."

Ross Benway was re-elected vice-chairman of the board.

PEOPLE COUNT

Mexico began the year with a population of about 45,671,000, the statistics bureau reported and calculated Mexico City has about 6,815,000 people.

Planes Can Spot Pollution

TORONTO (CP) — A federal plan to use military aerial reconnaissance techniques for spotting pollution in the Great Lakes was revealed here Friday.

Dr. R. K. Lane of the department of energy, mines and resources told the third Canadian symposium on research in water pollution that infra-red film can be used to detect vegetation, algae and sewage in the Great Lakes.

He showed slides of pictures taken over Lake Ontario using infra-red film. The slides showed that a source of pollution, such as the outlet of a sewage pipe, could be identified from the air.

Masonic Temple Will Be Built On Main Street

PICTON (Staff) — The year 1968 will see the erection of a Masonic Temple on Main Street West in Picton. The site was purchased some time ago and working drawings and specifications have been obtained and approved by Grand Lodge

It is expected that tenders will be called soon, with the date for completion set for September of this year. The project is under the direction of Prince Edward Masonic Temple Corporation of which John V. Graydon is president. Alva Collier, secretary; Dr. John Pearce, treasurer; Harry E. Alder, David Campbell, William Lane, Hutton J. Martin, members. Prince Edward Lodge No. 18 A.F. and A.M., C.R.C. was organized 157 years ago and following a petition on January 21, 1811 to Grand Lodge at York which was granted.

It is notable that the lodge has not only been in existence for 157 years but has met on the same site (Mary Street School in Picton) for 140 years. With the anticipated closing late this year of Mary Street school, in which the lodge occupied the top floor under an agreement connected with the school when it was built, the lodge will require a new home. Work on the Temple is expected to begin this spring.

Canada's Survival Is Issue--Pearson

PM Insists On Single State

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson called today for a "great new act of accommodation" between English and French Canada and warned that without it, Canada "may not endure."

"What is at stake in my opinion is no less than Canada's survival as a nation," Mr. Pearson said in his opening statement to the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

"Here the road forks," he said in a moving and dramatic appeal.

The prime minister said most of French Canada's reasons for dissatisfaction with its place in Confederation are "entirely jutified."

If this dissatisfaction were allowed to continue without remedy, "it could lead to separation and to the end of Confederation."

"Equally important is to recognize that it lies within our power to prevent this, to remove the causes of discontent, to lay the groundwork for a great new act of accommodation which will ensure the hopes and aspirations of all Canadians.

"It is to nothing less than this that we must commit ourselves at this conference. . . .

"This is not a usual occasion. It is a critical one; and our decisions will be crucial for Canada."

Mr. Pearson urged adoption of French language and education rights everywhere in Canada, of a constitutional charter of human rights and agreement to embark on a comprehensive process of constitutional review.

This review would give Quebec the largest possible scope for development of its own society and its own destiny—in Canada.

For Other Stories, see Page 8

"But this process of change must be consistent—let there be no doubt on this—with the continued existence of Canada as a single federal state," Mr. Pearson said.

He described as a "whole set of illusions" the suggestions made in Quebec that if the province were to secede, it could then negotiate with Ottawa on terms of association with the rest of Canada.

"It is an illusion to think that a declared intention to seek a disputed divorce can be the basis for amicable and productive negotiation, especially when the parties concerned are still living in the same house or as next-door neighbors.

"It may even be an illusion to

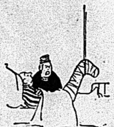
Heritage Chiselled Away -- Dief

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadians are becoming too far removed from their heritage because during the last five years the Liberal government has been chiselling it away, John Diefenbaker, former prime minister and opposition leader, said Saturday.



"I said you shouldn't have told the doctors you favored medicare!"

Robarts Plans Bilingualism

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts today outlined steps Ontario will take to make French an official language in the legislature, civil service, courts and some municipalities and high schools.

He told the federal-provincial constitutional conference that when the Ontario legislature opens Feb. 14, "we shall propose by resolution that any member . . . shall have the formally recognized right to address the legislature in either English or French."

French now is sometimes spoken in the legislature but there are no formal provisions for it.

Mr. Robarts said in his opening statement to the conference that the Ontario civil service and the education department will establish language courses for civil servants whose duties require a knowledge of French. Text of the statement was issued to the press in advance of delivery.

"All letters received in French by the Ontario government will be answered in that language.

"All government departments will be encouraged to provide bilingual services in those field offices located in areas where there is a sufficient concentration of French-speaking persons."

In addition, the government will expand the facilities of its translation bureau to deal with communications in French.

The government also will encourage the use of English and French "in those Ontario municipalities having a sufficient concentration of French-speaking persons."

Most of these communities are located in eastern and northeastern Ontario, within the

Wallaceburg and Dresden Are Hard-hit by Flooding

WALLACEBURG, Ont. (CP) — Floods, which reached depths of three feet on the main street here Sunday and eight feet at Dresden, were subsiding today.

Police in Wallaceburg said early today the water level had dropped four or five inches since midnight. In Dresden, police said flood waters were dropping rapidly.

But officials warned that the ice-choked Thames, its waters already 17 feet above normal, could at any moment create a major crisis for Chatham's 30,000 population.

To add to the threat, moderating temperatures of recent days were forecast to continue with a high of 40 predicted.

Between 400 and 500 of Wallaceburg's 4,000 homes had to be evacuated when the Sydenham River dumped three feet of water on its streets.

Mayor Nigel Savage said half the town's population of 11,000 might be forced out of their homes before conditions return to normal.

Officials estimated 3,000 people had left their homes by late Sunday night.

Dresden, 12 miles east of Wallaceburg, applied Sunday for emergency assistance from the Ontario government.

Eight feet of water covers part of the main street of the town of 2,800.

Reeve Wildred Shaw said 61 families had been removed from their homes and 100 houses were affected.

Viet Cong 'Second Wave' Attacks Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong overran a police substation in Saigon tonight and attacked —in force—a police precinct headquarters in the capital, South Vietnamese police reported.

The assaults could be the start of "second-wave" attacks predicted by some authorities.

Police said a Viet Cong force estimated at about 400 men overran and seized the police substation in the city's 8th precinct on the southwest part of the city. The force then assaulted the 8th precinct's main police headquarters and heavy fighting followed.

The Tran Van Chau substation was occupied by the Viet Cong, police said.

U.S. planes dropped flares over the area to light up the scene.

There was no report immediately on casualties.

Far to the north U.S. marines drove back 200 to 300 North Vietnamese troops who attacked a hill overlooking the frontier fortress at Khe Sanh today.

It was too early to know whether the 3½-hour ground assault on Hill 861-A, accompanied by a heavy artillery attack on other positions at Khe Sanh, was the start of the expected North Vietnamese offensive along the northern fronteir.

But the U.S. command disclosed it had moved 3,500 paratroops from the 101st Airborne Division to the northern sector "to be prepared for any contingency."

Since the first of the year, the U.S. command has shifted about 15,000 army troops to the northern sector to back up 40,000 marines already there. Intelligence officers estimate at least 35,000 North Vietnamese troops are massed in the frontier region.

The North Vietnamese attacked a marine company holding Hill 861-A with torpedoes, explosive charges and bazooka-type rockets. The hill dominates the northwestern approach to the Khe Sanh marine base three miles away.

AP correspondent John T. Wheeler, with the marines at Khe Sanh, reported that the marines crushed the attack with the help of artillery and jet air strikes.

In Hue, South Vietnamese planes bombed the walls of the ancient citadel Sunday in an unsuccessful attempt to open a breach for assaulting infantrymen.

A low mist kept the planes away this morning but U.S. 7th Fleet cruisers off shore joined the battle for the first time, firing at Communist positions with their eight-inch guns.

Another AP correspondent, John Lengel, reported from Hue that South Vietnamese troops control the northern portion of the walled citadel but perhaps 1,200 Communists held the rest, including the inner courtyard, and apparently were determined to fight to the end if necessary.

U.S. and South Vietnamese forces say they have killed nearly 1,200 soldiers in the Hue fighting. U.S. marine casualties there are estimated at 35 killed and 230 wounded so far, and a dozen U.S. civilians still are not accounted for.

North Korea Agrees to Free Pueblo Crew

From Reuters - AP

SEOUL (CP) — South Korea press reports said today the U.S. and North Korea have agreed in principle on the releases of the 83 crew members of the U.S. spy ship Pueblo. U.S. officials declined comment.

Meanwhile, South Korean sources reported another U.S. meeting with North Korea today. One source said the North Koreans offered to release the body of one dead crew member and "several" injured if the United States would admit the ship was trespassing in North Korean waters when it was seized Jan. 23.

The reports on the agreement were carried by both the evening newspaper Shina Ilbo and the South Korean news agency Hapdong.

The U.S. "indicated" it would accept the demand, the newspaper says.

In Washington, a U.S. state department spokesman said he had no information to confirm the news agency report on the agreement.

War's Horrors Come at Last To Saigon, Paris of East

SAIGON (AP) — Six days of fighting in Saigon have thrust the reality of war upon a city population that for years escaped the horrors that occur every day in the blood-stained countryside of South Vietnam.

This was the face of Saigon Sunday afernoon:

A Vietnamese doctor shrugged his shoulders beside the bed of a dying three-year-old boy lying sightless, his body a raw scar from stomach to forehead. The flame-thrower that had scorched him killed his mother and father.

A nervous policeman raised his rifle at a dozen Vietnamese families that wandered to the park in front of the National Assembly building in the centre of the city.

The weary men and women picked up their babies and bundles and straggled up the street toward the central market, homeless nomads in a city paralysed by the war.

Two miles across the city, in five blocks of ruins, a child fanned a stove to boil rice as her parents foraged in the dust that was left from their home. A shrapnel-scarred piece of tin roofing protected the child from the searing sun.

On the northwestern outskirts of the city, bulldozers gorged out a mass grave for Viet Cong soldiers who died in the assault on the capital. They were to be buried anonymously in a cemetery that holds the remains of French Legionnaires and the Vietnamese who fought beside them in the 1946-54 war.

Other gravediggers were at work in the national cemetery, preparing for the elaborate official funeral of a Vietnamese colonel beheaded by the Viet Cong. Six other graves were being dug alongside for his wife and five children, machine-gunned beside him.

A Vietnamese housewife hurried through police checkpoints during the brief lifting of the curfew, seeking food to replenish her larder. Food is available three times normal prices.

Wounded civilians lie at least two in a bed at all hospitals. At Cho Ray, the biggest hospital in Vietnam, an old man wounded in both legs and the chest sprawls on the tile flooring because all the beds are full.

On a bed next to him are two badly burned men. In the children's ward, a young girl, her head swathed in bloody bandages, nestles on the bosom of her mother, who suffers similar wounds.

The homeless wander the city seeking shelter and food. The fearful crowd the grounds of hospitals, churches and pagodas.

think that in such circumstances there would necessarily be an 'Ottawa' that could speak for the whole of English-speaking Canada.

"Indeed, the whole proposal disguises the obvious fact that separation could not be carried out without rupture and loss and pain."

Mr. Pearson said the position of Ontario is central to the current problem.

"More may be asked of it than of any other province in the way of innovation and magnanimity," he said.

The loss that would be caused by dismemberment would be almost as great for Ontario as it would be for Quebec.

Perhaps in the western provinces the current problem seemed remote. There, life had been deeply colored by the flow of immigrants from countries other than Britain and France.

"I would beg Canadians of such different ethnic origins to believe that any proposals of the federal government—or indeed of any other government—at this conference are put forward in full recognition of the great contribution they have made to Canadian life, not only in the west but in every other part of Canada, and in full recognition also of the sacrifices they have made to serve and enrich this country."

Mr. Pearson said he is very much aware of the decisive part played by the Atlantic provinces in the creation of Canada—and also that economic progress there has been slower than in other parts of Canada.

"I regard the problem of raising economic levels in the Atlantic provinces as a principal aspect of the total problem of maintaining Canadian unity."

Ottawa was ready to offer necessary and desired help to the provinces to carry out the recommendations of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism addressed to the provinces.

And it would be glad to enter immediately into negotiations with the provinces on the commission's recommendations addressed jointly to the federal and provincial governments.

Ottawa has already accepted those recommendations of the commission affecting the federal government alone.

On constitutional review, Mr. Pearson said Ottawa is willing to include it in such institutions of federalism as the composition and functions of the Supreme Court of Canada and the Senate, and division of powers between the federal and provincial governments.

However, the federal government must be strong enough to carry out its responsibilities for moderating economic fluctuations and for promoting economic growth.

"It must be able to promote economic equality—for Canadians in all parts of the country and for every economic region.

"It must maintain the right and the power to assist in research and in cultural developments.

Elm Trees Face Extinction Through Disease

A shadowy era is ending for Belleville — but there's little reason for jubilation.

Slowly fading from the scene are the city's elm trees — a link with community myth.

The legend has it that once there was a happy time in community living known as small-town Canada.

The gracefully sturdy elm was one of the physical trappings of the period, casting its broad coolness across many a Main Street.

Now, one by one the symbols of a bygone era are coming down.

By spring, Belleville will be short of more than 300 — all victims of Dutch elm disease.

Worse, the day may come, experts believe, when the elm — in Belleville and elsewhere — will be near extinction.

Fatalism appears qualified.

The disease no longer is an epidemic. It's an inevitability.

"Really it's a shame to lose all those trees", admits city parks superintendent Lloyd Syer.

"I think there's a strong possibility we will lose all those trees . . . unless they come up with some type of cure."

"But," he confesses, "I can not see that myself."

"It's the general tenor of opinion that the elm tree will eventually become extinct," concurs city engineer Wilbur Purcell.

Agreement is indicated by other sources.

A recent item in Ontario Shade Tree Council newsletter noted that "most American elms seemed doomed."

However, the same publication exorted: ". . . we must not allow discouragement to become defeat. The efforts to control the disease must continue unabated and all of us must continue to support the research which will . eventually produce a method to cure infected trees."

Meantime, the hewing goes on inexorably in Belleville.

Gord McInroy, of McInroy Maines Construction which holds the cutting contract, figures they must cut a daily dozen to meet an April works deadline.

By this time next year there may be as many more elms, drained of their sturdiness by runaway infection.

The disease manifests as a fungus carried by bark beetles from Europe.

The insects made their bid for unpopularity about 30 years ago after arriving unobtrusively in trans - Atlantic cargo shipments.

First detected in the United States in 1930, they have marched their blight across the continent.

Nobody knows for sure how many elms there are in Belleville, how many may have been stricken.

McInroy-Maines' contract calls for felling 329 trees on public and private property.

The cost is estimated at $16,125 — almost $10,000 of which is recoverable from senior governments under winter-works allowances.

The loss is compound.

The elm towers to a mighty height, its top spreading like a fountain of foliage.

It is ornamental and has utility.

Besides its obvious landscaping attractions, its deep shadows are pleasant insulation in the heat of summer.

This will be the time when the result of today's cutting and hauling will make it's maximum impact.

The loss is also nostalgic — but it carries a message

It has its roots in the poor planning of the small town past.

By relying on one species of tree for green-belt effectiveness, municipal ancestors sowed the seeds of today's problem.

It meant almost an entire civic landscape was prone to a single disease and could be felled at one sweep.

"This is one of the disadvantages from years ago," says Lloyd Syer. "Today to make tree-planting an asset you plan on a variety so you don't lose all of them at one time."

The search goes on for a cross-breed to replace the victimized American species with an elm developing high resistance to the disease.

The less-attractive Siberian elm has shown such stamina, but mating efforts have been fruitless.

Esthetically, however, the task is much more difficult.

"There's not another tree that has the same shape," muses the parks superintendent. "There's nothing that replaces it that way."

In some areas, however, the tree was doomed to removal.

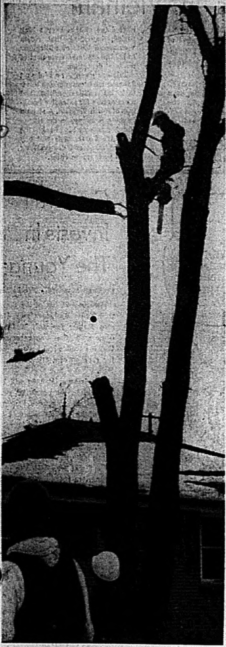
Main streets have become modernized and the dignified sprawl of the elm is an obstruction to downtown planning and utility services. Its removal on busy thouroughfares was inevitable.

However, along the residential strips and in such prime property areas as Bridge Street, the elm was part of the scene.

It still is a positive presence — but with a future indefinite.

Shovelling Away the Shadows

Elm trees, some of which provided shade for generations of Bellevillians, now are being shovelled into the past. Here machinery clears victim of Dutch elm disease from an east-end suburban garden.



Timber-r-r!

Another limb is lopped off a dying elm as contractors press current removal program. More than 300 elms will have disappeared by spring.

counties and districts of Stormont, Glengarry Prescott, Russell, Carleton, Nipissing, Temiskaming, Cochrane, Sudbury and Algoma.

Some communities in southwestern Ontario also would be affected, such as Penetanguishene on Georgian Bay, Welland in the Niagara Peninsula and parts of the county of Essex.

Premier Robarts said the employment of two languages in the administration of justice poses great difficulties. However, the government is investigating the possibility of providing translation services in courts, providing bilingual documents in French-speaking centres, and encouraging court officials to take advantage of language training facilities.

"In our view, it would be wisest that these proposals be initiated in the lower courts where most people have their only contact with the law."

Mr. Robarts said the legislature will consider by March 15 recommendations to provide guarantees for the establishment of French-language secondary schools in areas where there is a sufficient demand.

Careless Smoking Blamed

Careless smoking has been blamed for two of four alarms answered by the city fire department in the past several days.

Fire Chief Ted Poste reported today that a cigarette was responsible for a blaze which started in the basement of the home of Rudolph Rudophie, 12 Symington Drive, which ate its way up through the floor and into a partition on the first floor.

The owners were away from home at the time of the blaze.

Another blaze, this time caused by smoking in bed, occurred at 4:00 a.m. Sunday morning at the apartment of Robert Hatchey, 303 Front Street.

Other runs made by firemen over the weekend were for a flooded space heater, and for a dryer blaze at the Plaza coin wash on Sunday evening.

Complete Boy Scout Week Plans

The Boy Scout Week committee of the Belleville District Council held a meeting to discuss plans for the coming Commemoration Week of the Founder of Scouting — Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell.

A large number of the Groups in the city and adjoining Melrose and Corbyville-Cannifton are participating in Father and Son Banquets, All Day hikes, special Church Services, Hobby shows, "Family Nights," Open Nights and various other events. The object of all this activity is to honor the founder of Scouting through the practice and dispaly of various sections of Boy Scout Training.

Council President — Lew Andrews and the District Secretarty, Mrs. A. J. Fort with other members of the Council have been working diligently organizing and making every effort to make the Scout Week this year one of the best ever. District Commissioner "Bud" Bateman and his assistant Commissioners, Arnold Welch, Ted Yaeger, Stan Terry and other members of District report an increase in activity and improved Scouting through the various Units. The Venturer programs are particularly strong and one Group the 17th (Eastminster) is sponsoring a Hobby Show for the Group.

Rovers are working quietly in the background but their motto of "Service" is being observed and help is being given wherever possible. Many of the service clubs in the area sponsor Groups. The 13th (Holy Rosary) is sponsored by the Knights of Columbus; 14th Belleville by the Lions Club. Other clubs support Scouting in their own way as a part of their community service. There are in the district twelve churches who sponsor Boy Scout Groups, namely St. Thomas', Christ Church, St. Michael's, Emmanuel Baptist, College Hill United, Tabernacle United, St. Margaret's Anglican, Holloway United, Bridge Street United, St. Joseph's (R.C.), Eastminster United, St. Mark's United (Cannifton) and Melrose United. Home and School Associations at Queen Mary School, Sir Winston Churchill, D. R. Atkins, Sir John A. MacDonald Schools also sponsor Groups for a total twenty two sponsoring organizations.

Scouting in principle is undenominational, but the fundamental principles of Scouting are common to nearly all denominations, and Scouts are expected to carry out faithfully their religious duties. Life's first principle is to honor God and this is also the principle of the church and the Boy Scout movement.

We will be looking forward during Boy Scout Week, February 18 - 25 ot meeting many of the good citizens of Belleville and District and showing them what we can do.

This is a familiar scene at the many dams along the Trent River system. Stoplogs have been removed from dams in the Trenton area but despite the attempt to keep the river flowing ice develops between the locks and even in the dam sluices.

Voice From Quebec

Addressing himself to the contemporary problems of French and English-speaking Canadians and to the future of Canada as a nation, television personality Laurier LaPierre provided a stimulating evening for a Belleville audience last week.

As a socialist (NDP candidate for Lachine), Mr. LaPierre might have been expected to speak in favor of republicanism for Canada. This he did while indicating he was not against the monarchy as such.

The show of hands at The Canadian Club meeting, suggesting an approximate 50-50 ratio on the monarchy-republican issue (one estimate gave the monarchy an edge with about 60 per cent in favor) was an indication of how things are evolving in Canada. That republicanism should find any favor at all in Empire Loyalist country is surprising in itself. And yet perhaps not — the signs have been apparent for some time now. It is part of the evolutionary process, of Canada's destiny.

Essentially, this is a question that must be allowed to work itself out. However, the time has not yet come to cast off a tried and trusted institution that is so closely associated with Canada's identity, and its leading position in the Commonwealth.

To return to Mr. LaPierre and relations between the two founding races. First of all the NDP candidate took issue with the twin founders concept. "There are several founding races," he said. Still, French and English predominate and Mr. LaPierre was on firm ground when he said ignorance was at the root of much of the trouble between the two.

They are profoundly ignorant of you," he told his English-speaking audience. "And you, on the other hand are profoundly ignorant of them."

He is right of course. And yet, Quebecers must be given credit for their superior knowledge in that prime requisite of communication, language. There are more French Canadians able to converse in English than English familiar with French.

Mr. LaPierre cited Expo as a classic example of what could be achieved by English and French Canadians working together. A unilingual people, he said, could not have created it. And not forgetting all the other nations who contributed.

The speaker had some interesting ideas on the political career to which he aspires. A politician, he said, must become a "social engineer" and should not be elected unless prepared "to carry on a dialogue with the people."

Moreover, there should be "immense mobility" in politics with government changing every five years (that of course depends on the voters, otherwise we would no longer be living in a democracy). And people, he said, should join political parties, creating a "participating democracy."

Without holding with Mr. LaPierre's political faith, he does have some sound ideas and a colorful way of expressing them — in English. That alone is a point to remember in reflecting on this whole issue of relations between the two races.

Unification

The men of the armed services have had their wakes, the battle over Canada's new military establishment is over and unification . . . integration or whatever it is, has become a fact.

In the somewhat confusing rank structure the higher echelons of airmen assume military nomenclature. Thus Air Vice-Marshal Chester Hull, chief of Air Transport Command, takes on the rank of major-general. Traditional navy ranks are maintained for the most part because of their use by most of the world's fleets.

Perhaps the crowning indignity where inter-service rivalry is concerned is the fact that the new unified force already is taking on its own brand of contemporary jargon. This way a recruit may express a preference to join say the "sea environment" or the "air element."

Beyond all the heat of political strife, however, is the fact the new force has been brought into being for a serious purpose — the efficient defence of this country and of treaty obligations.

At the moment there is no guarantee Canada will be able to remain uncommitted in conflicts such as Vietnam. If this country is called upon for any reason to send men and equipment into battle, it should be able to effect such an operation all the more efficiently because of the new unified command structure.

Reds Pay Heavily for All-out Attacks in Vietnam

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hard-hit American and South Vietnamese troops appear to be recovering from the Viet Cong's shock assault of the cities and while evidence lingers of at least a moral let-down for the Americans, the Communists are likely to pay dearly for their spectacular but temporary aim.

The big Viet Cong victory was their ability to crack the defences of Saigon and so disrupt the internal operations of the city that this very heart of American operations could be turned into utter confusion.

This is the embarrassment with which the Americans now must live. They rarely can tell friend from foe; they cannot match the genius of the enemy in total deception and penetration and they cannot rely on their South Vietnamese friends to lock Viet Cong infiltration.

The Americans anticipated a big assault on the Khe Sanh outpost in the North—and this may still come—but apparently not assaults elsewhere in the country of such devastating magnitude.

The savage ferocity of the Saigon attack, strategically timed with the other assaults, suggests the Communists still have great vitality, drive and faith.

It is unlikely that the Viet Cong can hold on to their urban gains.

The Communist guerrilla strategy is based on control of the farmlands to form a stranglehold on the cities before a final onslaught.

Some Western officials maintain the IVet Cong did not have full rural control and that the assault was premature, resulting from frustration and attempts to break out of a dead lock.

The extensive detailed planning suggests that the Viet Cong plotted the attacks over a long period, indicating that North Vietnamese hints of willingness to hold peace talks were part of the total deception.

This has given President Johnson more ammunition to attack his political critics and more excuse for extensive bombings of North Vietnam. A step-up in these bombings in the Hanoi-Haiphong area is likely the price the Communists will pay for confusing and demoralizing South Vietnamese cities.

Canadians and the Monarchy

Ottawa Journal

It is not likely they doubled the guard at Buckingham Palace on learning that by a vote of 134 to 33, with some 1,333 delegates not bothering to attend, the Quebec Liberal Association had decided that the monarchy and the office of Governor-General should be abandoned.

It was, in effect, a minority vote by a still smaller minority section of the National Liberal Party. The National Liberal Party conference this fall would not approve such a resolution, nor a Parliament that was asked now to make it law.

So, not at Buckingham Palace nor Windsor Castle, nor in the countless loyal "monarchist" homes across Canada need alarm bells ring. Still less, in Canada, should the fires of prejudice be enflamed as though this were some exclusively French-Canadian plot.

Just this month Macleans magazine says the Queen is "a frill we can do without." In a leading editorial it contemplates with quiet approval that the monarchy might now be excused: "The change would remove a lot of confusion from the concept of Canadian independence." Last year Douglas LePan, the stoutly Anglo-Saxon ardently-Canadian principal of University College of Toronto University, said that in terms of preserving Canada the Queen was "expendable."

Reports from all over Canada suggest that youth, in or out of university, has little sense of personal association with the Crown. And as to arguing that the Quebec vote is only a minority, it is significant that Premier Johnson and Jean Marchand have urged that any revised constitution "should begin by proclaiming Canada's absolute sovereignty" (Johnson's words).

The Journal does not believe that the majority of Canadians wishes now to let the monarchy slip away. But we believe that enough Canadians do feel that way, of English, French and other descent, so that the issue should be one that we can embrace in our social and political discussions without bitter cries of "treason."

There is in the minds of those who would abandon the monarchy no insult or discourtesy to the Queen herself, little insistence that the monarchy has not served us well in the past. They feel it somehow inhibits sovereignty, and that in today's circumstances it is "expendable" if it stands in the way of national unity.

The Journal does not believe that time has yet come. The critics of the monarchy have been too negative. They have failed to put forward or seriously discuss any effective replacement of the essential constitutional services the throne now renders our system of parliamentary-democracy — a check and balance above partisanship and prejudice.

The present moment of our national turmoil is not the time to abandon any tested mainstay, least of all one which, in addition to its usefulness, is at the heart of so many memories, traditions and affections.

North Sea Yields Natural Gas

Cornwall Standard Freeholder

Long drawn - out bickering over the price of North Sea natural gas has dulled one of the few bits of silver lining on Britain's clouded industrial horizon.

The Gas Council, government — operated and designated the sole purchaser of undersea gas has resumed bargaining with the oil companies after virtual agreement on a price was dashed by devaluation of the pound.

The most hopeful forecast is for agreement by March.

Haggling over the price threatens development schedules for getting the gas ashore from established discoveries and makes for doubt and hesitation in further exploration plans.

Gas was first discovered in commercial quantities off England's east coast in late 1965 and stirred hopes of an industrial bonanza for Britain, which depends on costly imports of gas and oil, manufactured gas and increasingly expensive domestic coal.

A busy and prosperous Britain is a benefit to Canada and it is regrettable to see this golden opportunity slip away from the hard-pressed country after the high hopes for an industrial boom that came in the wake of the early discovery of a much-needed, close-to-home supply of gas.

In Canadian terms, the price sought by the oil companies works out to about 35 cents for 1,000 cubic feet, compared with varying prices in Western Canada that range around 25 cents for 1,000 cubic feet.

While price talks drag on, some exploration and development activity continues in the North Sea, but it is low key.

Gas from West Sole Field, where the first gas was discovered, began coming ashore last spring and the undersea pipeline has been supplying the target 100,000,000 cubic feet a day since. This is equivalent to about 10 per cent of Britain's current gas consumption and about equal to the amount imported in liquid form from Algeria. With other wells soon coming into production it appears Britain could easily reach its target of 2,000,000,000 cubic feet a day of North Sea gas by 1970.

Isolation Does Things To Them

Stratford Beacon • Herald

Scientists who study the scientists who are studying the secrets of Antarctica have noted an interesting behavioral phenomenon.

According to one psychological study of the men, who spend up to a year in isolation on the frigid continent, the first pictures to appear on the walls of their under-the-ice quarters are pin-ups.

These begin to be covered by travel posters after several months — pictures of sun-drenched beaches and mountain forests.

Then, about two or three months before the men are due to return home, the pin-ups reappear.

Cornwall Invests In The Young

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

The construction of the Cornwall Youth Residence moved a step further forward, Wednesday, with the announcement that the tender had been let for the erection of a $120,000 structure.

Of this sum, $100,000 will be provided by the provincial government in what could prove one of its best investments in youth and combatting juvenile delinquency ever made in this area.

In reality, the home is designed and will be operated to give youngsters betweeen 12 and 18, a second chance, or even a first chance to become acceptable citizens. Not all those who will be sheltered by the home will have run afoul of the law. Some will be boys from broken homes or environments where the odds are all against them.

True, the capacity of the home is not large, perhaps not nearly large enough, but the line of thinking behind its establishment is a clear beacon marking a new course in the handling of a major problem.

The increase in juvenile delinquency across the nation and in every city and town in Canada over the past few years is defiite proof that the handling of juveniles has left much to be desired.

Hand in hand with an increasing juvenile crime rate has gore an increase in adult crime and this is not surprising.

Certainly some progress has been made in penology, but all too often our prisons and industrial farms, as well as houses of correction, serve to turn young offenders into dedicated criminals.

As the twig is bent, so grows the tree and if the crime rate is to be cut or even held in check, the chief solution has to be found before the neophyte becomes a hardened criminal.

This is one of the tasks those in charge of the residence must face and a glance at the names of the members of its board of directors gives every promise of success.

Beside provincial, municipal, country and the Kiwanis Clubs financial aid, the residence is going to need private support, both financially and morally.

The citizen who supports the residence in any way will be making a good investment.

The refuge will not be a haven for malcontents, but a home in the true sense. No house can become a home without love, mutual interests and discipline and which of these three comes first depends on individual cases and what is needed most.

The Cornwall Youth Residence is something which has been needed for a long, long time. As something new it will have its problems, but there is little doubt they will be met and solved and the whole Cornwall area will benefit from its existence.

U. S. Likely to Increase Its Forces in Vietnam

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The unprecedented ferocity, scope and durability of the Viet Cong offensive in Vietnam seems certain to lead to an increase in American troops and arms there.

This is the gist of what President Johnson has been telling congressional leaders, what Defence Secretary Robert McNamara has been telling members of Congress and what influential congressmen have been telling the press.

There now are 535,000 Americans in South Vietnam and 35,000 in Thailand or just offshore, manning American warships and planes.

The president, many feel, laid the groundwork for expansion when he called up 14,700 naval and air force reservists last week after the North Korean seizure of the spy ship Pueblo and its 83-man crew.

The men called up must serve 24 months unless released earlier. The president had resisted earlier suggestions for calling up the reserves. Now he has made plain he will call more, including the army, if he decides the troops are needed.

It appears too early yet to judge what domestic political implications there are in an election year from the Pueblo affair, on which the president continues to show restraint, and more particularly from the great offensive mounted in South Vietnam by the Viet Cong insurgents and their North Vietnamese allies.

The mood here is one of gloom, shock and deflation in the wake of so many encouraging reports that military progress was being made, that the South Vietnamese government was slowly assuming a more democratic hue and that pacification of the countryside was gaining.

Despite heavy casualties, the Viet Cong are judged to have achieved a good many of their psychological objectives in Vietnam, and perhaps in the U.S. as well.

They have caused U.S. forces to be spread so thinly that military requests for more manpower take on increased importance.

Decision Required On Essential Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Judge Walter Little of Parry Sound said Saturday the time has come to decide whether any union whose members perform essential jobs should not be allowed to strike.

The county court judge told the Ontario branch, Canadian Bar Association, that it should be decided whether workers other than police, firemen and hospital staffs—such as railway, hydro and civil service workers—should retain their right to strike.

He cautioned, however, that if these workers did give up the strike weapon they must have assurances that they would make the same advances without it, even possibly "come out ahead."

He added that a search for an alternative to strikes must continue because they were a wasteful and ineffective method of solving labor problems.

84,000 Coal Miners Return to Work in U. S.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Soft coal miners returned to the pits in western Pennsylvania at midnight, signalling the end of a one-week walkout that had idled about 84,000 workers in five states.

United Mine Workers and company officials in the other affected states—Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Virginia—said they expect workers on the job today and the resumption of normal operations.

Thousands of miners met Sunday and voted to go back to work.

The strike was set off last Sunday when miners in western Pennsylvania stayed off the job to protest the use of Pennsylvania state troopers at a small, non-union mine being picketed by the UMW.

The walkout spread to other states, cutting heavily into the U.S. soft coal production.

In Pennsylvania, Harvey Younker, president of District 2 of the UMW, said the 8,500 men in his 17 county area would be on the job. And major coal producers—Bethlehem Mines Co., Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Co., North American Coal Co., and Barnes and Tucker Coal Co. —reported miners returned to work at the midnight shift.

The return-to-work agreement hinged on a triple compromise hammered out among the UMW, the state's labor and industry secretary and William Hart and Solar Fuel Co., where picketing sparked the strike.

Another meeting among the three parties was scheduled today in Harrisburg.

In the agreement Saturday, Solar agreed to negotiate with the union, the UMW said it would not picket the company's mine and the state agreed to July 1 may get in on it, Erie state troopers.

The strike was the biggest to hit the coal industry since 1950 when the UMW struck during contract negotiations.

Some coal operators said the current strike might be an attempt by the union to cut into coal supplies to enhance the UMW's position in contract talks later this year.

Kierans Says Medicare Should Be Changed

SASKATOON (CP) — The federal government's medical care plan should be altered so provinces that say they cannot afford the scheme beginning tion, housing or regional devel- Kierans, Liberal leadership candidate, said in an interview Saturday.

"I think the legislation might be modified to the extent that the federal government would pay for introduction of a partial coverage program," he said.

"At the same time it would go ahead with the original legislation for all those provinces that come under the provisions and requirements of a universal medical care program."

Mr. Kierans said he favors a July 1 start for the program, "but, if any province says it cannot go ahead on a 100-per-cent basis, the federal government should give assurance that it will still pay one half the costs of implementing a partial program."

He said if provinces were forced to tax for 100-per-cent medical care coverage, many provinces would have to put off other projects, such as education, hocsing or regional development, which might be more urgent.

Douglas Wants Review Board

PRESTON, Ont. (CP) — T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader called Saturday for establishment of a "prices review board," and said industry should be required to justify any increases in prices.

Trade unions have to, he told a group of unionists.

"You go before the conciliation board and have to justify an increase in prices."

"A price review board is urgently needed," Mr. Douglas said.

"It should constantly study the relationship between industry, prices and profit. You and I know from everyday experience that it is possible to have an increase in wages without an increase in prices."

The NDP leader was given a standing ovation after his address to the closing banquet of the Midwest Ontario Labor Education Institute. The weekend meeting attracted more than 300 unionists to Preston and nearby Guelph.

The child is in Trenton Memorial Hospital recovering from a broken arm and leg and minor injuries.

Ibbotson was also charged with a break-in at the Trent Valley Fruit Supply on Highway 33.

Police said 19-year-old George McCoy of Bayside was also charged in connection with the same two incidents.

In addition, McCoy is charged with five counts of theft from Trenton coin laundries. The thefts occurred between Jan. 1 and 25.

Trenton detective Sidney Vickers, who worked with Brighton Provincial Police constable James Graham in the investigation, said Joseph Wellman, 18, of 39 John St., Trenton, has been charged with break, enter and theft along with McCoy for the coin wash incidents.

The Dec. 17 break-in at the Pines Motel netted the thieves $200 in cash, a dozen bottles of liquor and a jewel box from the residence of Harry Long. The jewelry was later found in nearby bushes.

Ibbotson and McCoy are being held in custody in the Northumberland County jail at Cobourg until their court appearance Wednesday in Brighton.

Six Charged in Robbery

KITCHENER (CP) — Six men were arrested Saturday in an east-end apartment and charged with the armed robbery Friday of a branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank. Estimates of the amount ranged from $15,000 to $32,000.

"Some of the money has been recovered—we don't know how much," said a detective.

Charged were Real Massey, 26, of Kitchener and five Montreal men: Gerard Bigras, 26; Hilaire Peupeart, 26; Laurent Tremblay, 23; Donat Fournier, 26 and Jacques Massey, 26.

On Friday, four men armed with shotguns and pistols forced nine bank employees and six customers to lie on the floor in a vault while they scooped money out of cash drawers and stuffed it into pillow cases.

A few hours later, two men entered a nearby garage and asked the owner to call a taxi. Instead he called the police. When two detectives arrived, one man pulled out a gun and threatened to kill them.

The two rode off in the police cruiser, later found abandoned.

Woman Is Appointed Leader of Recreation

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa's newly-appointed city commissioner of recreation and parks, Margaret Farr, 52, says competence, not sex, should determine employee qualifications.

Mrs. Farr now has an $11,982 annual salary and a staff of about 150 — 25 of them women.

Her appointment as commissioner was recommended several months before city council gave its approval. The council had caused controversy by voting to advertise for more applicants despite the recommendation.

Her interest in recreation and parks began as a girl.

Born Margaret Dunning in Toronto, she graduated from the Margaret Eaton school of physical education, where she was most interested in dancing and water sports.

Her first job, at the Hamilton YWCA, left her summers free for work as a counsellor at Tanamakoon, a girls' camp in Algonquin Park.

After taking an in-service training course at the University of Western Ontario and receiving a permanent municipal recreation director's certificate from the province of Ontario, she worked in New Zealand where she married Flying Officer Douglas Farr.

Following his death in 1945, she returned to Canada, coming to Ottawa in 1952 as assistant commissioner of the city's recreation and parks department.

Doc Replies to Teener Re Smoking Habit

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since your column is the greatest bulletin board for teen-agers in the whole wide world, will you please print what Dr. Florence A. Brown said to a 17-year-old Marshfield, Ore. student? Dr. Brown is a Fellow Emeritus of the American College of Chest Surgeons of Portland, Ore.

The 17-year-old said, "A high school student should be able to judge for himself whether to smoke or not to smoke or he doesn't have enough sense to be in school."

Dr. Brown responded: "Sound judgment requires a basis of factual information and honest acceptance of demonstrated facts. I seriously doubt that many high school students have had an opportunity to learn certain pertinent facts. Therefore, I recommend that the decision to smoke be delayed until the following studies can be carried on by the student:

"Learn the chemical components of cigarette smoke, the microscopic anatomy and functions of the delicate lining of the bronchial tubes and the effect of hot cigarette smoke on lung tissue.

"Select 25 people of achievement who are at least 40 years old, people who have smoked cigarettes for a minimum of 20 years. Ask these individuals if they recommend cigarette smoking to teen-agers. Ask them also if they have ever tried to quit. Ask these people approximately how much money they have spent on cigarettes during the last year and multiply it by 40. Then ask yourself what other pleasures you might enjoy for an equal amount — pleasures that do not carry the risk of lung cancer.

"Ask your local fire department's assistance in learning the value of property destroyed and the number of lives lost as a result of smokers' carelessness.

"Having made the above studies you will be in a better position to judge whether or not you should smoke." — AN OREGON LANDERS FAN.

DEAR FAN: Many thanks for letting us know what Dr. Florence Brown said to the 17-year-old. I am indebted to you and Dr. Brown for the opportunity to put her uncommonly good sense before millions of young readers.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I work in an office where most of the people are married. I am not. A certain man in the accounting department is well known for his risque stories. He feels that in order to live up to his reputation, he must entertain the office with at least one new story every day.

At first I stood and listened with the others, but after a while the stories got dirtier and dirtier. Finally I became disgusted and decided I wouldn't listen to any more filth.

Yesterday, my supervisor came to my desk and said, "I know you don't care for Harry's jokes, but you should listen anyway so as not to give the impression that you think you are better than the rest of us."

The woman has always been a good friend and I know she has my best interest at heart. Is she right or wrong? — BLISTERED EARS AND ALL ALONE.

DEAR BLISTERED: She's wrong. Refusing to listen to dirty jokes does not mean you place yourself above those who listen. It merely indicates that your entertainment standards are somewhat higher than theirs. It also means you refuse to pretend to be amused by something that offends you.

Question of Modesty Floors Lawn Bowler

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Women lawn bowlers in Auckland are in a ferment over the disqualification of three veteran teams because a member in each appeared for play in skirts shorter than regulations.

The disqualified skirts were all well below the knee, but shorter than the regulation 13 inches from the ground.

One of the competitors disqualified was 76 and all were over 60. One was so upset that she fainted and could not be revived for some time.

One of the women had washed her frock and did not realize until it was measured that it had shrunk slightly. Another wore extra underwear because of cold weather, causing a hem to ride up somewhat. A third, concerned in case her frock infringed the regulations, let the hem down half-way through a game—but officials measured from the original hemline.

Bowling officials maintain that they simply carried out the rules and note that the regulations already have been liberalized. The limit once was 12 inches from the ground.

At the last conference of the New Zealand Women's Bowling Association, Auckland bowlers moved that skirts be lifted to 14 inches from the ground, but the motion was defeated.

Points for Parents

Father: "This street is blocked off for sledding. Don't use your sled anywhere else or we'll have to put it away for the rest of the winter."

Have definite rules about sledding and enforce them strictly. Don't let your child be one of the 350,000 who die each year as a result of sledding accidents.

Music Teachers Plan Year's Activities

The first meeting of 1968 for the Belleville Registered Music Teachers' Association was convened by the president, Mrs. G. H. Rennie, at her home, on Wednesday.

During business sessions reports from various committees were heard, outlining activities of 1967. Plans for the new year were made, with the first 1968 students' recital to be held March 2nd at Sir John A. Macdonald School, Harder Drive. Proceeds from the recital will be used for the prizes awarded by the teachers annually to the students receiving highest marks in conservatory examinations.

Announcement was made of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' convention to be held March 17 to 20 in London, Ontario. Discussion of bylaw changes and membership fees followed and it was decided that appointment of delegates to the convention would be left to the executive.

Shirley Harmer Sings Farewell to Canada

OSHAWA (CP) — Shirley Harmer, Canadian television's golden girl of the 1950s, has returned to her hometown this week to sing a farewell to Canada.

In March, the 37-year-old singer will marry Montreal night club owner Damiano Durinzi, who plans to sell his club and buy a hotel on Italy's Adriatic coast.

After a tour through Italy, Belgium and West Berlin, Shirley and her husband will settle in Rome.

Last week she proved to a loyal hometown audience she can still sing, performing the full range between show tunes and familiar pop ballads.

After three seasons with CBC's Showtime, Shirley worked under contract to Paramount Pictures for a year and acted in a film with Robert Taylor.

Shirley agrees it can be tough performing in your hometown but she has proved a big draw at a newly-built motel supper-club.

Shirley had two previous marriages, to Toronto singer George Murray and actor Al Bertram.

Strict Rules Govern Perfect Fudge-making

By MARY MOORE

Amateur and experienced fudge makers must have a thermometer to make this fudge which is the subject of this week's cooking lesson.

The recipe makes unusually creamy fudge but the rules are strict and must be obeyed to obtain a professional product.

BLOND FUDGE

("Maple Cream")

- 3 cups granulated sugar
- ½ tsp. salt
- 1 cup light cream (10 per cent "cereal" cream)
- ½ cup milk
- ¼ cup corn syrup
- 2 tbsps. butter or margarine
- 2 tsps. vanilla
- ½ to 1 cup whole or coarsely chopped walnuts

In a heavy large saucepan, combine sugar, salt, cream, milk, corn syrup and butter. Stir constantly with wooden spoon over medium heat until mixture boils. Remove spoon and rest it on a saucer near to hand. Insert thermometer and boil steadily, with bubbles all over top, to exactly 238 deg. Fahr. but stir it well twice during this boiling period. Remove from heat as soon as mercury reaches the 238 deg. Fahr. mark. Add vanilla and stir, then cool, without stirring until heat subsides to 110 deg. Fahr. Beat fudge. This requires a strong arm. Beat until fudge loses its shine and has only a dull gloss. At once add nuts and scrape into buttered 8 x 8" pan, working as quickly as you can, scraping fudge from sides of pan with knife and from bottom with metal spoon. (Soak pan and thermometer in cold water.) Chill fudge until set.

This fudge is slow to set to familiar fudge texture but is worth mastering because of its unusual creaminess.

VARIATION:
CHOCOLATE FUDGE

Follow the recipe above for Blond Fudge but add 2 squares (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate (or 2 pkges. "Choco-Bake") to ingredients in saucepan before starting to cook.

The Experts Say

Now Is the Time to Order Sealskins

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian woman can change the sealskin coat from a stigma to a status symbol and help the Eskimo out of an economic crisis at the same time.

Abjon Bromfield, branch supervisor of arts and crafts at the department of Indian affairs and northern development, says now is the time to order sealskins.

Eskimos, who do not mass-slaughter seals but hunt in a humane and thrifty way under harsh Arctic conditions, are feeling the pinch of unfavorable publicity about the spring hunting of baby seals on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, he said.

"The Eskimo kills the same way as we would kill an animal to eat. Eskimos don't do it in the same sense as mass slaughter."

The boycott of arctic seal products by the once-strong European market is unfair, Mr. Bromfield said, since the Eskimos do not even kill the same variety and only catch mature seals, not pups.

The Eskimos, some of whom are largely dependent on income from sealskins, hunt the distinctive jar or ringed seal. The skins of these animals are silvery-grey with black markings and are easily recognized by the general public.

The pups of the migratory harp seal born on the icefields off the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Labrador coast, however, are woolly and are usually dyed and processed before being used by furriers.

These "white coat" pelts are rarely seen in Canada—since shipments go directly to European outlets—and may not be recognized as seal.

"The confusion between the two seals has played havoc with the economy and morale of the Eskimo," Mr. Bromfield said.

"A few years ago, he received $15 for the raw pelt. Then the price slumped to $6 or $8. Now he gets about $2 to $3 and there is a considerable backlog of skins in storage.

"We want to keep the Eskimo's hunting prowess going and encourage Eskimos to produce sealskin goods in their own communities.

"Because there are skins available in Canada as a result of the slump in demand abroad, the Eskimos have started to make garments on a limited scale.

"But if they find it isn't worth their while to go out hunting, they'll decide they might as well go on relief. This would have repercussions all down the line."

At present, an Eskimo garment, though carefully worked, is designed to suit the needs of a cold climate rather than the demands of fashion.

The parkas are generally loose-fitting with a light lining.

City-dwellers who want more fitted, stylish coats should see their furriers, Mr. Bromfield said. A good quality pelt now costs about $35 after it has been shipped to southern Canada and tanned.

Power of Concentration Increases Through Practice

Dear Doris: I have trouble studying. People, television or comic books will distract me from my homework. It is just like somebody forcing me not to do homework.

I am in grade nine. What's wrong? — Distracted

Dear Distracted: I can understand the hazard of a TV set someone else turns on; I can imagine people milling around noisily. But comic books? Do they automatically float onto your desk and open themselves before your dismayed eyes?

You can learn concentration. You can grow will power; and the sooner the better. One medical man confided to me ruefully, that all through school and most of college, he allowed himself to be tempted and drawn away from his books by every wind that blew.

When he eventually caught on and learned concentration his grades rose and he began to enjoy what he was doing. Still does; but what a lot of time to waste!

The ten-cent leaflet "How to Study" is on its way to you. First principles include finding a quiet corner with no distractions, having a set time to settle down to it, and providing yourself with proper study equipment.

If a diversion threatens, jerk your mind right back to Julius Caesar or the New Math or whatever intriguing topic you see before you.

Dear Doris: I have some married friends who are very good to me. For Christmas they brought me over pies and cake and they do this quite often through the year.

Would like to know what a proper gift would be or something to show my appreciation besides "thank you".

Dear Bachelor: Say it with flowers. Or a box of chocolates next time you drop in. Or offer to babysit with the two youngsters so the couple can get out together. Or take them all out for a restaurant meal.

When you call on them be observant: Would they prize a footstool, or new card table and chairs? A thoughtful gift is merited by friendship like theirs.

Federal Control Over Economic Policy Viewed as Essential

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government staked a claim Sunday to the major instruments of economic policy in any future distribution of powers between federal and provincial governments.

Its working paper for the federal-provincial constitutional conference opening today says Parliament must have responsibility for "the major and inextricably inter-related instruments of economic policy if it is to stimulate employment and control inflation."

Calling distribution of powers the final step in a lengthy constitutional review, the federal government seeks:

1. Control over money and credit policy, "the balance-wheel role" in tax, tariff and balance of payments policy.

2. Responsibility for interprovincial and international trade.

3. Power to redistribute income between persons and provinces, including the right to make payments to individuals through old age pensions, unemployment insurance and family allowances and to provinces to equalize the levels of provincial government services. Also included is power to tax "those best able to contribute."

"These are central areas of responsibility essential to the apparatus of the modern sovereign state—economic policy, the equalization of opportunity, technological and cultural development and international affairs."

It acknowledges that among these are areas in which responsibility is shared with the provinces.

The federal claim is put forward as one of four guiding principles on negotiating distribution of powers if the conference decided on a comprehensive reassessment of the constitution.

Constitutional Conference Combatants in Opposite Corners

Federal View

First Essential Step-- Grant Language Rights

OTTAWA (CP) — A strong federal plea for the acceptance of French language and education rights across Canada as the first—and most vital—step in constitutional reform was laid before the province today.

In a major policy paper issued Sunday night in advance of today's federal-provincial constitutional conference, Ottawa warns dissatisfaction of French-Canadians with their role in Confederation is the nation's greatest problem.

Ottawa's stand is that the English-speaking provinces must act at once to adopt the recommendations made by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism in its first report, issued in December.

"The consequences of not doing so now could be serious," the statement warns.

These recommendations were that Ontario and New Brunswick declare themselves now as officially bilingual provinces and that the others follow suit in districts where French-Canadians comprise at least 10 per cent of the population.

With this essential item out of the way, the conference could then set machinery in motion for a study of other constitutional matters.

The federal view is that this should be done in a series of constitutional conferences over the next two or three years

It gives lowest priority to a new sharing of economic powers, the area in which provincial leaders have already expressed the most interest. The premiers are hoping for increased taxing powers.

On the issue of French language and education rights, Ottawa acknowledges there will be "real and practical difficulties" in adopting them and offers assistance to any province that requests it.

"And we realize, unhappily, that there will be some people who will oppose the very principle of granting to French-Canadians in English-speaking Canada the rights which English-speaking Canadians enjoy in Quebec," the policy document says.

It calls on the premiers to lead the way to a policy of linguistic equality.

The federal government says the second item of priority, to be dealt with at further conferences, should be the central institutions of the nation, including the Senate and the Supreme Court of Canada.

The Senate might be reshaped to become the special guardian of individual rights, including protection of bilingualism.

Ottawa takes a firm stand, however, against granting the provinces any direct participation in international affairs, saying "there is no evident need to provide the provinces with special powers in this field."

This could lead to separate foreign policies, separate relations with other states, separate representation at the United States and separate embassies.

"But it would mean more than that. Separatism abroad would lead to separatism at home. We should make no mistake about that."

This is in direct opposition to one of Quebec's major demands.

Ottawa's policy also leaves little room for provincial encroachment in tax and economic fields. It says the federal government must have the power to redistribute income between persons and provinces in order to equalize opportunity across the country.

Two Socred Premiers Will Support Status Quo

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's two western-most provinces were expected to make a strong pitch for preservation of the British North America Act and the constitutional status quo at today's opening session of the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Premiers W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia and E. C. Manning of Alberta spent most of Sunday night over battle plans with advisers in separate sections of the Chateau Laurier.

Premier Bennett took time out for an interview and announced he couldn't see any reason to make fundamental changes in the constitution because "it has worked very well in the past 100 years."

Premier Manning was too busy to talk to reporters Sunday night and announced as he shut his hotel room door that Alberta will make its position "perfectly clear" during the course of the conference.

Quebec View

Bilingualism Not Enough, More Power Primary Aim

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec today fought for greatly increased provincial government power by arguing that bilingualism outside Quebec isn't the entire solution to "the major crisis in Canadian history."

Mr. Johnson's position at the federal - provincial constitutional conference clashed with that of the federal government, which emphasized that French language and education rights must get priority in a constitutional bill of human rights.

The Quebec premier, unloading a 12,000-word plea for a new constitution based on recognition of "the French-Canadian nation," told Prime Minister Pearson and the provincial premiers:

"The equality to be established between our two cultural communities depends not only on extending bilingualism territorially, but even more on extending the jurisdictions of Quebec, the homeland of the French-Canadian nation."

While the federal government rates the bill of rights No. 1 in importance in constitutional reform, the Quebec government rates its claims for new powers as No. 1 priority.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Johnson referred to the federal government's campagin to extend official bilingualism beyond Quebec by saying:

". . . French Canadians greet with some astonishment the proposal to recognize French as an official language now, after 100 years of Confederation, because they have always taken for granted that both our languages were official in Canada."

The Quebec brief says the history of French Canada has demonstrated that Quebec is the "true national state" of French-speaking Canadians who cannot be expected to entrust their culture to a federal government where they form a minority.

To accomplish its ambitions as No. 1 government of French - speaking Canadians, Quebec staked out a vast field of new powers that extends to a larger role in immigration, labor relations, marriage and divorce.

The brief listed Quebec-sought priority powers as social security measures— such as old age pensions and family allowances, foreign relations and broadcasting.

Quebec asked for the right to negotiate and sign international agreements in fields of provincial jurisdiction "within the limits of Canadian foreign policy." This power is tradtiionally limited to sovereign states.

And, stressing the role of broadcasting in modern education, Quebec asked for the right to name some directors of the CBC, the Board of Broadcast Governors and share in federal powers of designating frequencies for radio and television stations.

Equal Rights for All Joey Smallwood's Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — Equal rights for every Canadian, equal rights for every provincial government and no "special status" for anybody. That is the position of Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland.

Generally speaking, it sums up the position of all the Atlantic premiers, expressed as they arrived here Sunday night for the federal-provincial conference on the constitution.

All were conciliatory on the subject of French-language and cultural rights, although some had reservations about the mechanics of applying them.

Premier Smallwood said his position now is "perfectly identical" with the one he took at the Confederation of Tomorrow conference at Toronto in November. There should be no concessions to any provincial government or legislature that were not available to all.

Canadians should have the right to speak and write and read English or French as they wish and the right to have their children taught in whichever language they prefer no matter where they live.

Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia said his government is ready to do what it can to give French-speaking citizens greater equality in matters of language and culture.

Premier Alex Campbell noted that Prince Edward Island has already expressed agreement with the principle of a bill of rights for all Canadians and for the linguistic proposals of the bilingualism and biculturalism commission.

Premier Louis J. Robichaud of New Brunswick, whose province is about one-third French-speaking, said money is the biggest obstacle to carry out these proposals in his province.

Senate May Get Vital New Role

OTTAWA (CP) — A new role and powers for the Senate are hinted at by the federal government in its proposals to the federal - provincial constitutional conference.

The composition, jurisdiction and procedures of the Supreme Court of Canada should also be reviewed, says a federal working paper released Sunday.

These and other adaptations of federal institutions are described as a second step in a process of constitutional review that might span the next few years.

The initial step proposed is a guarantee of individual rights, including linguistic rights, and the final step — a division of powers between federal and provincial governments.

Regarding the Senate, the federal paper says the upper chamber "might well be reconstituted so as to enable it to play a new role in representing the federal character of our country."

"It might, for example, be called upon to make a special contribution in securing the rights of Canadians and in protecting the bilingual character of Canada.

"It might also be expected to reflect better than it does now the regional interests of our country."

No discussion of "Senate reform" is envisaged at the current conference. But the federal government wanted the provinces to know it considers the Senate can be made more effective and is willing to discuss this at subsequent conferences.

It says the general belief that an appointed body should not overrule a popularly-elected body has resulted in the Senate almost ceasing to exercise its veto power.

"This has imposed an effective limitation on its exercise of legislative power."

Referring to the Supreme Court, the federal paper says it functions now as a general court of appeal and the final court on constitutional matters under an ordinary statute of Parliament.

"It has been urged that its constitution and role should be set forth in the fundamental law."

The fundamental principles that the federal government considers should guide any subsequent discussions.

Douglas Supports Johnson

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas said Sunday night his party would give redistribution of federal and provincial powers top priority if it were calling the shots at this week's federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Mr. Douglas said in an interview that the federal government should be talking about reshuffling the British North America Act instead of a "vague and ambiguous" charter of human rights.

The human rights charter was important but not as significant as matters pertaining to regional economic disparities.

Mr. Douglas, noting the human rights charter constitutes the main federal submission to the 10 provincial premiers, said the conference agenda is too limited in scope. It should discuss specific economic and financial problems.

"I agree with Mr. Trudeau (the federal justice minister) that the question of language rights should be high on the agenda, but I do not see the urgency of the rest of the charter."

Mr. Douglas said he agreed with Premier Johnson of Quebec that introduction of the charter at the conference is "putting the cart before the horse."

Canada's Voice Abroad Must Come From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The voice of Canada abroad must be the federal government's responsibility, says Ottawa's brief to the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Dealing a blow at any provincial aspirations toward special powers in the international field, the federal working paper says "talk of separate international personalities or a divided presence abroad . . . strikes at the roots of our existence as a country."

The federal paper released Sunday says Canada "can have only one international personality."

"This requires, in our view, that the government of Canada continue to have full responsibility for Canada's foreign policy and for the representation abroad of Canada's interests."

MUSHMOUTH REPORTS

Dear Boss: —

Dropped into Reg's Rendezvous (They call it Leo's Lounge on ladies nights) at the weekly session of the Klan Kokesh and found Ole 'Erbie, the mythical Keeper of the Chits and statistician of the Tall Tales Platoon in conversation with my Uncle Brushmouth.

Unk Brush was here from Georgia and was recently released from a chain gang down thataway.

Unk's ma was scared by a grizzly bear before he was born and it was stated that is the reason he was born covered with hair.

Later he joined a circus which billed him as the only fur coat in the world that had legs, arms and could talk.

Unk got rid of most of the hair but retained enough to get a waist-length beard. He had belt-loops put in it so he could hold up his pants by throwing his head backwards.

I heard him telling Ole 'Erbie about the time he was riding a mule along a mountain ledge. The long-ear slipped and both it and Unk headed downward on a 1,000 feet fall.

Said he saved his life when nearing the bottom. He shouted "Whoa" to the mule which stopped about 100 feet from the ground. Unk got off and walked the rest of the way.

Unk served about two years on that chain gang. He was nabbed by a narcotics bloke who found that Unk had-been transplanting and growing marijuana in his sideburns.

Two Newfies dropped in for a tonsilar oil-change and said they'd rather switch than fight.

So they told the story of a guy from Ontario who went to St. John's hairdresser and ordered a tidal wave.

"Yes sir," said the chief H.D. "Just a minute and we'll turn you over to our boss beachcomber."

Did you know, boss that big pickerel that "Joe" presented you over the weekend was a family pet. Joe had been feeding that baby for five winters through an ice hole in the bay.

One day by mistake he tossed in his lunch of sardine sandwiches instead of the regular fish diet, Came a jerk on the line. The pickerel rose and spat out the sandwich package. Attached was a note "Whatinell do you think we are — cannibals?"

In more serious vein, Boss, a Tronna columnist says that a portrait of Bobby Hull will soon grace the cover of Time Magazine. In other walks of life, he says "this has been called the "Kiss of Death."

Apparently pro hockey players are immune. Some 13 years ago Davy Kerr, the present owner of the Queen's Motel here, had his handsome face on "Time" but he played for the New York Rangers with a minimum of cuts and stitches and is rated as one of the best net guardians to play in the Big Time.

Regals Nip Mo-Hawks In Overtime

Another Thriller

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Staff Sportswriter

Sunday hockey is a decided success in Belleville.

Only the outcome should have been changed — to protect the Mo-Hawks.

2,137 paid admissions, and an estimated 2,500 fans in all, saw their local heroes outplay Guelph Regals for nearly 68 minutes here yesterday, only to lose a heart-breaking 4-3 overtime decision.

The loss was Belleville's first home ice in nine starts and only their second in the last seven outings.

The Mo-Hawks rest in the OHA Senior "A" loop's eight position and need a couple more wins in their final four starts to sew up a playoff berth.

Kingston Aces visit town this Friday night before the Mo-Hawks hit the road fo their final three scheduled games.

The Regals came to play yesterday but met a determined, fast-skating Mo-Hawk squad that deserved to win all the way.

A combination of near misses, excellent goal-tending by veteran Harold "Boat" Hurley and what looked like an innocent Regal rush at least delayed Bellville's clinching of a playoff spot.

The Mo-Hawks outshot Guelph in every period, 47-31 in all. They commanded play in the extra heat, and banged six shots on goal before the Regals scored on their first.

John McMillan wore the Regal crown of victory when the 10-minute sudden-death period was 5.41 old. He skated over the Mo-Hawk line on what did not appear to be a dangerous play — and banked a 35-foot shot into the net off goalie Larry Holmes' left arm.

Despite their dominance of play most of the day, it was an uphill battle for the Mo-Hawks. They started fast and should have had goals by Cherevaty, Lalonde and Baker in the first eight minutes.

Holmes robbed Bester twice and Worrall before the visitors hit for a pair of quickies seconds apart around the 13-minute mark. Larry Jones got his first of two off Bob Ertel's rebound and Frank Hincks drove a 40-footer that surprised Holmes as the homesters suffered a short lapse.

The Mo-Hawks fought back for a beauty at 16.34. Dave Jones took George Godson's clearing pass and sped up the right boards on a two-on-one rush with Wayne Brown. Jones hit Brown with a perfect pass and "Wiener" put it past Hurley without breaking stride.

Play roughened early in the second and Belleville's "heart", Ralph Plane, won a major decision over Guelph's rugged Keith Worrall. Later in the period Plane took a second fighting major, this one with Ralph Kosowan, and collected an automatic misconduct.

Holmes and Hurley traded key saves on Terry Oliver and Dave Jones before Guelph moved ahead 3-1 as Larry Jones deflected Ertel's shot home at 12.56.

Again the Mo-Hawks bounced back, with the clubs five aside, on a pretty up-centre play started by Greg Marchen. Godson took the relay and head-manned Jones breaking through the middle. Dave waltzed in alone to tuck it past the "Boat".

Godson got the equalizer to force overtime at 10.15 when his shot from the side went in off a Guelph defender. Brown and Ed Marineau got assists — and the big crowd smelled a come-back victory.

Hurley stole goals from hard-working "Shaker" Baker and Plane, then bested Lalonde, Godson and Jones on the goal-line during a powerplay. And the Mo-Hawks survived clearing woes in the final 30 seconds — but the fates were saving the worst for later.

Rangers Clip Habs Unbeaten String; Hawks, Bruins Close In

JOHNNY McKENZIE

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It almost had to be New York Rangers who would end the 12-game win streak of Montreal Canadiens.

It was simply a case of the irresistible force and the immovable object with the Rangers—the immovable force—taking the decision 3-0.

The Canadiens started their 16-game National Hockey League unbeaten streak after losing 3-1 Christmas night.

But the Rangers had an even longer victory streak going for them, 11 straight Sunday victories at home—a string they've now extended to 12.

"You've got to give them credit," said coach Emile Francis of his Rangers after the game.

"They were great and when you consider it was their fourth game in five nights, you appreciate it even more.

"And it means that we're only six points away from Montreal and first place instead of 10. That's quite a difference."

Toe Blake, coach of the Canadiens, tried to be philosophical about the loss, saying:

"I was afraid of a letdown. I knew the first team to score tonight would win.

"We looked a little flat against Los Angeles."

The Canadiens beat Los Angeles Kings 5-1 Saturday in Montreal to keep their win skein alive.

Whether the Canadiens let down or the Rangers were running hot is academic now, but the result gave goalie Ed Giacomin his fifth shutout of the year to tie him with Cesare Maniago of Minnesota North Stars and Les Binkley of Pittsburgh Penguins.

Giacomin last year led the league with nine shutouts.

Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins closed the gap on the Canadiens in other Sunday games, the Hawks dropping Los Angeles 5-3 and Boston beating Detroit Red Wings 5-4.

The Hawks now are two points behind Montreal in the Eastern Division and a point ahead of Boston with Toronto Maple Leafs and New York tied three points farther back.

Toronto slipped off the pace Sunday by losing 4-1 to Philadelphia Flyers, leaders of the Western Division, while Minnesota nipped Oakland Seals 4-3.

Saturday it was Toronto tying Pittsburgh 3-3, New York tying Boston 3-3, Detroit drubbing Minnesota 8-1, Philadelphia beating Chicago 5-3 and St. Louis Blues beating Oakland 4-1.

Wednesday's games have Philadelphia at Montreal, Toronto at Chicago, Boston at St. Louis, Pittsburgh at Oakland and Minnesota at Los Angeles.

The goal Blake feared Sunday came off the stick of Vic Hadfield, making his first appearance for the Rangers since suffering a dislocated right shoulder Jan. 10.

He didn't waste a second, blazing a 40-foot drive past Montreal goalie Rogatien Vachon on his first shift and giving New York all the lift they needed. Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle added goals in the third period after the Rangers had fore-checked the fast Montreal club to a standstill.

The Bruins got a spectacular three-goal effort by John McKenzie, breaking an eight-game drought for McKenzie as well as ending a six-game string without a win for the Bruins. They had tied their last two games after losing four straight.

MONTREAL (CP) — Henri Richard, star centre of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League's Eastern Division, may be on the verge of retirement midway through his 13th season with the team.

Sam Pollock, the Canadiens' general manager, said Saturday night Richard, younger brother of the famous Maurice (Rocket) Richard, had decided to take a few days off to consider his future in hockey.

Richard, who has scored 269 goals in his NHL career, has been hampered four times by knee injuries and has missed 17 of the Canadiens' 49 games this season. He has recorded five goals and 12 assists for 17 points since the current campaign began.

Pollock said Richard told him Saturday he felt "I can't help the club the way I am now."

Bantam Cage Tournament

Centennial Wins Title

By STEVE BISHOP

Centennial athletics got a big boost Saturday as the bantam squad from Belleville's newest secondary school won the BCI Bantam Basketball tournament with a 42-38 victory over Quinte in the tournament final.

In the Consolation final, Oshawa Eastdale downed Cobourg West, 30-22.

Centennial opened with a 20-15 victory over Oshawa McNeil, followed by a 50-14 romp over Clarke High School of Newcastle. Centennial followed with a 27-14 win against Nicholson to wrap up their leg of the tournament.

Quinte started out in even more impressive fashion, as they clobbered Campbellford, 50-7, and Loyalist of Kingston, 50-17.

Quinte took their leg of the tournament and a berth in the final by defeating Moira, 23-21.

The Consolation final won by Oshawa Eastdale was from a contest featuring those teams eliminated in the first round, assuring each team at least two games.

In the actual tournament final, Doug Irvine's Centennial squad and Rick Locke's Quinte club fought a close battle.

At the half, Centennial led, 21-18, and they outscored the Saints by eight points in the third quarter. Quinte fought back to outpoint Centennial by 14-7 in the final quarter, but fell four points short of their objective.

Mike Semark led the victors with a 2. - point performance, with M Thompson getting 14 points. Kim Hunter led Quinte with 10 points, while Darvin Easton and Stan Brooks scored 9 points apiece.

Lavish Ceremonies Will Open Winter Olympics At Grenoble

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Organizers promised the most lavish opening ceremony ever for the 10th Winter Olympic Games Tuesday including the dropping from helicopters of 30,000 artificial roses perfumed on the crowd of 60,000.

The 90-minute show may well turn out to be the best and least controversial event of the 12-day Games. At least it will have enough grandeur, the organizers say, to even please President Charles de Gaulle, who will watch from a heated box.

The opening extravaganza, to be televised live to North America via satellite starting at 2:45 p.m. (8:45 a.m. EST) by the American Broadcasting Co., has been planned under the direction of Jacques Valentin, a movie producer and director of the House of Fine Arts in Paris.

"It is certainly one of my biggest casts," Valentin himself said. "It is a cast of thousands, and I have a good leading man, don't you think?" He was referring to de Gaulle, who will officially open the Games.

The list showed 1,355 athletes from 37 countries scheduled to take part—the biggest contingent ever for the Winter Games. Canada has a 73-menber team. The United States has the biggest with 113 and India the smallest—one alpine skier.

No sooner is the opening ceremony finished, then the long battle for the hockey gold medal will begin.

Canada's national team meets West Germany in one of the three opening-day championship games. Eight countries are entered in the championship round-robin with the Russians heavy favorites to retain their Olympic title.

The hockey schedule:

11:30 a.m.—Czechoslovakia vs. U.S.A.

3 p.m.—Canada vs. West Germany; Russia vs. Findland.

Three countries in the top section had to qualify Sunday. West Germany blanked Romania 7-0, Finland defeated Yugoslavia 11-2 and East Germany beat Norway 3-1.

The winners join Russia, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and the U.S. in the main tournament. The losers in the qualifying round play in the consolation tournament.

Canada salvaged a third-place bronze medal in the 1967 world tournament and this time they hope to do as well or better to erase the dismal performance of the 1964 Winter Games at Innsbruck, Austria, when the Nationals finished fourth.

The Nationals wound up their pre-Olympic exhibition tour with a 6-5 victory over the U.S. national squad Saturday night at Geneva. The Canadians, who were faster and showed better teamwork, needed two third-period goals by centre Roger Bourbonnais of Edmonton to preserve the win.

The Canadian team, however is looking to world champion skier Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C., to bring home a gold medal.

Miss Greene insisted Sunday her injured ankle is much better and even jumped on it.

The 24-year-old Ottawa native last year won the women's World Cup.

Minor Hockey

Six Peewee and five Bantam games were played in BMHA action Saturday, with a number of high scoring games resulting.

In Peewee ,the Hawks clobbered the Rangers 8-1, with S. Gray getting three goals for the winners, and R. Barbeau, D. Menard, J. Muldoon, D. Hillborn and D. Sullivan rounding out the Hawks' scoring. D. Murray got the lone Ranger goal.

The Firemen Bruins downed the Wings, 6-3, led by Steve Tracey's three goals. Mike Watt, P. McQuaid, and D. Meagher scored the other Bruin goals. Don Thompson sored twice for the Wings, while Bruce Macdonald scored the other Wing tally.

The Canadiens also won by three goals as they topped the Leafs, 4-1. D. Williamson, R. Woods, T. Coveney, and S. Cowan were the Canadien scorers. I. Hayman scored for the Leafs.

In lower-scoring play, the Indians and Aces tied, 2-2. W. Genereaux got both goals for the Aces, while S. Sturgis and C. Smith scored for the Indians.

The Pirates shut out the Barons 2-0, with Wayne McLaughlin the winning goalie. K. Parry and J. Mason got the goals.

The Amerks edged the Barons, 2-1, on goals by J. Lynch and R. Neal. G. Hiltz was the lone Baron scorer.

In Bantam, the Aces outscored the Hornets, 7-5. J. Masterson, S. McDonald and K. Hodgson each scored twice for the Aces, while T. Hunt scored a single tally. Graham and McCreary were two-goal scorers for the Hornets, with Garvn getting one.

The Wings stopped the Dukes, 5-1, behind the three-goal performance of R. Lepore. L. Kirby and M. Dales got the other tallies for the winning team, while G. Duffy got the lone Duke goal.

The Bears trounced the Amerks, 6-4, as K. Vos led the way with two goals. M. Graham, B. Mullens, R. Tipper and S. Seames got the other Bear scores, while J. Clapp, M. Brett, V. Pamaksezian and D. Vanvolkenburg scored for the Amerks.

The Bruins took a 4-3 decision from the Rangers. Evans paced the Bruin attack with a pair of goals, while McKenna and Harrington had one apiece. For the Rangers, Flieger had two goals and B. Cousins one.

The Leafs nipped the Canadiens 2-1, with Dale Bamber and Stuart Hitchon scoring the Leaf goals. K. Reide counted the lone Canadien marker.

Rochester Eyes Loop Lead

This time next week, Rochester Americans should be in firm control of the Western Division of the American Hockey League.

In the 1967 section of the schedule, the Americans had trouble even stealing a victory, running up a mediocre 14-16-14 won-lost-tied record.

But in 1968 they've lost only one of 15 games and are just a point behind Cleveland Barons, leaders of the division.

It was that way during the weekend as well with the Americans climbing all over Springfield Kings 6-2 Sunday while the Barons were beating Buffalo Bisons 4-1 after a 2-2 tie with Providence Reds Saturday.

Providence jumped on Baltimore Clippers 5-2 Sunday before Hershey Bears clipped Seattle Totems of the Western League 4-2 after losing 7-0 to Portland Buckaroos of the WHL Saturday.

Retained By Broncos

The 'Cookie' Retires!

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Denver Broncos of the American Football League announced Saturday that Cookie Gilchrist, one of the league's great backs, has retired as an active player and will be retained by the club as a special consultant and scout.

The 250-pound Gilchrist was Bronco property a year ago but was made idle with a leg injury suffered in the season opened.

Gilchrist played a total of 14 seasons in Canada and in the AFL.

He played six seasons in the AFL, rushing for more than 950 yards in four of the campaigns.

He was the league's Most Valuable Player in 1962 with the Bills, gained 1,096 yards, and was the first AFL player to crack the 1,000-yard barrier.

Quebec Spiel

Ottawa Rink Wins Governor Trophy

QUEBEC (CP) — An Ottawa rink skipped by Joe O'Brien has won the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy at the 55th annual Quebec international bonspiel.

The Ottawa foursome took the title Saturday afternoon by scoring a 12-6 victory over defending champion Nels Findlay from Toronto's Royal Canadian Curling Club.

Findlay, who took last year's championship without a single defeat, conceded the victory to the O'Brien rink after the 10th end. It was Findlay's third loss.

The Ottawa rink went through the six-day tournament with nine victories and one loss to win the Seagram's Grand Aggregate Trophy, for recording more victories than any other rink, as well as the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy.

A total of 128 rinks competed for the 15 trophies. Fifty-seven came from Ontario, 37 from Quebec and nine from the United States. Most of the other rinks represented Maritime clubs.

Findlay edged Cam Guyatt of Hamilton 6-5 and O'Brien took Harold Lindsay of Arnprior, Ont., 9-8 in semi-final games earlier in the day.

In the quarter-finals for the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy, O'Brien defeated Don Forbes of Darmouth, N.S., 12-2, Findlay downed Ken Moebius of Milwaukee 7-6, Guyatt beat Bogie Bolthauzer of Burlington, Ont., 8-5 and Lindsay defeated Bill Adamson of Burlington, Ont., 8-5.

Bob Hope Classic

Palmer Captures Third Title

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — It was asking too much, but Deane Beman, a former two-time U.S. amateur golf champion and now a sophomore in the ranks of the professionals, almost knocked off two giants in one afternoon.

But it just wasn't to be. Billy Casper, one of the Goliaths, fell back, but not Arnold Palmer.

And so Palmer held the Bob Hope Desert Classic championship for the third time, a feat accomplished with the familiar Palmer dramatics and excitement.

Beman, 29, who won the British Amateur in 1959 and the U.S. in 1960 and 1963, came from behind to pass Casper, the leader, and shoot a seven-under-par 65 in Sunday's final round. He had a 90-hole score of 348, 12 under par, and it looked reasonably safe.

But up came Palmer to the final green at Bermuda Dunes Country Club's par five 18th. The place was packed. In the gallery in a private box were former president Dwight D. Eisenhower, Gov. Ronald Reagan, and other dignitaries.

Palmer knew he had to reach the green of the 520-yard hole in two shots and go for a birdie to tie—or an eagle to win.

Palmer's No. 4 approach wood sailed some 260 yards over a forbidding lake and reached the green, 20 feet from pin. He putted boldly for the eagle but came up 18 inches short.

He tapped it in for the bordie to bring on a sudden-death playoff with Beman.

Elaine Cracks Another

AUCKLAND (CP-AP) — Elaine Tanner, star of the Canadian swimming team, Saturday sliced 1.3 seconds from the New Zealand open record for the 110-yard butterfly.

Her 1:07.4 timing beat the N.Z. mark established by another Canadian, Mary Stewart, in 1962.

The 10 Canadian swimmers now on tour here won nine of the 11 events run off in cold weather at the Newmarket pool.

The 17-year-old Miss Tanner displayed sheer power in her butterfly victory. Marion Lay, a Canadian living in Los Angeles, was fourth in 1:13.4 and Angela Coughlin of Toronto fifth in 75.6.

Miss Tanner also took the 220-yard backstroke in 2:32.5, with Jeanne Warren of Vancouver third in 2:40.7.

Miss Warren won the 440-yard medley in 5:32.2, with Sandra DOWLER OF London, Ont., third in 5:32.9.

Stops Spencer

Quarry Bout From Title

OAKLAND (AP) — After less than three years of professional fighting, Jerry Quarry finds himself within one bout of obtaining boxing's biggest prize—the heavyweight championship.

The 22-year-old Los Angeles belter earned the right to meet Jimmy Ellis for the title by stopping Thad Spencer at 2:57 of the 12th and final round Saturday.

The fight was the second semi-final in the World Boxing Association's tournament to find a successor for Cassius Clay, stripped of his title by the WBA after refusing to be drafted into military service.

Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., winner over Oscar Bonavena in the other semi-final, was a ringside spectator and said he was not surprised by the outcome.

Spencer, 24, of San Francisco, and Quarry each received $75,000. Promoter Don Chargin announced the gate as $115,112.

Quarry, knowing he was ahead after he floored Spencer in the closing seconds of the fourth and 10th rounds, finished with a flurry that staggered his heavier opponent. Referee Jack Downey stopped the fight.

Junior 'A'

Five Goals, 7 Minutes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Much of the weekend action in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series was quick—real quick.

Toronto Marlboros scored two of their goals 23 seconds apart in clipping St. Catharines Black Hawks 4-2. Two of the Hawks goals came in the space of 37 seconds.

First-place Kitchener Rangers exploded for five goals in slightly more than seven minutes and went on to trounce Niagara Falls Flyers 7-3 before 6,766 Rangers' fans.

In Ottawa, Peterborough Petes fired six of their goals in the first period in a 7-3 rout of the lowly 67s.

But speed was the exception rather than the rule in Montreal, where 24 penalties delayed the game that lasted nearly three hours. The game was won 7-2 by the Junior Canadiens over London Nationals, who picked up 17 of the penalties.

All the games were played Sunday.

Anglican Women List Officers

DESERONTO — Mrs. Harold Topping was hostess for the annual meeting of St. Mark's Anglican Church Women last week, with Mrs. Robert Tucker in the chair.

The rector, Rev. A. F. Dowdell, took charge of the opening devotions. Mrs. Dowdell conducted the election of officers. They are: president, Mrs. Robert Tucker; vice-president, Mrs. Charles Gray; secretary, Mrs. A. G. Wakelin; treasurer, Mrs. Harold Topping. Secretaries elected for each department are: Living Message, Mrs. Wakelin; social service, Mrs. John Lyon and Mrs. Charles Gray; supply, Mrs. A. F. Dowdell; Family Life, Mrs. Ted Lindsay.

Mrs. Dowdell will lead the Girls' Auxiliary, and will be assisted by Mrs. Lindsay as leader of the Junior Auxiliary.

The nominating committee consisted of Mrs. Edith Robinson and Mrs. A. J. Brim.

Church Groups

LADIES' GUILD

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — The Tyendinaga Ladies' Guild held its January meeting at the rectory last week, for an enjoyable occasion. It was the first time some of the women had been there since Mrs. Downing came as a bride, and all were much interested in seeing her home.

Rev. F. F. Downing, chaplain to Her Majesty's Most Loyal Mohawks of the Tyendinaga Reserve, addressed the women outlining plans for the future with which the group hopes to assist him. They made a contribution for repair of the church furnace.

President for 1968 is Mrs. Clifford Maracle, with Mrs. Elwood D. Brant as vice-president. Mrs. John Maracle is treasurer, and Mrs. Stanley Brant is secretary. As Mrs. John Maracle is spending the winter in the south, Mrs. Barney Brant has taken over her duties temporarily.

WILL MAKE VISIT

Government spokesmen have announced that President Cevdet Sunay of Turkey will make a six-day official visit to Saudi Arabia beginning Jan. 22.

Trinity Congregation Meets

NAPANEE — Trinity United Church congregation met for a fellowship supper and annual meeting Jan. 23. While the children were entertained by films, the business meeting was held.

By profession of faith, 32 new members were received into the church. The minister, Rev. E. Irvine Johnston, officiated at 13 baptisms, 15 weddings, and 26 funerals.

It was decided to buy a Rogers 35D electronic instrument, for installation in July.

Newly elected honorary elders are Arthur Dean and Carl Martin.

Elders elected for five years are: James Benson, Warren Gilbert, Wilbur Goodman, Limbert Graham, Dr. A. R. A. Mounce, and Robert Reid.

Stewards elected for three years are: Wesley Alkenbrack, Percy Asselstine, Clarence Baker, Cameron Craven, Arthur McLaughlin, and Barton MacLean.

Representative to Presbytery is Lloyd Cowle, with Douglas Mayhew as alternate.

The minister expressed his pleasure at the happy way the Bay Charge members and Trinity members had become one family since the amalgamation of the charges in July.

Deseronto Red Cross Active

DESERONTO — Although it has only a dozen or so active members, the Deseronto branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society reported an astonishing amount of work accomplished, when the first meeting of the year was held.

More than the usual amount of women's work had been handed in, including knitting, sewing, and swabs and wipes made for hospitals and clinics. Some welfare needs had been taken care of.

One branch of the work in which Deseronto is particularly active is the service to senior citizens, which has branched out to include cards to any citizens of the town who are in hospital. Old folk and shut-ins are remembered with gifts at Christmas, and are helped to celebrate birthdays when they live alone.

The highlight of the year for this committee was the centennial tea, when close to 100 senior citizens were assembled for the afternoon, many from out of town.

Those in charge of the loan cupboard were kept busy. The chairman, Mrs. L. Wilson, moved out of town, and Mrs. Charles Griffiths took her place and will continue this year with assistance of Mrs. Michael Ryan. Six pairs of crutches were donated by Toronto, and the branch purchased two new walkers, a wheel chair, and wheels for a second chair.

When there is a blood clinic in Napanee, Mrs. Donald Dawson heads a committee which canvasses for donors and assists at the clinic.

To Your Good Health

Cancer Bleeding Usually Spotty

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 25 and have two children. My periods went back to normal after the first child, but have not done so in the year since the second was born. Could this mean cancer?

I have a dark menstrual flow for a solid month, not excessive but continuous. Then I wait a month, and have another whole month of flow. No pain, but I tire easily.

Isn't one of the danger signals of cancer excessive drainage? How does cancer of the ovaries or uterus react in early states? Excessive bleeding? Pain? — Mrs. S. L.

I trust that you have discussed this with your doctor, because something obviously is wrong. But for reasons which I will explain, there isn't much reason to think it is cancer.

The dark flow doesn't mean much; it can happen in many instances of perfectly normal cycles. But the protracted loss of blood could be one factor in your tiring so easily. (Your worry — over whether it is cancer — could be another.)

I would not attempt to say the exact cause of this flow, but your gynecologist may well find it necessary to do a scraping of the uterus (a dilation and curettage, or "D and C.") to rid the uterus of a defective lining or abnormal tissue that may have been retained after your last pregnancy. This sort of thing sometimes occurs.

A Pap smear obviously should be done, not only as a means of detecting cancer, if any exists, but for such other information as may often be gleaned from the Pap test.

Abnormal bleeding can indeed, be a sign of cancer, but I doubt it in your case. You menstruate with regularity. Even though you are currently following a different pattern, it still is a regular pattern.

The bleeding of cancer is usually an intermittent spotting which does not follow any pattern of regularity.

Early cancer of uterus or ovaries may give no symptoms at all except spotting. There is no pain.

That, of course, is the reason the Pap smear is so valuable. It gives us fair warning of cancer in stages so early that no symptoms have yet appeared, sometimes not even spotting.

For the above reasons, I would doubt very much that your symptoms indicate cancer, but some relatively simple procedures often correct a situation such as yours.

Go back to your doctor and show him what you wrote to me.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 50 and so far my monthly periods have been regular. I have been taking birth control pills for nine months. My question: How will I know when I stop ovulating? When I do, should I change to a different hormone? — Mrs. J. G.

Special tests could be used to determine whether you are still ovulating, but the simpler way would be just to continue the pills until you stop menstruating, which will indicate that ovulation has stopped. This will happen in due time, and judging by your age, probably rather soon now.

Whether you will then need a different hormone will depend on whether you have annoying symptoms of menopause. You may not, but if you do, your doctor can prescribe the proper hormone for you.

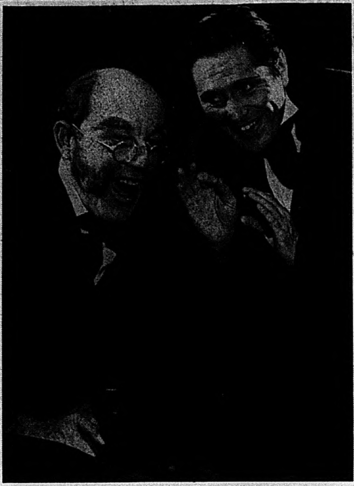
Many physicians believe that women your age do not need birth control pills. I trust you have sought your doctor's advice about this.

• • •

Note to Mrs. J. F.: You are mistaken. It was someone who writes a different type of column who praised "boiled ocean water" as a panacea for all sorts of ailments. There is no medical value in the idea.

• • •

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.



A Classic of Comedy

Rippling with mirth and melody, Don Pasquale is one of the happiest of operas. Among Canadian Opera Company cast in Feb. 17, Belleville production are Jan Rubes (left) and Alexander Gray.

One Night Production

Opera Company to Perform in Belleville

Two weeks from now Belleville will participate in a quiet evolution.

The arrival of the Canadian Opera Company Feb. 17 in a one-night production of Don Pasquale is part of a maturing process of opera in Canada.

The gradual coming of age is mutual to both the art and audiences — which soon will embrace the Quinte area.

Opera has been the slow-growth offspring of the arts in Canada.

Once, its environment did not encourage its artists to flourish, nor its audiences to grow.

All that now is rapidly changing.

Not only are opera enthusiasts growing in numbers. Canadian opera singers are winning acclaim for their country in the European birthplaces of the art.

One prime reason for the change can be spelled in three little words: Canadian Opera Company.

Helped by public, private and institutional funds, the company has been touring provincial centres for a decade raising eager response, and providing a vital training ground of repertory for Canadian artists.

As such, it's only one of five in North America, points out tour manager Ernest Adams, who was in Belleville this week.

In 1958, its first major tour played 38 performances. Within three years, the demand had about doubled to 74 performances.

This despite the fact opera is not the easiest art form to explain — and in Canada up to some years ago, perhaps not the easiest to sell.

More than 300 years ago England's Ben Jonson dubbed it an "exotic and irrational entertainment."

A veteran opera baritone, Mr. Adams agrees: "Yes there's nothing more irrational than two people, who instead of talking, are singing to each other."

To top the challenge, the form was popularly denigrated as "intellectual and long hair."

Mr. Adams disagrees: "Nuts! Opera is emotional. It comes from the heart. And anything that comes from the heart isn't intellectual."

Ignorance withers under experience, and the attitude is fast fading as audiences increasingly are exposed to the spells woven by Canadian Opera productions.

So much so "these tours have now developed to the point where we have to turn requests down," adds Mr. Adams. "We don't just have time to go to all these places.

"We've finally brought about a realization that opera is something that can be enjoyed."

The other success side of the story is to be found elsewhere — mainly in Europe where some young graduates of the company have become eagerly - sought opera stars, thanks partly to the experience gained by the tours.

Ranking with the world's best are such veterans of Canadian Opera repertory as Jon Vickers, Teresa Stratas.

Their successors may well be among the cast of Don Pasquale when the Canadian Opera lights the stage at Centennial Secondary School.

The opera, itself has been brightening the theatre scene for more than a century. It's spritely score, glittering with melody, has made it a classic of comic opera.

The music paces the hilarious plotting of an aging bachelor to disinherit a nephew by marriage to a demure young girl. Alas his bride . . .

Well — the box office is now open. Tickets at Thomas' store in Belleville, Tripp's in Trenton.

Continuing Stardom

Joan Crawford in Demand on Television

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Bette Davis described it in the title of her autobiography, The Lonely Life. Her onetime co-star, Joan Crawford, is inclined to agree.

"It's the loneliest life in the world," Miss Crawford said in an interview.

Miss Crawford is everyone's idea of a movie star, and she has always played the role to the hilt. Even today she will toss off quotes like, "If I had ever been seen on the Sunset Strip with bare feet and my hair uncoiffed, I would have killed myself."

She decries the new actresses who so deport themselves; Miss Crawford herself never goes anywhere without the full regalia of a star—hair coiffed, makeup applied, clothes proper.

Such attention to her calling has kept her before the film public longer than any other star. She doesn't like to be reminded of dates—but she made her first film 43 years ago. She enjoys pointing out the monetary, if the not critical success of her latest movie, Berserk—"In 29 theatres in the New York area we pulled $6,000 more than Elizabeth Taylor in 33 theatres with her latest picture."

She also continues in demand on television. She was here to make her first situation-comedy show, appearing in the role of Joan Crawford on The Lucy Show. She worked in the assignment between her travels as ambassadress-board member of Pepsi-cola, of which her late husband, Alfred Steele, was president.

"I know what Al meant now," she reflected, "when he used to tell me about all the travelling he had to do."

"He said he would wake up in the night and not be able to remember what city he was in.

"That's the way it is with me. I always leave the light on in the hotel bathroom, because I never know whether the door is to the right or left of the bed."

For the last 10 years, Miss Crawford has made her headquarters in New York, coming to Hollywood only for acting assignments or business trips.

British Columbia will have above normal precipitation. Outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur. Other normal temperatures (precipitation): New York 39 (3.1); New Orleans 56 (4.0); San Francisco 51 (3.5). (CP Newsmap).

A record $49,596 was bet on the daily double, a little over $1,000 better than the previous mark set March 24, 1967. Another mark established last March 24 was replaced when bettors pushed $50,086 through the mutuels in the sixth race exactor. The old exactor record was $49,377.

The daily double of Van Song R. and The McNab paid $23.40 while the sixth race exactor of Chief Maynard and Spring Caper paid $18.30.

Law Professor Urges Status Of Magistrates Be Enhanced

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto law professor has called for abolition of magistrates' courts, saying the Criminal Code treats magistrates as third-class judges.

Martin Friedland of the University of Toronto said legally-trained magistrates should be given the same status, jurisdiction and pay as county and Supreme Court judges.

The three levels of judges would try all charges leading to jail sentences with capital-crime trials reserved for the Supreme Court. Mr. Friedland was speaking Saturday at a session of the Canadian Bar Association's Ontario branch meetings.

He said magistrates without legal training could try cases in which jail terms were not possible.

Magistrates' courts in Ontario now handle 95 per cent of cases in which the accused could choose to be tried by a higher court.

Prof. Friedland said Quebec has eliminated the distinction between county and magistrates' courts. It war inconsistent that Ontario should pay for an elaborate legal-aid system, yet admit that it is "unimportant for the key figure—the magistrate—to be trained in law."

"Right now, magistrates court is a dead end. If we have these criminal courts the legally-trained magistrates can be promoted to the Supreme Court, where they can work out jurisprudence for the province."

G. Arthur Martin, who helped plan Ontario's 10-month-old legal aid program, called for statutory declarations on legal aid application forms providing for prosecution of fraudulent applicants.

Mr. Martin also called for a more sophisticated interview technique that would help eliminate dangers and abuses of the aid system.

He told the province's lawyers that more intensive interviewing should be used with people known or suspected of having enough resources not to need legal aid and added that a "significant number" of the 95,000 people who have used the system so far did not need to use the service.

Lawyers should feel it their duty to report to their legal aid committee people who come to them as legal-aid clients but who are able to pay legal and court costs, he said.

Mr. Martin cited the case of a man who asked for aid because he did not want to sell his Cadillac car or cash his wife's securities.

Another lawyer, John D. Arnup, suggested that the government cut back on the useof the aid system for divorce, family court and bankruptcy procedures, rather than set a tight budget for all aspects of the legal aid plan.

Clergymen Accuse U. S. Of Violating War Rules

NEW YORK (Reuters) — An inter-religious group opposed to U.S. involvement in Vietnam has accused the U.S. of violating "almost every international agreement relating to the rules of warfare" in that conflict.

It accused U.S. forces of killing children, using gas, destroying homes, defoliating crops and turning prisoners over to others for certain torture.

The charges are contained in a commentary signed by 29 prominent clergymen in an introduction to a book entitled In the Name of America.

Published by the Clergy and Laymen Concerned about Vietnam, the book recites the international conventions on the conduct of war and compares them with excerpts from news dispatches from Vietnam published in American newspapers and magazines as purported evidence of U.S. violations.

Signers of the commentary include Rev. Martin Luther King, Dr. John C. Bennett, president of the Union Theological Seminary, and Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld, president of the American Jewish Congress.

Canadian, U. S. Missionaries Saved from Viet Cong Grasp

SAIGON (AP) — Thirty-four Canadian and U.S. missionaries were rescued from their hilltop mission in the resort town of Dalat by U.S. forces a short time before it was overrun by the Viet Cong, U.S. officials said Sunday.

The missionaries, including 14 women, 11 men and nine children, were pinned down inside the mission compound in Dalat, 135 miles northeast of Saigon, when the Viet Cong attacked late Friday night. The attack on the mission, operated by the Christian Mihsionary Alliance and Overseas Crusade, coincided with another guerrilla attack on the alliance's mission in ban Me Thuot, 45 miles to the north, in which six U.S. missionaries were killed, one was wounded and two abducted.

The Christian Missionary Alliance compound at Pleiku also was evacuated. There were no injuries among the missionaries at Pleiku and Dalat.

Among those rescued from Dalat were Rev. James Lewis, his wife, Marylin and their two children, of Ottumwa, Iowa.

The U.S. command said the American troops had to fight their way into the mission compound to rescue the American and Canadian missionaries.

The rescued missionaries were taken to the secure port of Cam Ranh Bay by helicopters.

Among those rescued were Rev. and Mrs. Robert Henry of Burlington, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. John Hall of Ottawa.

Danish Princess Marries

COPENHAGEN (AP) — The bride's hands trembled and she was two minutes late, but Denmark's Princess Benedikte duly married German Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg Saturday before 200 guests.

They called it a family affair and that's the way it turned out. Not a member of the diplomatic community was on hand in the 242-year-old royal chapel at the Fredensborg Palace in the countryside 25 miles north of Copenhagen.

Instead, there were kings, queens, princes and princesses plus the leaders of Denmark's new coalition government and old family friends.

Queen Anne-Marie of Greece, Benedikte's sister, and King Constantine, were here on their first trip out of Italy since his Dec. 14 flight from Greece.

Benedikte, 23, the last of Denmark's three royal sisters to marry, looked pale and smiled only faintly as she entered the chapel on the arm of her father, King Frederik IX.

The king handed the bride to Prince Richard, 32, and both men embraced her. She stood there trembling in her classically cut gown of off-white diamond satin with a sweeping train at least 10 feet long.

Richard and Benedikte will live on the prince's ancestral estate near the small Westphalian town of Berleburg in West Germany.

Turner Would Revamp Role of PM's Office

ARVA, Ont. (CP) — Canada's new prime minister should immediately revamp his office and modernize the government's structure, Consumer Affairs Minister Turner urged here Saturday night.

Speaking to about 300 members of the newly-formd Middlesex Liberal Association, the 38-year-old cabinet minister, youngest declared candidate in the Liberal leadership race, said the prime minister's office needs to be recast as "the centre of policy initiation and policy review."

"This is the pivot of our decision-making system, with great powers to exercise. We must strengthen the capacity to exercise those powers and give the prime minister the ability to take a complete overview of government activity—evaluate the over-all strategy and plan of the government," he said.

The government has itself become "too over-organized, too distant, too slow and slow and sluggish in handling many of our problems."

Gresham's Law of Words

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Everyone who had a course in economics will recall "Gresham's Law" — which said, simply, that bad money in a country drives out the good. That is, if a lot of conuterfeit bills are making the rounds, people will withdraw their real money from circulation, and use the spurious bills.

There is a kind of Gresham's Law in words as well — although the reason for it is not as easy to explain. When a word has both a "primary" meaning and a "popular" meaning, the popular tends to drive out the primary, and we are left with a debased verbal currency.

The most obvious example that comes to mind is the word "alibi." Its primary (and extremely useful) meaning is "being elsewhere" at the time a crime was committed. But in popular usage, it has come to mean an "excuse" or "explanation" of any kind. "If this goes on," as Sir Ernest Gowers remarks, "we shall be left without a word for the true meaning of alibi."

Another equally vexing example is "disinterested," a word just as unique and useful as the one above. Its primary meaning is "interested in an impartial and objective way," as a judge is supposed to be. But almost everyone uses it to mean "uninterested," which is quite a different attitude.

Here, again, the popular meaning has driven out the primary meaning, and we shall soon be left without a word for the true meaning of disinterested, which would be a severe loss to the precision of language. Mention a "disinterested judge" to someone today, and instead of construing it as a compliment, he imagines that judge sleeping on the bench.

"Anticipate" for "expect" is another example of popular usage corrupting the original meaning. To "anticipate" something is to take preparation for or against it, to forestall it or facilitate it; it is not merely to "expect" it, however gladly. But this nice distinction has been ground into oblivion by taking the one as synonym for the other.

Does all this matter very much? I happen to think it does. C. S. Lewis once said: The language which can with the greatest ease make the finest and most numerous distinctions of meaning is the best. A language grown gross and slipshod and fuzzy in distinctions of meaning must reflect such defects and distortions in thinking as well.

Our curency becomes valueless when it fails to maintain a proper and comonly understood relationship between what is printed on it and what it actually stands for. And when words are coarsened so that they can mean almost anything, then the way is wide open for quacks and demagogues to spread counterfeit ideas among the populace.

U. S. State Department Blocked Bids to Save Jews from Nazis

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Certain U.S. state department officials deliberately hampered efforts to save Jews from Nazi extermination camps, says a U.S. treasury department memorandum cited in a book being published here today.

The book, While Six Million Died: A Chronicle of American Apathy, was written by Arthur D. Morse, a 48-year-old former television documentary producer with the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The book cites a hitherto unpublished memorandum drafted in January, 1944, by three senior treasury department officials at the request of the late Henry Morgenthau, then treasury secretary.

He asked for the report after learning of an eight-month delay by the state department in authorizing a plan to provide relief through neutral Switzerland for some 70,000 French and Romanian Jews.

The memorandum, signed by Randolph Paul, then the treasury department's general counsel, said in part that state department officials "have not only failed to use the governmental machinery at their disposal to rescue Jews from Hitler, but have even gone so far as to use this governmental machinery to prevent the rescue of these Jews."

It said state department officials failed to co-operate with private organizations trying to save Jews from extermination camps and took steps to prevent plans of the organizations being put into effect.

Morgenthau redrafted the report and handed it to President Franklin D. Roosevelt Jan. 16, 1944.

The revised memorandum said many persons and organizations saw "plain anti-Semitism motivating the actions of these state department officials and, rightly or wrongly, it will require little more in the way of proof for this suspicion to explode into a nasty scandal."

BC to Proceed With Medicare

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Bennett of British Columbia said Sunday night his province will proceed on schedule with implementation of national medical care insurance July 1 if the federal government gives the green light.

The premier, here for the federal-provincial conference on the constitution, said in an interview the recent decision of Alberta and Manitoba to opt out of medical care will have no effect on B.C.'s position.

Prime Minister Pearson has promised to announce this week Ottawa's decision on whether to proceed with the plan.

In addition to Alberta and Manitoba, four other provinces have counted themselves out. They are Quebec, Ontario, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

Premier Bennett said B.C. will be able to meet all the requirements of the national plan.

"It's not British Columbia's policy to try to veto federal legislation," said Premier Bennett.

"If the plan is in operation, in we'll go."

GM Strike Threatened Friday

TORONTO (CP) — George Burt, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers Union, announced Sunday the union will strike General Motors of Canada Ltd. at midnight Friday if a new agreement cannot be reached.

The UAW, with about 23,000 workers at General Motors plants in Oshawa, Windsor, Ont., St. Catharines, London, Ont., and Ste. Therese, Que., last Thursday won a new contract for its Chrysler Canada Ltd. members.

The Chrysler workers were expected to be all back to work this week at plants in Windsor, Ajax and Etobicoke after the new contract ended an eight-day strike.

Contract negotiations between GM and the UAW began last August and were continuing Sunday in Toronto.

Health Minister Will Not Resign

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Health Minister MacEachen said Saturday he will not resign from the cabinet if the medical care insurance program is not implemented by July 1.

He was addressing Prince Edward Island delegates to the Liberal leadership convention in Ottawa April 4-6.

Mr. MacEachen, who announced his candidacy for the federal Liberal leadership Jan. 13, said cabinet ministers "are obligated to support present government policies."

Rusk Sees Raids Rejection of Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk says North Vietnam helped mount the major Communist offensive in South Vietnam knowing U.S. air attacks were being curtailed during exploratory peace moves.

The United States therefore must conclude, Rusk said, that the North Vietnamese "are not seriously interested at the present time in talking about peaceful settlements."

His statement that the United States "exercised some restraint" in its bombing of the North came during a joint radio-television appearance with Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara, who left open the possibility of new U.S. troop deployments to the war zone.

The program was NBC's Meet the Press, doubled to an hour's length for Sunday's joint interview, which is reported to have been suggested by President Johnson.

Both Rusk and McNamara said they believe—but are not "1,000-per-cent sure," in Rusk's words—that the USS Pueblo did not intrude in the territorial waters of her North Korean captors.

And McNamara said the United States did not send aid to the Pueblo when the intelligence vessel was captured Jan. 23 because it was impossible initially to tell what was happening. There was no contingency plan specifically covering the ship and an attempt to send air support might have generated "a bloody battle" with North Korean planes.

McNamara said it seems clear no U.S. action could have saved the Pueblo and her 83-man crew from capture.

South Korean sources, meanwhile, reported American and North Korean negotiators meeting at Panmunjom may have made "substantial headway" toward release of the crew members.

Rusk said the bombing limitation occurred in recent days as the United States sought clarification of North Vietnam's statement it would talk peace if all bombing were permanently halted.

In essence, Rusk said, the U.S. must assume the recent offensives against South Vietnamese cities "are an answer" to administration peace moves.

Stapley on Cars

Not All Lubrication Points Are Covered by 'Grease Job'

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes: "On modern cars recommended points of lubrication have been considerably reduced in the past few years and I am wondering if certain parts that are not included in a normal grease job are being neglected. I buy a new car and keep it for at least five years before dealing. I don't begrudge spending a little extra money on maintenance and was hopeful that you might outline what you consider to be a thorough job of lubrication."

Too often motorists regard lubrication as a dash of oil or a blob of grease to remedy squeaks and groans. Nothing could be further from the truth. The list of parts that can wear our prematurely or fail suddenly due to lack of lubrication is truly surprising. All of us know that we have to put oil in the engine and grease the chassis periodically, but how many stop to think about the lubrication of the transmission, drive-line, rear axle, wheel bearings, water pump, speedometer cable, door locks and striker plates, window winder mechanisms, accelerator and automatic transmission control linkage, brake cables, brake mechanism, door hinges, hood latches and weather stripping around the inside of the doors and trunk lid. All these areas require lubrication and if they don't get it, expensive and sometimes dangerous breakdowns may occur.

Many of these items are not included in a grease job. It would be wise to make a list of all the points I have mentioned and ask that they be included when having the car serviced.

A reader recently told me of an experience he had when water seeped into the weather stripping of the front doors. The water froze during the night and the weather stripping ripped to pieces when the doors were opened. The repair bill was over $30. Spray bombs are available t lubricate weather stripping, or a little ethylene glycol rubbed on the surface of the weather stripping will minimize this damage.

Regarding engine oil changes, while in many instances our owners' manual tells us we ca drive 4,000 miles between changes, it must be remembered that this is only under ideal driving conditions. If we read further in our handbooks we may possibly find that under adverse driving conditions it may be necessary to change the oil as often as every 1,000 miles or less.

While on cars in recent years the chassis lubrication has been pushed all the way up to 32,0/0 miles, I stll believe in placing a car on a hoist every month for a general check-over and if it needs a spot of grease this is the time to do it. Look upon it as a general safety check than a grease job.

Brandt Denies Saying De Gaulle Covets Power

BONN (Reuters) — A diplomatic controversy boiled Sunday night over a report that West German Foreign Minister Willy Brandt referred to French President de Gaulle as a man "obsessed with power."

The West German news agency DPA reported that in a speech Saturday in Ravensbrg, Brandt said "the deep-rooted Franco-German friendship, particularly among young people, will in the end be stronger than the rigid un-European thoughts of a head of government obsessed by power."

Conrad Ahlers, deputy chief government spokesman, said here Sunday Brandt described the report as a 'complet fabrication."

Ahlers claimed Brandt in fact said, "the deep-rooted Franco-German friendship, particularly among young people, will in the end be stronger than an unreasonable policy." Brandt did not specify whose policy he referred to as unreasonable.

Offensive Expected

Khe San Key in Vietnam

LONDON (AP) — West European military experts believe Hanoi intends its offensive in South Vietnam to expose the United States as a "paper tiger" before calling for peace talks to end the war.

Military analysts believe the United States must quickly halt the Communist offensive to avoid negotiating peace for weakness.

Most analysts expressed belief the Americans and their allies face a tough task. The crucial test, they say, will come in the Communist drive to capture Khe San, considered the key to the entire northern area along the demilitarized zone.

They agreed that Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, North Vietnamese defence minister, appears to have failed in the primary objective of the Viet Cong terror offensive: To force the Americans to withdraw men from Khe San to meet the threats to Saigon and elsewhere.

Gen. Andre Beaufrs, prominent French military thinker, said in Le Figaro:

"What is certain is that the Americans will have to step up their military effort so as to regain a position of strength with a view toward negotiations."

Hugh Hanning, military correspondent of The Guardian, says Giap's objective is "to stretch the United States and her allies from Saigon to Khe San. The offensive can be expected to continue at full blast until either a spectacular victory is achieved, which will place them in a strong negotiating position, or elsewhere it is effectively crushed."

Hanning says the Americans have the immediate problem of making sure that Gaip does not catch them off balance and win the one local, spectacular victory he ne ds.

Civilians Homeless

SAIGON (AP) — Reports on how civilians suffered in the recent heavy fighting are filtering back slowly to Saigon, and they indicate that again the people are taking the brunt of the war.

Incomplete reports on refugees already indicate that 174,000 civilians were forced from their homes by the fighting in the last six days.

Most of the refugees have been created within cities—20,000 in Saigon alone. The war already has made more than 2,000,000 persons flee their homes in South Vietnam.

Recent refugee reports have arrived from only eight of South Vietnam's 44 provinces and from six cities Most of the new refugees are in the populous Mekong Delta, where 125,000 fled their homes last week, according to official U.S. figures.

Reports were even less complete on civilians killed or wounded in the massive Viet Cong offensive launched in most major cities last week.

Figures from Saigon showed that 2,400 had been admitted to hospitals for wounds and another 200 died in hospitals from battle-connected wounds.

Joint Chiefs Sign Statement for Johnson

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine says each member of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff has signed at President Johnson's request, a paper that says he believes Khe Sanh in South Vietnam can be defended successfully.

In a news release describing this week's issue, the magazine quotes Johnson as warning the joint chiefs at a White House discussion:

"I don't want any damned Dien Bien Phu."

North Vietnamese forces were hitting U.S. positions at Khe Sanh early today.

Dien Bien Phu was the site in 1954 of the final, decisive battle in which the French were defeated.

Time says Johnson cross-examined the joint chiefs at length about the wisdom of defending Khe Sanh and then insisted that each put his affirmative view in writing.

Blunt answers to questions about borrowing from Pacific Finance

Q. What happens when I come in for a loan?
A. A few questions in private—like where do you work, where do you live, and why you want the money. Our business is making loans, not refusing them.
Q. How fast can I get my money?
A. If you call first, it's not unusual to have your money within 20 minutes after you walk in. Same day service is standard.
Q. How much can I get?
A. Usually, you're a shoo-in for all you need. As a rule of thumb, you are probably good for a loan equal to three times your monthly salary. Over half of the people who come to us for loans qualify for more than they ask for.
Q. What happens if I don't make a payment?
A. Pacific Finance is easy to talk to at times like this. We know you can get trapped by bad luck. If you need more money, tell us. If you want to take longer and make the payments smaller, we can probably work that out for you too.
Q. Are you a fly-by-night outfit?
A. We have over 600 offices throughout the United States and Canada. We've been in business since 1920. Right now over a million people have loans with Pacific Finance totaling over a half billion dollars. And Pacific Finance is part of the Transamerica Corporation that also owns other companies such as Occidental Life and United Artists.

No matter what amount you need, stop by your nearest Pacific Finance office. Better yet, give us a call.

Trudeau Flays Johnson's Stand

Special Status Said Illogical

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Trudeau and Premier Johnson of Quebec clashed in an epic confrontation today at the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

It reached the point where Mr. Johnson referred to Mr. Trudeau as the MP for Mount Royal and the federal justice minister described Mr. Johnson as the MLA for Bagot.

Mr. Johnson maintained that bilingualism everywhere in Canada is not enough for Quebec. It wanted more powers.

Mr. Trudeau said Premier Manning of Alberta had put a good question Monday: where was the limit to Quebec's demands?

Mr. Johnson at one point said another conference might do better when it had as chairman a man who was more sure of himself.

The remark seemed aimed at Prime Minister Pearson, who will retire as prime minister in April. But Mr. Johnson said later the remark was meant for Mr. Trudeau.

As the exchange reached its most heated peak, Mr. Pearson called a coffee break and said the conference then would go into closed session.

For Other Stories see Page 8

Earlier Premier Johnson had said that the first sessions of the constitutional conference have made an "extraordinary" contribution to solving the problem of French minorities outside Quebec.

He said every Canadian must feel delighted with evidence of good intentions among English-speaking provinces.

"I feel it my duty to state that this has been an event of major importance and to say thank you for your good will and understanding."

He mentioned statements by premiers of all provinces from Newfoundland to Saskatchewan on steps they are taking to grant language and education rights to their French-speaking groups.

Mr. Johnson rose on the second day of the conference to reply to Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland, who had asked Monday whether Quebec claims a right to govern French-speaking Canadians outside its borders.

The Quebec premier said he makes no such claim.

He paid a tribute to Prime Minister Pearson saying Canadians would be reassured if they knew it was Mr. Pearson's intention to delay his retirement long enough to see that federal proposals on language and cultural rights were carried through.

"We have no wish to destroy either the federal government or Canada," Mr. Johnson said.

If he was not sincere in desiring to maintain Canada and the federal government, Quebec had plenty of opportunity to walk out at the Toronto conference and at Monday's opening of the current talks.

Quebec recognized there must be a federal government with certain powers. He produced a list which, he said, is not necessarily a complete lineup of federal powers.

However, it should include responsibility for national defence, banking and monetary policy, criminal law, internation-

Olympic Team In Fine Fettle

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — President Charles de Gaulle officially opened the 10th Winter Olympic Games today but a bitter fight over keeping the Olympics strictly amateur still raged and threatened to kill the Alpine skiing events as an officially-recognized Olympic sport.

Morning rain and snowstorms gave way to bright sunshine as the French president presided over the spectacular opening ceremony that included the parade of more than 1,500 athletes and team officials from 37 countries.

Canada's delegation of 80 athletes and officials was one of the most colorful, parading in the lucky 13 position.

The Canadians stepped smartly past the reviewing stand in their white Hudson Bay coats ringed with yellow, red, green and black. White fur hats, navy blue ski slacks, brown suede boots and bright red gloves completed the costume.

Skier Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C., rated top Canadian hope for a gold medal, insisted she was fit and ready to go despite an ankle injury that forced a three-week layoff.

"I'm fine, just great," Nancy said as she stepped out in front of the Canadian contingent carrying the Maple Leaf flag.

"My leg is okay and I'm going for both slaloms and the downhill."

Flood Crest Near

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — The flood-swollen Thames River is expected to crest here "sometime today," an official of the Lower Thames Valley Conservation Authority said.

Earlier, the crest had been expected overnight.

Jack McLeod, superintendent of the conservation authority, said the Thames dropped about three inches overnight in the city because of an ice jam eight miles east of the city at Kent Bridge.

"At Kent Bridge the water is at its crest. The mouth of the river at Lake St. Clair, 15 miles west of Chatham, has dropped two feet.

"I have been keeping track of the crest for several miles and it has been following a close pattern. The river comes up to its crest, holds it about 10 hours, and then takes about 12 hours to show any recession."

Reserve army units have joined flood workers to face the threat of flooding, which has already forced the evacuation of 50 families and caused the death of one girl.

The families were removed Monday night from their homes on Tissman Avenue by firemen in boats using pikes to scatter ice chunks. The street is in the city's south end, where a feeder creek spilled over its banks.

Angela Caron, 10, was drowned when she fell into an abandoned well in her front yard. Rescue workers said the top of the 12-foot deep well was broken open by flood waters.

20 More Fishermen Lose Lives

LONDON (CP) — The loss of 20 more British fishermen, victims of vicious northern seas, is intensifying demands for more stringent measures to protect the country's trawlers against the elements.

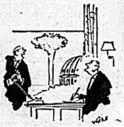
A total of 60 fishermen, seeking cod and haddock off Iceland, have been lost this year.

In the offing were a special inquiry into the latest trawler tragedy and possible restrictions on the operation of such ships at this time of the year.

"Help me," was the desperate cry from the skipper of the 659-ton Hull trawler Ross Cleveland as this latest victim of savage Icelandic elements began sinking Monday.

Then came an even more poignant call, which now has all Britain in shock and sadness:

"I am going. Give my love and the crew's love to their wives and families."



"Good news Mr. President. They've found one of the missing H Bombs!"

Ontario French-Canadians Welcome Robarts' Promises

TORONTO (CP) — Leaders of the French-Canadian community in Ontario today welcomed an announcement by Premier John Robarts at the constitutional conference in Ottawa that he will press for official bilingualism in Ontario.

Raoul Boyer, president of the 75,000-member St. Jean Baptiste Society of Ontario, said French-Canadians will feel more at home in Ontario with language rights.

"It is good that French-Canadians in Ontario will begin to have the rights of English-Canadians in Quebec," he said.

"Robarts is doing justice to French-Canadians—a justice that we have lacked for so long."

Roger Seguin, president of the French-language Association d'Education, said: "You can well imagine how we feel. After many years of requesting these things, we are finally getting them."

He commended the premier's idea of building a language centre to teach French to civil servants "so not only the French-speaking people will become bilingual."

'Back to Bible' Revolt Spreads in United Church

TORONTO (CP) — An organized rebellion within the United Church of Canada, first in its 43-year history, has spread in two years from rural areas north of Toronto across the country, says an article in the United Church Observer.

The protest organization, called the United Church Renewal Fellowship, demands a return to "sound biblical theology" with an emphasis on the 20 articles that were the basis of union for the church. The protest, says the article by Rev. J. Berkley Reynolds, is against a "drift to humanism and liberal theology."

So far, there has been little official church reaction to the movement.

It has about 250 members across Canada, most of them elders, stewards, trustees and Sunday school teachers, with some of its strongest advocates missionaries home on furlough.

The fellowship plans to appoint an executive secretary, establish Bible study and prayer groups across Canada, provide its own teaching materials and publish its own church magazine.

Civil Service Pay Increase Is Announced

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government today announced a three-per-cent retroactive pay increase for more than 100,000 civil servants in executive, scientific, professional, technical and administrative classifications.

Viet Cong Still Slugs It Out

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese pushed their biggest offensive of the war into its second week today in Saigon and Hue, defying superior U.S. and South Vietnamese firepower to slug it out in the devastated streets. At some points, the Viet Cong appeared to be outmanoeuvring government troops.

Large sections of Saigon and Hue lay in smouldering ruins, and towering columns of smoke rose into the sunny skies as South Vietnamese dive-bombers, U.S. helicopter gunships, artillery and tanks blasted away at Communist troops in scattered sections.

Tens of thousands of terrified civilians streamed from shacks and huts in Saigon with what meagre belongings they could carry, swelling the number of homeless to staggering proportions. Already nearly 200,000 refugees are reported, 58,000 in Saigon and its suburbs, and the total is expected to double or triple when all reports are in.

From the northern sector of South Vietnam came reports of fresh mortar and ground attacks on government district headquarters and army units along a wide arc around Da Nang. Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city, was placed on "Alert Tow," meaning an attack is probable.

U.S. headquarters said elements of the 2nd North Vietnamese Division were between Da Nang and Hoi An, a provincial capital 15 miles to the south.

"Which way they will go we don't know," a spokesman said. "It has a potential of some magnitude."

The air war against North Vietnam, overshadowed for a week by the Communist offensive against South Vietnamese cities and towns, returned to prominence with a U.S. announcement that an American Thunderchief jet and a North Vietnamese MiG-21 were shot down in aerial duels northwest of Hanoi Monday.

A U.S. spokesman said an air force F-4 Phantom crew reported shooting down the MiG-21, but the location was not reported. It was the 106th Communist jet U.S. flyers say they have shot down in combat over the North.

Northeast of Hanoi, another MiG-21 shot down an air force F-105 Thunderchief and the pilot is missing, the U.S. command said. It was the 797th U.S. combat plane officially reported lost over the North and the 40th brought down by a MiG in the Vietnam war.

At the northwest frontier bastion of Khe Sanh, where U.S. marines await an even bigger offensive than the campaign against the cities, the situation was reported quiet after an attack Monday.

Boosting the annual Ontario Heart Fund drive requires a lot of dedication, and this year, some good, old-fashioned hot air. Shown inflating some publicity balloons are Dr. Brock Nugent, Trenton Heart Chapter chairman Dan Senik, and Trenton Rotary Club president Wilfred Wilkinson.

Economic Fallacy to Look West Larry Tells Trenton Council

TRENTON — Last night's council discussion of the pros and cons of joining the proposed Hastings-Prince Edward Welfare Unit was a carbon copy of treatment of the same topic at the last session.

Only this time, debate was more spirited.

The unit has been encouraging Trenton to make its decision to participate in time for the May 1 target date for initiating the body's activities.

Councillor Paul Tripp has made no bones about the fact he thinks Trenton's destiny lies westward with Northumberland County, where she will not be ignored at Belleville's expense.

Councillor Tripp last night suggested council adopt a "wait-and-see" policy on welfare for 1968, until it is known whether or not Northumberland will establish their own county welfare organization.

"I have the feeling our representation on a Northumberland board will be better," he said.

"All I'm asking for is that we make our decision on a comparative basis."

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry repeated former criticism of any "Trenton-westward" philosophy:

"It's an economic fallacy to try to relate ourselves to Cobourg.

"For one thing, we have no indication Northumberland will even establish a welfare unit as of now.

"And if we entered a Northumberland group, we could end up paying a larger share for welfare coverage.

"After all, population-wise, we're more significant in that county than we would be with Hastings."

Mayor James MacDonald said Trenton couldn't afford to go without welfare organization for much longer.

A. Gordon Davis, whose retirement as local welfare administrator became effective Jan. 1, is staying on temporarily as an interim measure.

"Our committee will have to get the facts together in a hurry," the mayor said.

"And if we decide to join Hastings, that doesn't mean we have to stay there," he assured Councillor Tripp.

Councillor Edward Todd jumped into what was becoming a heated discussion.

"We played around with the health unit for about eight months before joining. Why should we jump to another regional division with welfare.

"This unit covers the same general area as the health unit, children's aid, and other groups."

Councillor Todd called for a report by the welfare committee in time for the next meetnig of council in two weeks', at which time he suggested the matter be put to a vote.

Council agreed the welfare committee, under councillor J. Douglas Kinney should conduct further investigation into the subject before definite action is taken.

Women Win Acclaim as Canvassers

It was Ladies' Night all the way at the YMCA report meeting held at the Club Canara last night.

Jim Driscoll, teams chairman, after listening to the report of his team captains, pointed out that the women were on top all the way.

Mrs. M. Huffman's division had the high returns and Mrs. W. Donald's team was high among individual teams of canvassers. Individually, also, the women came through with Mrs. K. Hall being the high quota buster (three times her quota) and Mrs. Marion Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Linscott were single quota busters.

More plaques for the builders wall had also been sold and the teams' total was reported to have reached $26,852. Combined with the big gifts total of $100,830 the grand total for the "Y's" building fund campaign now stands at $127,676.

Men's program director Glen Manthorne and Valerie Slater, women's program director, were asked to tell the meeting about some of their work at the "Y".

It was brought to light that over 500 men and boys are participating in fitness classes and Miss Slater pointed out that 250 girls (and approximately the same number of boys) have passed swimming tests since September.

It was also mentioned that a new co-educational gym class is starting Saturday for girls and boys aged eight to 12. Jane Riley, 16, is now conducting a very successful crafts class for the same age group whose present project is building a model of the city of Belleville.

Maintenance of Memorial Guaranteed

TRENTON — It was a hypothetical resolution that town council passed last night.

If the proposed multi-million-dollar air force memorial is built and if the Department of National Defence afterward considered abandoning the nearby Canadian Forces Base, Trenton will guarantee maintenance of the edifice if the DND supports a town bid to annex the Sidney Township memorial site.

Group Captain (now Colonel) D. R. Adamson unveiled plans for the project late in 1967, revealing that an overwhelming number of senior air force personnel and members of RCAF-affiliated bodies approved the idea in principle, and Trenton as the site.

Details as to the shape the memorial will take are sketchy, although sources say chapels will be included within its walls, and insignia of the various air force squadrons will be prominently displayed.

The cost—an estimated $2.5 million — will come from subscription.

In the event the Defence Department ever decided to pull up Trenton stakes, ("Highly unlikely," says Mayor James MacDonald), "the town of Trenton will be happy to guarantee the maintenance of the proposed memorial," town council's resolution reads.

". . . with the proviso that the DND would support a town application to the Ontario Government to annex the land upon which the memorial is located."

The memorial will rest on a 35-acre site at the west end of the existing air station fence.

The Sidney Township property lies between Trenton's easterly boundary and the 6RD Road.

No Free Downtown Parking 'Under Any Circumstances'

TRENTON — The local parking authority does not intend to provide free downtown parking under any circumstances.

After Councillor Gerald Weaver's recent charge that the former post office property's back lot was being ignored by the public, the authority was asked to report on the matter.

Last August, the authority recommended to council that the property be made available for parking by permit only, at a $6 monthly rate. The recommendation was implemented.

At the last council session, Mr. Weaver said it wasn't sensible to ask motorists, many of whom only venture downtown once a week to shop, to pay the permit fee.

He claimed the post office parking lot was "almost always vacant," and served notice he would make a motion for free parking on the property.

In its report, the parking authority said "making free parking available is in competition with our own operation."

"It is the aim of a parking authority to operate parking on a profitable basis, so that funds will be available for the purchase of additional property for off - street parking."

Installation cost of meters would have been impractical, the report says, since the authority had been informed by council the lot would only be available for parking until early this year.

Council has still not declared the future of the post office property, which it purchased from Crown Assets Disposal Corporation as a possible civic square site. The property has been touted for everything from a youth centre to site of revamped town office facilities.

"Since a time limit is a major factor in installing meters, it was felt it would not warrant the cost of installing them," the report continued.

"It was felt the only alternative would be by parking permit only. Since the permits and a monthly fee of $6 was already established, the Parking Authority was of the opinion that the post office lot should be made available for holders of such permits."

When Councillor Weaver served notice of his "free-parking" motion, indications were that most councillors favored the meter system for the lot.

Mr. Weaver was not present at last night's council meeting, and is holidaying in Hawaii.

Council to Pay Fees

TRENTON — There it was — a bill for legal fees totalling $6,015.05.

"I think we better pay it," said Councillor E. M. "Ted" Parker.

"There's no use crying over spilled milk," mused Mayor James MacDonald.

The "spilled milk" in question represents Trenton's fruitless legal attempts to lay claim to a 40-yard strip of cindered roadway providing access to the Community Gardens from Dundas St.

The Ontario Court of Appeal decided in June, 1967, that the town has no title to the south Ontario St. extension.

This upheld a May, 1966 ruling by former Ontario Supreme Court Justice Leo Landreville, who awarded the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Co. $1,133 in damages.

The B. W. Powers Co., a subsidiary, had issued a writ against Trenton for opening the property to public thoroughfare.

The town opened the roadway in September of 1964 to provide ready access to the arena area.

But appeals cost money, as town council learned last night.

"I don't think their submission is out of order," noted Clerk O. W. Larry.

Council agreed to forward the $6,000-plus to the Toronto legal firm of Paskin and Calvin.

There will definitely be more to come.

Council previously agreed to carry their appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, and the legal firm advised in their letter that the case would be heard this spring.

Youth Given 18 Months

Brian Rudy Ellis, 21, was sentenced to 18 months definite and 18 months indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate R. C. Jackson yesterday afternoon.

Ellis had been convicted of shooting with intent to do bodily harm when he appeared Friday for his trial before Magistrate Jackson.

The magistrate stated that his (Ellis') character needed changing and implied that with a long term he could receive the help he needed.

"You're intelligent enough to serve a useful purpose," the magistrate added.

On Friday Ellis had testified that he had not intended to shoot Russell Pitman, a Marmora store and service station owner, but had fired the rifle to scare him.

The shooting ocurred Nov. 11 last year. Pitman was hit in the chest by a 22 calibre bullet. Ellis stated that he held a grudge against the 61-year-old man because of "things in the past."

Article On Bridge Draws Comment

A full page story in last Friday's Intelligencer outlining the various aspects of the proposed Dundas Street roadway and bridge project has been credited with helping to bring about a council decision on the matter.

At yesterday's council meeting during discussion on the motion to call tenders for the railway overpass phase, acting mayor Boyle said the story made it unnecessary for him in support of his motion to again outline the project in detail.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey in seconding Ald. Boyle's remarks complimented The Intelligencer for carrying the article which she said had done considerable in clarifying the issue.

Two Sidney Residents Honored

Two Sidney township residents, Mrs. Roy Bush of River Valley and J. B. Harder, township clerk, and former municipal reeve and councillor were presented with Centennial Medals yesterday by Township Reeve Ernest Kells.

The presentation of the medals awarded for contribution to public life, was made during a break in the regular monthly council session.

Mrs. Bush, mother of township deputy reeve Jack Bush, is a former school teacher and has devoted many years to the work of the Women's Institute in her area. She has chaired practically all the W. I. offices and throughout her lifetime has taken a keen interest in the history of the district. She is now curator for the River Valley and West Hastings W. I. areas.

Township Clerk J. Byron Harder, has also spent many years in public life and served 10 years as member of council, including three years each as reeve and deputy reeve. He has been township clerk for the past eight years.

Mr. Harder and Mrs. Bush collaborated on doing research for material contained in a Township History booklet published last year.

IN MEMORIAM

MARTIN — In loving memory of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Martin, who both passed away February 7, 1958.

The faces we loved are now laid low,
Their loving voices are still,
Their hands so often clasped in mine,
Lie now in death's cold chill.
We often sit and think of them,
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only thing,
That grief can call its own.

First Phase

Council Votes for Dundas Overpass

Belleville city council by a 9-1 vote yesterday decided to proceed this year with the railway overpass as the first phase of the long discussed Dundas Street reconstruction project.

With Alderman Arthur Keegan as the only dissenter, council voted overwhelmingly in favor of Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle's recommendation to call tenders for the railway overpass as soon as possible.

The motion also calls for consulting engineers Damas and Smith to proceed with the plans for the Dundas Street bridge and also plans for the reconstruction of Dundas Street from Holden Street to Front Street

There was little doubt as to the feeling of the majority of councillors on the Dundas Street project as Alderman Boyle's motion to call tenders came up for discussion.

Member after member committed themselves in favor of getting on with the project.

Lending support to the move to go ahead with the railway overpass were spokesmen representing the downtown merchants as well as private citizens. W. S. Wills spoke on behalf of an independent group of merchants, while Stan Albert, on behalf of the downtown merchants' association, urged action on the overpass as the first phase of the Dundas Street project which he said was the key to downtown development.

But Alderman Keegan did not give up easily and continued his fight to the end to stave off construction of the railway overpass which he claims as premature.

"I have stood alone before and I can do it again," he said, as he commenced a half hour dissertation opposing the motion.

Alderman Boyle led off the discussion calling on council to put off the procrastination which had seen the Dundas Street project under debate since 1961.

He said the project had been discussed to its "fullest extent" and that there was no longer any reasonable argument to further delay the project.

Alderman Boyle went on to say that the Dundas Street bridge and roadway reconstruction proposal was essential if any urban renewal scheme was to be carried out in the city's downtown district.

The argument that the project should be delayed to allow further investigation of the possibility of moving the CPR tracks was no longer reasonable, he said.

"This red herring has no longer any validity — it would cost $25 to $30 million to move the tracks and the city just cannot afford to move them."

"There is no longer any reasonable expectation that the tracks can be moved," he said.

In the years which council has been discussing the project, Alderman Boyle said costs have risen sharply and added that further procrastination would cost the city more money.

He stressed that engineers recommended the railway overpass as the first phase of the overall project and said that because plans were still not prepared it would be impossible in any event to construct the river bridge before 1969.

"So why waste time, the need is urgent," he said.

Alderman Enos David said he was now convinced the grade separation should be the first phase of the project but urged that the entire project go ahead as soon as possible.

Alderman Gerald Joyce said his fear was that unless the city proceeded first with the overpass the municipality was taking a chance in not getting provincial grants for the river bridge when it was constructed.

"This could happen, if the new river bridge is not considered as a highway connecting link," he said.

Alderman Don Williams expressed himself as being in favor of the overpass as the first construction phase. "We should pay more attention to the advice of our engineers," he said.

Alderman E. A. Orr said he for a long time had realized the necessity of a Dundas Street bridge, but had felt, however, that it should be the first phase of construction.

Now, he realized this was impossible and he accordingly favored going ahead with the overpass this year.

Aldermen Robin Jeffrey and Kenneth Soden also committed themselves in favor of the overpass, the latter noting that the city's share for this phase would be only $60,000.

But Alderman Keegan said he opposed the overpass taking top priority for many reasons.

One of his main reasons for opposing the overpass was his desire for excellence of planning.

"I well remember the words of many famous planners that a city which plans in a hurry or follows a program of stop-gap planning, is a city that will develop in a haphazard manner and those responsible will be condemned for generations to come."

The alderman urged continued caution and said the plan under consideration by council would not be the recommendation of engineers if the CPR tracks were not there.

He accused council of defeatism in their feeling that costs would deny any possibility of the tracks being moved.

"The $25 to $30 million figure suggested as the cost of moving the tracks is only an estimated guess," he said.

"Pressure must be brought to bear on senior governments in regard to the whole transportation system in Eastern Ontario, both the railways and the highways."

He said if there was any possibility at all of getting the tracks moved, construction of the skyway would be premature.

Alderman Keegan said if the tracks were moved millions of dollars would be saved in overpass and roadway construction in the city.

It would make the Bay Bridge Road overpass unnecessary and there would be no need for proposed grade separations at both the east and west end of the city on the No. 2 highway route.

With the tracks gone the CPR right-of-way could be used as the highway route.

Construction of the Dundas street bridge alone would relieve the present lower bridge of from eight to nine thousand cars a day," he said.

In conclusion he urged the city to wait until the Ontario Municipal Board had an opportunity to review the city's financial position before going ahead with the Dundas Street project, and also to await the return of Mayor J. R. Russell Scott to allow him to take part in discussions.

In reply Alderman Boyle suggested that Alderman Keegan must be aware of the impossibility of having the tracks moved.

"The matter cannot wait for Mayor Scott to return. It has already been over-duly delayed," he said.

Ald. Keegan to Retain Seat

Belleville Alderman Arthur Keegan will retain his seat on city council and will not resign as was intimated two weeks ago if council voted to go ahead this year with the CPR grade separation as the first phase of the Dundas Street bridge and roadway project.

City council last night voted 9-1 to call tenders for the railway overpass but there was no mention made of Ald. Keegan's possible resignation. Following the council meeting, Ald. Keegan denied saying that he would resign.

"What I actually said was that I 'may' resign," he said.

The alderman said he would retain his seat at the request of Mayor J. Russell Scott who is still in Florida while awaiting a room at Toronto General Hospital to undergo surgery.

In a telephone conversation over the weekend, Ald. Keegan said Dr. Scott told him he would return to Toronto on Feb. 12 for the operation and would possibly be back in Belleville in another two weeks.

He said Mayor Scott would take part in city council budget discussions.

Enlisting Participation

Jaycees Outline Arena Position

The position of the Belleville Jaycees in its proposal to head up a private subscription campaign to help offset the cost of the proposed community centre, was outlined yesterday to members of city council.

Spokesman for the Jaycees was Zdenek Kvarda who said the organization regretted the fact that a new community centre had been a political football in Belleville for the past 10 years.

He said if action was not taken now on the project the city could be in line for another 10-year round of talks.

With the view of enlisting the participation of citizens in a fund raising campaign for the community centre, Mr. Kvarda said his organization planned talks to more than 30 local organizations and hoped by April to set up a Citizens' Civic Centre Committee.

A new community centre in Belleville could boost citizens' pride in the city and would be a big assistance to the Belleville Industrial Commission in attracting industry, he said.

Alderman Kenneth Soden, chairman of the city parks board, said he had not asked for a public fund raising campaign for the community centre as he did not believe in such campaigns in the broad sense.

He said organizations such as the YMCA, the churches, the United Appeal, Salvation Army and other organizations should not have to compete with the city for the donation dollar of the general public.

He said the campaign being organized by the Jaycees would not take any dollars away from the "Y" or other worthy campaigns.

Instead, the campaign would be aimed at the service clubs, prosperous citizens and business firms.

Such people, he suggested, after giving in their usual generous manner to the "Y" campaign, would also give to the community centre as a duty to the community in which they live.

"There are many Belleville companies, merchants, professional and business men who could donate a "once in a lifetime" $500 or $1,000 each to the city for a community centre and never miss a meal or a dividend.

He said a perfect example of how easy it would be to raise $50,000 or $100,000 toward the community centre, occurred in the city two years ago without fanfare when a few local businessmen subscribed money to organize a senior hockey team under private sponsorhip.

Even without being asked four aldermen on the 1967 council pledged $500 to a new community centre and the city treasurer has received one $500 cheque.

Alderman Soden pledged his "whole hearted support" to the Jaycees in their endeavor and was certain his colleagues on council would be pleased to assist in any way possible.

Alderman Soden said he would ask council to place two-thirds of a mill in the 1968 and 1969 current budgets with the proposal the balance of the cost of the arena be financed by the sale of 20-year debentures commencing in 1970.

Two weeks ago city council voted to call for tenders for the new community centre after turning down a proposal by Alderman Enos David to investigate the refurbishing of the present arena.

Yesterday Alderman David said he was sorry that council had turned down what he termed had been a "reasonable proposition."

However, he said he could not condone the expenditure of a million dollars for the construction of a new arena.

Neither did he think it was fair for council to call tenders for the community centre when it was entirely possible no contract would be awarded without a vote of the people.

He said he took strong exception to the "tirade" made against him by Alderman Soden at the last council meeting.

Alderman David said the lack of rebuttal at the time was not inspired by lack of conviction in the correctness of his views.

And Alderman Robin Jeffrey has some doubts that the Belleville Fairgrounds is the proper place for the new community centre if and when it is built. She asked for the list of alternate sites suggested by the city planning director.

Man Sentenced On Break, Enter

Richard Wayne Garbitt, 18, of Hillcrest was sentenced to six months definite and six months indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory today in city magistrate's court before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Garbitt was convicted of break and enter with intent to commit an indictable offence one week ago in magistrate's court.

He pleaded not guilty to breaking into the Sun Oil Company service station on North Front St. and was found guilty of the entry.

Three other service stations were entered by the youth and he pleaded guilty to the resulting charges. The service stations were, Meades Sunoco on College Street, the Spur service station on Cannifton Road and Ray Rose's BA on North Front Street.

All the offences occurred Dec. 10 of last year.

In other court action this morning two Toronto youths were fined for their part in a fight Feb. 4 at the corner of Dundas and Church Streets.

Ross Royal, 25, was fined $50 and $3 costs when he pleaded guilty to a charge of obstructing justice. Larry Rushlow, 30, was fined $25. and $3 costs for disturbing the peace by fighting.

According to testimony, the fight occurred about midnight in the middle of the street .Cars were stopped as the fight continued. One car, a 1968 Chrysler had its serial broken in the scuffle.

Royal admitted trying to stop one of two Belleville police constables who were called to break up the fight.

A third man, Robert Fowler, 23, of Belleville has been charged with creating a disturbance by fighting concerning the same incident.

Mortgage Money Available

There is no shortage of mortgage money locally, according to Jack Mosley, manager of the Belleville branch of the Victoria and Grey Trust Company.

However there is a shortage of money for cash down payments, he told fellow Rotarians yesterday.

Commenting on a recent Intelligencer article on this theme and on the housing situation, Mr. Mosley observed: "We want to make mortgage loans in Belleville and in the Quinte district."

Last year the branch had advanced more than $2 million in mortgage money and the figure this year would be higher.

In addition loans have been made on farms and residential properties and applications are still being received despite an increase in the interest rate from 8½ to 8¾ per cent.

Mr. Mosley counselled thrift to young couples trying to raise down payments for a home. He said that was how he and his wife had done it and wages were higher today.

Daylight Robbery?

No, it's not a brazen breakin. The debris around the Bank of Montreal Four Corners branch in Belleville is the result of honest toil. Workmen yesterday were engaged in a minor construction project at the bank.

Used Furniture Collection New Venture for City

Collection of used furniture for use by needy families is a worthwhile welfare department expenditure.

This is the feeling of local welfare director Reginald Tucker who yesterday at city council was called upon to explain an expenditure item of $133.72 in welfare accounts.

Mr. Tucker said the furniture collection was a new venture on the part of the community services and was filling a worthwhile need. For the time being the welfare department was paying for the furniture moving, he said. The item will not be charged back.

Other business at yesterday's meeting saw council approve an agreement between the county of Hastings and the city to establish a county welfare unit.

Council also approved an amount of $2,147.70, the amount of an invoice from the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council, to be referred to the city manager for inclusion in the 1968 budget estimated.

Approval was also given to a slightly amended plan respecting the proposed right-of-way for services to the Loyalist College site.

Council directed that the Belleville Transit Commission be authorized to issue 33 passes to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind for the use of blind persons in the city. The cost of the passes, $612.15 will be provided for in the 1968 welfare budget.

Council was informed that the Department of Social and Family Services does not have the staff available to do a complete survey in the city to determine the need for a rest home.

However, the department is prepared to send a representative to a meeting of local officials, including the provincial regional director of welfare, the city welfare director and the hospital administrator. The suggestion is that such a meeting might provide sufficient information to determine the needs for a rest home in Belleville.

Acting Mayor Douglas Boyle, and Alderman Robin Jeffrey and Richard Ellis, will represent the city at the meeting.

Council was informed that the Belleville Financial Appeals Review Board was now in operation and ready to receive applications for consideration. The board is prepared to examine, among other things, applications made to council for authority to hold tag days.

Viet Nam

The murderous communist attacks on United States and South Vietnamese forces in Viet Nam have, on their own admission, taken the Americans by surprise.

The key to the communists' strength lies of course in the apparently unlimited sources of manpower at the disposal of North Vietnam, supported by increasingly powerful weaponry from China and the Soviet Union. In the countries of the Orient human life is expendable. Added to this, however, is the fact that in the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese the Allies have encountered as ruthless, as determined and as efficient a foe as ever has taken up arms.

If the Asian is expendable, the suffering and terror mirrored in the faces of the civilians uprooted by the fighting still have a poignancy recognizable anywhere. The sight of women and children caught up in these appalling and futile battles is a reproach to all mankind. And yet, there can be no turning back by the United States and its allies. There are only two alternatives — a military victory (which now seems more remote than ever) or a negotiated settlement, and this course does not appear to be feasible either.

Now there is talk of the Reds concentrating their all into a massive assault on one or more United States bases and overrunning them in the manner of Dien Ben Dhu — where the French finally went down to defeat some 20 years ago. If the communists were to attain this the morale and physical damage to the United States' position in Viet Nam would be incalculable.

How the United States with all its resources has allowed itself to be manoeuvred into such a position is beyond understanding. The initiative is with the communists. They more than any understand the significance of psychological warfare.

If the U.S. is to extricate itself from this situation it will have to increase its troop involvement in Vietnam — a course it cannot really afford. Beyond this again is the prospect of further escalation of the war and even greater problems for the United States in Asia.

Untapped Wealth

How old is this country? As a nation it is only 100 years and a bit. As an early mecca of explorers and colonizers it dates back to the brief sojourn in Newfoundland of Viking navigators about the year 1000. In the years between there were other giants of Canada's history. Men like Jacques Cartier and Alexander Mackenzie.

Geologically, however, Canada goes far back into the mists of time. For instance a part of Saskatchewan at least 3,500,000,000 years old is to be subjected in the spring to an intensive aerial survey for mineral deposits.

As reported last week the survey covers more than 1,644,600 acres of the pre-Cambrian shield in northern Saskatchewan and Manitoba, of which 960,000 acres are located in Saskatchewan.

Much of this continent is distinguished by the ageing process that contributes to its underground mineral wealth. For instance, on Isle Royale, the U.S. island territory in Lake Superior, are the remains of copper mines worked by Indians some 5,000 years ago.

The Saskatchewan project is part of an expanding investigation of northern resources. The north is Canada's last frontier. Ultimately the Arctic may become habitable in the same manner as Siberia where the Russians have made much progress. This is the kind of challenge that will provide scope for Canadians for generations to come.

Balmy Days

Belleville's early thaw has been a gradual and painless process. From the ice-jam of only a couple of weeks ago the Moira is now free of any major pile-up and the water is flowing freely into the bay. Nature has taken its course without complications.

In Southwestern Ontario it is another story. Flooding, caused by warm temperatures and heavy rain, hit hardest at Chatham and other areas of Kent County. Chatham officials will be feeling particularly uncomfortable over this turn of events. Some weeks ago they turned down a petition by homeowners concerning flooding on the ground that flooding was a rare occurrence that would not happen again in 40 years.

We have been lucky here. Still it is early yet. February can be chilly enough and March likes to go out like a lion. March blizzards are by no means a rarety, even in Belleville's banana belt.

Stanfield Has Grit Leadership Candidates Nonplussed

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Happened to notice that rather remarkable non-runner in the Liberal leadership race?

He is the one you see there, 'way out front of the Liberal pack — leading the field while just standing on the sidelines with all the rest of the spectators watching the race like everyone else.

Recognize him?

Sure, that is right — the non-running pace-setter is none other than Conservative leader Robert Stanfield.

They are all running against him, Paul Martin, Mitchell Sharp, Paul Hellyer, the lot.

Running against each other, too, of course.

But knowing that Stanfield's the man to beat.

Just listen to them as the race roars on, worrying out loud for all to hear about the competition — not each other's. but his.

For as they show their paces at various weekend Liberal pre-trots for the great party race, the question they are hearing most from the faithful is "Okay, but can he beat Stanfield?"

So Mitch Sharp tells them not to worry, that Stanfield is not real, just a reflection in the mirror of publicity.

Sharp says:

"Dalton Camp built a wonderful image for Bob Stanfield, and Bob Stanfield is not allowing his performance to blur that image."

Joe Greene says it shorter and snappier, cracking:

"Bob Stanfield's dialogue is wearing thin — he'll have to get himself another Edgar Bergen."

What really bothers the Liberal leadership candidates is that they can't make out Bob Stanfield.

He is different. And he mystifies them. Often mystifies the parliamentary press, too.

Like the day the Liberals might have been facing possible defeats on a non-confidence vote, and Bob Stanfield told this reporter that no, he wouldn't be voting because he was paired with the absent prime minister.

"Surprised?" he inquired.

"Well, yes; bit odd, isn't it, for a Conservative leader to make a vote saw-off with a Liberal prime minister?"

"I think it's only the decent thing to do, odd or not," he replied. "After all, he is prime minister, and when he asks that I pair with him, I think it only right that I do."

And pair he did, as some of the Conservative backbenchers popped their eyes in disbelief.

Stanfield's like that, different.

Different to Diefenbaker — different to any other opposition leader the Liberals, including veteran Paul Martin, in all his 38 parliamentary years, have seen.

And that is why the Liberal leadership candidates find themselves running more against Bob Stanfield than against each other.

What bothers them most is that he refuses to tell them how to manage the country, or even how they are going wrong.

They have been so used to Dief's unending thunder of instant denunciation and sudden solution — George Drew when he was opposition leader was like that, too — they just can't get used to it. The sudden switch has made them nervous, and so while they are racing against each other for the Liberal leadership, they keep looking over their shoulders at the Conservative leader.

Why doesn't Stanfield say something? asks Paul Martin, nonplussed.

"The time will come," replies Bob Stanfield, "in the election campaign and when we form the government, to state specific policies."

But why not now?

"At this stage," answers Stanfield, "our job is not to attempt to govern, but to prepare to govern. We are determined to form a government which will command events rather than be buffeted by emergencies which should have been foreseen."

But what about some promises or pledges for when you do form a government?

"A government taking office burdened with premature commitments would be forced to choose between promises and performance, a dangerous dilemma," he replies.

Alright then, but how about lambasting the Liberals every time they show their heads in Parliament?

"It's unreasonable and unreal to oppose everything," he responds, "for no government can be that wrong, and no opposition that right. It's more effective to be selective."

Makes sense, doesn't it?

Letter to the Editor

City's Image Suffers From Dirty Streets And Broken Surfaces

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I have much pleasure in conveying to you my appreciation of your editorial, "City's Needs" in the Friday, February 2nd, edition. This is not the first editorial you have written pointing out the run-down and neglected conditions of large portions of our city.

For 30 years I have heard of the need for sewers in Foster Ward. All those years "something was going to be done soon". Had I and a thousand other citizens years ago bombarded your paper and our city councillors with letters demanding action, quite likely it would have been done long before now. I think we left it to Art Keegan to do the fighting, but one man, however articulate, is not enough.

You mention cracked sidewalks — there are miles of them but we haven't had one councillor or mayor in at least seven years who has displayed any real interest in dirty streets or broken sidewalks.

You ask "What about litter?" I think, Sir, our best hope in that matter is that some leader or leaders among our high school students would start a "No Litter Club", with the objective of bringing every school pupil in as a member, pledged to never be guilty of being a "Litter Bug". The city could surely supply suitable, free membership buttons.

Further to broken sidewalks and dirty streets, it should be of interest to know that I voted for Mr. Joyce for councillor. I don't know Mr. Joyce, but it was my thought that a realtor should know just about every inch of the city and should be able to appreciate just what nice streets would do to enhance property values and the reputation of our city. In fact, I think our realtors have been rather apathetic in this respect.

In closing I would like to express my thanks to the Public Utilities Commission for the splendid new street lights which have been installed throughout this northern part of the city. It is so nice to know that some one, other than the meter man and the tax collector, is interested in us.

ED. SCHLIEVERT.

What Next With the LCBO?

Kingston Whig-Standard

Don't look now but those are liquor bottles. Yes sir, right there on the pages of that newspaper and that magazine! They will be showing right where the stuff comes from — out of bottles! Nothing new about that? Well not for magazines and newspapers published outside Ontario but sold here by the thousands. But these liquor bottles will be shown in advertisements in magazines and newspapers published right here in Ontario.

Imagine! What's got into the Liquor Control Board? Next thing you know they will be letting liquor bottles be shown on T.V. That Chief Commissioner G. Harry Sheppard — he should be ashamed! He came right out and said that the Board has decided that it will be all right to show pictures — actual pictures — of not more than three brands so long as they don't take up any more than 15 per cent. of the space of the advertisement. Can you beat it?

Oh he had an excuse all right. You know what he said? Well he said that — no, no, not that he was feeling reckless — just that Quebec had let them show the bottles about two years ago. And anyway, he said, this won't really change the honest-to-god determination of the LCBO to carry out its ultimate aim, which is to make people think about the brand name rather than to get ideas which will make them drink more.

Of course the LCBO makes a lot of money out of licensing the sale of liquor. So what? Oh— you mean why, if the Ontario Government gets so much revenue out of liquor sales, does the Chief Commissioner of the board which controls those sales talk about not wanting to encourage people to drink more? Well, don't be so stupid! You know the Government always needs money, but that's no reason why it should approve of how it gets that money is it?

It is?

Alberta's Tax Rebate Act

Calgary Herald

Evidence is mounting that the Alberta Estate Tax Rebate Act will prove to be one of the provincial government's wisest and most successful pieces of legislation.

The act is unique in Canada. Under its provisions, eligible es-estates receive a 75 per cent rebate on death duties. This percentage constitutes the sum of money returned by the federal government to the province after it has initially imposed and collected taxes on a deceased person's estate.

The Alberta legislation has only been in effect for nine months, but already it is yielding tangible benefits. Estates based in Alberta are certainly taking advantage of it: to date, the government has paid out, or approved for payment, a total of $300,741 in rebates.

Of greater consequence, however, is the evidence that the Manning government's legislation is enjoying considerable success in its essential aim of encouraging business corporations and individuals to invest in Alberta by setting up legal domicile here.

It is not surprising that the estate tax is an unfair, unjustifiable form of double taxation, imposing hardships on widows and other inheritors of estates. It penalizes the thrift and initiative of an individual or business. It discourages Canadians from developing capital through investment or creation of business enterprises. It may be assumed that the shattering effect of death duties on some estates has threatened certain businesses with bankruptcy or forced them into unwanted absorption by a foreign firm.

It is difficult to understand why governments have countenanced such a situation, particularly when the estate tax has returned a comparatively small percentage of total public revenue to the governments and when it can have a disruptive effect on the general economy.

The Alberta legislation has removed at least three-quarters of the sting for those individuals and concerns shrewd enough to set up domicile in Alberta. And the economic potential for this province is obvious.

There were two wars in the North Island, in 1843-48 and 1860-70 because the Maoris feared they would be obliterated. Native chiefs were admitted to the legislature but the tribes dwindled rapidly in the late 19th century.

Southwest Ontario Loses Mainstay of Its Economy

Windsor Star

Southwestern Ontario, because of its soil, climate and progressive farmers, is one of the most productive areas in the world, and with a wide variety of products. Now it is to lose what has been a mainstay of hundreds of farmers for 60 years. The Canada and Dominion Sugar Company is closing out its operations.

This means a loss of approximately $10,000,000 in annual income in the area, of which some $4,000,000 went to the 900 sugar beet growers and some $5,000,000 in salaries, services, etc., in the Chatham plant. This is equivalent to the loss, in an industrial city, of a substantial industry — and indeed it is the loss of an industry to Chatham.

In fairness to the Company, the sugar beet industry has been in difficulty. The Wallaceburg plant was shut in 1960. There was a problem last spring of getting enough acres in sugar beets to keep the Chatham plant going. Government assistance has been required to tide over the industry.

The loss to the farmers is particularly poignant. Some have been in sugar beets all their lives. They have invested their time, their energies and their knowledge in the beets. They have large investments in equipment. (They will be partially recompensed for certain recent purchases.)

Sugar beets have returned to the growers a very high income per acre compared with most other crops. But, offsetting this they also entailed a comparatively large amount of labor and investment.

The soil on which the sugar beets have been grown was peculiarly suitable for them. The beets were a fine rotation crop to maintain the soil's fertility and cleanliness. It, of course, can be devoted to other crops but Southwestern Ontario won't seem the same without its fields heavily laden with beets.

The operations from the viewpoint of the Company appear to have become uneconomic. But they weren't uneconomic from that of the growers or the workers in the plant. They are the victims of the decision.

This ends sugar beet production in Ontario. But they still are grown in Southern Manitoba and Southern Alberta. Will operations there also become uneconomic? Or, if they are economic out there, why not here?

Winter Holiday

Leamington Post and News

From this point in the year, spring appears as a tiny dim light at the end of a long, dark tunnel. The cheery warmth of the festive season lies behind us and there is nothing for it but to plod forward through the icy, barren wastes of February and March, the twilight weeks of the Canadian year.

It's a long gruelling march to expect of anyone, and there has long persisted a general feeling that there should be some kind of oasis along the way — a day which would be nationally recognized both as a navigational marker and a way station for the revival of flagging spirits. A public holiday, in fact.

The federal government at one time was considering the possibility of declaring February 15 National Flag Day and making it a national holiday, but nothing came of it. It was a near miss. Let's make it Valentine Day.

Beef Futures Market Could Be Established This Year

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Grain Exchange is flying another trial balloon this year in the hopes of drumming up enough support to launch Canada's first beef futures market.

J. E. McWilliams, president of the exchange, says he plans to visit Eastern Canada, Saskatchewan and Alberta to meet university and farm organization officials to discuss the plan.

He says the exchange is ready to enter the business if producers and farm groups are willing to support it.

The exchange toyed with the beef futures concept once befores but allowed it to lie dormant until Mr. McWilliams revived interest when he became president late last year. He says the futures market could be established "later this year."

Expanded beef production is one of the keys to diversification of Canadian agriculture, he says, but because it is a live commodity that cannot be stored, it is a hazardous undertaking because of shifting prices.

"What we propose to do is establish a system which would ensure that the primary producer and those who market beef are protected against serious price changes. The same system, by helping to create an orderly market, would protect consumers from rapidly-rising prices."

Plans call for talloring the market after the Chicago exchange where 1,577 head went in 1964 and about 280,000 in 1967.

Ken Singleton, president of the Manitoba Farmers' Union, told a New Democratic Party policy conference last month that the party should take a stand against proposals to "gamble" on foodstuffs. An example he cited was the proposed beef futures market.

But Mr. McWilliams describes the futures as a form of insurance for producers against price declines.

"By using futures trading, the primary producers could determine months in advance what they would get for beef and lock in profits in their operation."

He used a feedlot operator to illustrate the workings of the market.

The operator would sell a futures contract when he buys his feeder cattle, pledging delivery of a stated number of head at a specified grade on a specific date, possibly four months hence.

Should the price drop by $3 a hundredweight in the interval, the operator would sell his cattle on the cash market for current market price. At the same time, he would buy back his futures at $3 less than at what he sold them. As a result, he'd make up, on the futures market, the loss he took on the cash market.

The same principle would apply should prices skyrocket. That would mean the operator would have his locked-in profit but would not be able to capitalize on the unexpected surge in prices.

Mr. McWilliams says that while the rule of supply and demand would still exist, futures trading would provide price stability while contributing to standardization and quality control.

Bernard Ingram Acquitted Of Charge

Bernard Albert Ingram was acquitted yesterday in a short trial before Magistrate T. Y. Wills. Ingram was charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

He was arrested following an accident Dec. 18 of last year when his car came into collission with nine-year-old Mary Elizabeth Louise Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Austin of 373 Sidney Street, the street on which the girl was killed.

The child was killed just south of the Sidney and Graham streets intersection.

Ingram was acquitted after he re-elected trial by magistrate. Previously, yesterday morning, he had elected trial by judge and jury and a preliminary hearing had been conducted.

Magistrate Wills had adjourned to the afternoon for a decision on the hearing. Meanwhile Ingram and his defence counsel, Reginald Nourse, decided to change their election to trial by magistrate.

Splendid Response

Belleville area householders have increased their contributions to this year's March of Dimes by about 25 per cent.

Door-to-door canvassing in the city and district last night netted $5,004 — with some areas yet to report returns.

This compares to about $4,000 for last year.

The donations were gleaned by more than 400 local housewives, who volunteered for service as campaign's Marching Mothers.

al trade, air transport, equalization of services among the provinces, and some others.

But these powers must be exercised in consultation with the provinces.

The Quebec premier said matters have reached a "ridiculous" stage with the federal government legislating in fields essentially provincial while a majority of the provinces do not wan tsuch legislation.

Governments must make special efforts to ensure that the taxpayer receives in future a dollar's worth for each dollar of taxes.

Justice Minister Trudeau spoke at the conference for the first time when he rose to question Premier Johnson's concept of equality.

Mr. Trudeau said extension of powers in external affairs, social security and broadcasting could destroy the reason for having Quebec MPs at Ottawa.

The justice minister wondered how a Quebec member of the federal cabinet could take part in debates at the federal level if Quebec had powers in these domains.

If a Quebec cabinet minister had to stand aside and not be entitled to speak on these questions, "no politician worth his salt would want to come to Ottawa."

Neither would civil servants want to come here. They would decisions would be made.

The next step would be for Quebecois to say that because there was nothing in Ottawa involviny French-speaking Canadians, the province of Quebec might as well separate from the rest of Canada.

This contradiction in Mr. Johnson's position should be settled immediately at this conference, Mr. Trudeau said.

The justice minister said the solution to the question of dividing powers is not to alter Quebec's powers relative to the other provinces, but to put better federal representatives in Ottawa.

Mr. Trudeau said he does not believe French-Canada wants to be equal on a federal government level and seperior to the other provinces on a provincial government level.

Mr., Mrs. Frank Short Wed for 50 Years

"It was the best day of our lives".

That was the happy re-action yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Short, 94 East Moira Street, following their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday.

"And they were all home that it was the first time in almost 30 years that the entire family had been together.

Mr. and Mrs. Short have six sons, all of whom saw military service during World War II, and one daughter. They have 33 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

'And they were all home for the anniversary but four of the grandchildren," said Mrs. Short. "We had a full house."

Although admitting that a half century of married life had a few ups and downs the Shorts say it doesn't seem like 50 years ago that they "ran away" to get married at St. Michael's Church.

"Our parents didn't know anything about it but we had to take Mr. Short's brother and sister into our confidence as witnesses to the ceremony," Mrs. Short recalled.

And Mr. Short remembers their wedding day followed one of the heaviest snowstorms of the winter.

The drifts were so high that they had to walk to the church from the bride's North Park Street home. Mrs. Short was the former Kathleen Murray.

Although it was her happiest day the past weekend has been a bit uncomfortable for the bride of 50 years. The reason — on Friday she fell and hurt her hip and she and her husband were unable to go to church Sunday as planned. Instead, Msgr. J. P. Sullivan visited the couple at their home.

Also guests at the anniversary were Mr. Short's brother and sister, George Short and Mrs. William (Helen) McMillan, both of Toronto, wedding attendants of 50 years ago.

Mr. Short is a retired CN locomotive engineer, ending a long service with the railway five years ago.

The couple received anniversary congratulations from Prime Minster Pearson and expect also to receive a scroll from Pope Paul.

All six sons and the one daughter were home to honor their parents on their anniversary. They are Raymond of North Bay; Wilfred and Albert of Belleville; Leon of Stirling; Cecil of Camp Borden; Dale of Rossmore, and Mrs. Leonard (Kathleen) DeRochie of Marmora.

N. Z. Marks National Day In Canada

TORONTO — Today New Zealanders in various parts of Canada are marking "New Sir Leon Gotz, will host a receptions and it is more than an even bet that lamb, in the form of cocktail snacks, fondues or some other tasty morsel, will be served.

In Ottawa the High Commissioner for New Zealand, Sid Leon Gotz, will host a reception and his country's Trade Commissioners in Montreal and Vancouver will hold similar functions.

It was 128 years ago that the New Zealand Governor signed the Treaty of Waitangi with some 500 Maori chieftains, under which the natives gave up their sovereignty in exchange for the protection of the Crown.

New Zealanders may well celebrate the event with pride. Only 27 years later, while Canadians were hammering out the pact of Confederation, New Zealand was writing political history by becoming the first nation in the world to give its native peoples the right to vote. Along with the franchise went the right to elect four Maori representatives to parliament. In succeeding years Maori leaders have provided some of New Zealand's most eminent statesmen.

The New Zealanders affinity for lamb comes naturally. The country, about half the size of the Province of Manitoba, has become one of the world's largest meat exporting countries and lamb is the keystone of the economy.

Although New Zealanders are among the world's greatest meat eaters — 239.4 pounds per capita annually against 149.1 pounds for Canadians — they must rely heavily on export. And Canada, which imports about 8,500 tons of lamb from New Zealand annually, is their second best customer. The first is Britain which imports some 265,000 tons annually.

With a population of 2,700,000 persons, only slighter more than that of Greater Montreal, New Zealand has 60,000,000 sheep. Canada, with a population of 20,000,000 has fewer than 1,000,000 sheep.

So it is that New Zealand and lamb are synonymous. Particularly on New Zealand Day.

Ironworks Owner Only Woman at Convention

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. Dan Reid, the only woman delegate to the Canadian Construction Association convention for the last 12 years, has strong words for unions.

The 55-year-old president and owner of a Toronto ironworks company says the biggest "heartbreak" facing the industry is strikes.

"I think something is definitely going to have to be done about liaison where strikes are concerned," she said in an interview on the final day (Wednesday) of the association's annual meeting. "Otherwise our whole industry is going to suffer and suffer badly.

"I really don't know what the answer is but the problem will have to be solved because every time there is a strike, labor gets more money and the builder has to get more money and it starts all over again. Where is it going to end?

"My personal feeling is that union leaders now are trying to protect their own position."

Keen, blunt-spoken, yet with a love of fun bubbling to the surface when talk of industry problems stopped, Bernice Reid said her next big interest is retardation because she has a retarded daughter.

She also has a married daughter, a son studying political science and communications at Boston University, a 12-year-old son and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Reid became a business woman when her first husband, Charles Shipway, died a few months after her youngest son was born.

Today she is boss to 50 men and two women - her secretary and her bookkeeper - and owner of a company which has been in the Shipway family for four generations.

Last May she married a second time to the sales manager of a plastics firm.

Now, with two jobs — and of course two conventions — to keep them busy, the lively couple say life is never dull

Montreal Women Protest Increase in Sales Tax

MONTREAL (CP)—About a dozen women representing four organizations picketed Quebec government offices in downtown Montreal Monday to protest a general seven-per-cent sales tax now under consideration by the provincial government.

Premier Johnson said last week that such a tax was being studied by a committee.

The marching women, members of the Inflation Fighters, la Ligue des Femmes du Quebec, the municipal employees of Montreal and the Montreal Labor Council, stated their opposition to a general tax.

Quebec now has an eight-per-cent sales tax, the highst in Canada, but there are exemptions for food, medical supplies, children's clothing and school books.

Latest London Look Is Combination of Styles

NEW YORK (Reuters) — British fashion designers brought the latest London look to New York Monday in what was described as a combination of Carnaby Street and Savile Row.

Dhobi-Weteherlux of Lancashire featured coats with the popular highwayman look, with a flare at the bottom, suppressed waist and the over-all silhouette giving a slimmer appearance.

With the maxi-look in for women, a number of men's coats also reach mid-calf, the collars have a wider look of the 1930s, and many of the coats are being bought by women. The military look was distinctive in Dhobi's collection, with each coat showing a military cut at the front with eight buttons and full coachman collar. Some had zippers and were lined with red borg.

Other manufacturers emphasizing the "mod" coat included Mark Gore of London, whose range was designed by Sidney Brent of Carnaby Street and Cecil Gee of London.

Gee features new styles in twill fabrics with side vents and lace on tuxedo and vests for evening wear.

Class Has As Many Animals As Students

TORONTO (CP)—A Grade 6 class at Wexford public school in suburban Scarborough has almost as many animals as students.

Mortimer, for example, is a 1,100-pound stuffed moose shot by Donald Thain, the teacher, on a recent hunting expedition in British Columbia.

It shares the room with a stuffed wolf, also shot by him, Scenthia DePew, a deodorized skunk, Valentino, a 5½-foot boa constrictor, rabbits, guinea pigs, mice, a racing pigeon, turtles, rare birds and about 225 tropical fish.

The skunk, which loves to take baths and go for walks on the end of a leash, is booked solidly for weekend and holiday visits to students' homes until Easter. Valentino is not as popular although all but two girls in the class have learned to handle him.

The 30 students raise rats and mice to feed the boa, and once a month it gulps one down, providing the highlight of the month's natural history lesson.

Ann Landers

Lengthy Courtships Concern of Reader

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Can you tell me, please, why two attractive, intelligent people would go together for years and years and never marry? I know of three such couples. One couple went to Europe together last summer and made no attempt to keep it quiet. They even sent postcards?

ANN LANDERS

Why don't these people make it legal? They could file joint income tax reports, live in one lavish apartment instead of paying rent for two modest places. On the domestic side, they could raise a family and have a normal family life.

I've spent a lot of time thinking about this and I can't come up with any answers. Can you? — PRAGMATIC OBSERVER.

DEAR PRAG: Unless you are one of the principals in such an arrangement, don't spend any more time thinking about it because it's nobody's business but theirs.

What you consider a mystery is in my opinion obvious. People who go together for years and years and do not marry are unwilling to surrender what they consider their wholeness. As time goes on they feel less inclined to make the personal sacrifices which marriage demands. So — they go on enjoying the benefits of marriage without having to put with the disadvantages — or so it seems to them.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Don't you think you are overdoing the "see a psychiatrist" bit? I refer to the letter from the mother whose 6-year-old son who broke his toys, tore up magazines and books, knocked holes in the wall and got into fights with other children. You advised the mother to take him to a specialist. I raised three boys and I'd say the behavior described by the mother sounds like par for the course.

Why does every hostile act have to be "abnormal behavior?" Maybe the boy needs an outlet for his energies — something to bang on? Why didn't you suggest that the mother but the child a set of drums and send him for lessons? We did that with out two older boys and it worked out fine. A set of drums and some lessons do not come cheap but they cost a lot less than a psychiatrist. — NEWARK.

DEAR NEWARK: When a mother tells me that her 6-year-old son breaks up everything he gets his hands on, knocks holes in the wall and is forever hitting other children, I suggest professional help. If the specialist wants to suggest drum lessons, that's all right with me, but I recommend a specialist.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband's young brother had his 18th birthday two months ago. We went all out and bought him a beautiful set of luggage.

Yesterday the boy and his parents came to our home for dinner. The moment they entered the house, the boy's mother said, "My that was beautiful lugaage you sent Gregory for his birthday." With that, Gregory piped up, "Gee, it is sure neat. Thanks a lot."

When they left I told my husband I thought it was pretty sad that Gregory's mother had to bring up the subject of the luggage and that the boy should have written a thank-you note. My husband said, "Boys don't have to write thank-you notes." How about it? — J.L.T.

DEAR J.L.T.: Boys accept gifts, don't they? Why shouldn't they say thank you? If a note is too much trouble, a phone call could have served the purpose. Your nephew sounds like a bit of a clod and unfortunately it's his mother's fault.

Successful Living

Army Wife Finds Life Somewhat Lonely

Dear Doris: My husband is in the armed forces. When we came here it was cold, no neighbors called and I didn't get to know anyone until summer. I was very lonely.

Soon we will be moving on. What should I do if the same thing happens again?

When new people move into our row I force myself to go and introduce myself. I asked one new neighbor over for coffee and to meet some others. She said she was too busy as she'd just moved in. I invited another woman over twice to meet the neighbors, but both times she was unable to come (good reasons). — Army Wife.

Dear Army Wife: Sometimes the commander's wife can make all the difference, but it isn't easy for a soldier's family to keep breaking new ground. A shy young bride often finds the going lonely at first.

Try to realize that all the ladies feel the same. If you meet up with a recluse, don't park on her doorstep; she is unusual. Most people welcome a brief drop-in; and army wives I know have a ball over their frequent eleven-in-the-morning coffee parties.

One thing about it: the life mean: new experiences and interesting events. I know a congenial young man who has lived on every continent during growing up years, as the son of an army man.

He now feels at home in the world. Says he could hang his hat any place and enjoy himself.

Dear Doris: We (two older women) are considering a short vacation in Bermuda, about the first of May. Will you please give me an idea of the clothes we will need — spring or summer?

And how about tipping? We may go by boat or air. — A. E. W.

Dear A. E. W.: Summer comes to Bermuda early. In mid-April we sat in warm sunshine on outdoor bleachers and watched the annual floral pageant parade by — the like of which I had never seen before. Tens of thousands of Easter lilies, bougainvillea, hibiscus and other colorful blossoms decorated floats. There were great fairy tale ships and figures, bicycles, camouflaged as sea horses, a flower-throne for The Floral Pageant Queen. Bands played. People gave post-parade garden parties.

I'm sending you the Air Canada booklet "For the Woman Who's Going Places" which answers well nigh any question you can think up; also a little leaflet of mine about "Dressing and Tipping on a Cruise."

(You'll feel at home in Bermuda; and my column "successful Living" is featured in the Bermuda Royal Gazette.)

Dear Doris: Boy, I just don't understand girls. I have been going steady with a minister's daughter for nearly a year. I do all I can to please her but she still acts stand-offish. I can't remember ever getting more than one kiss on any of our dates and sometimes she won't even let me kiss her good night.

When I put my arm around her she tenses up but seems happy just holding hands. How can I convince her that there is nothing morally wrong with a return of affection?

I know that she has been taught by her parents not to throw herself at a man but if she is playing hard - to - get, isn't she carrying it just a little too far? How can I get her to realize that I have needs as well as she? — Starved For Affection.

Dear Starved: Your girl has a strict code of behavior plus rare will power. Early training has done its work, perhaps unusually well. She is a natural, human person, and the affection will come. Worry a little less about it; think more about sharing common interests, reading the same books, getting skilled at the same sports.

This way, solid love will grow; and enthusiasm for you will burst the dam of its warm expression.

Nigeria to Reform Marriage Customs

LAGOS Reuters — Dissatisfaction has caused authorities in six northern Nigerian states to study plans intended to revolutionize marriage laws and customs.

Committees headed by prominent Moslem leaders were appointed to inquire into the causes of the frequent break-ups of marriages, particularly of young people, in the native courts and to make recommendations conforming to modern social trends.

Marriages especially among members of the Moslem communities in the six states, have hitherto had to conform strictly to native laws and customs based on popular tradition, culture and religion.

Any Moslem marriage contract which does not conform to native laws and customs is regarded as untenable because it lacks the blessing of the Moslem elders.

Children born as a result of such marriages usually are considered illegitimate or fatherless, and are scorned and ridiculed in the community. The parents of these children, especially the mothers, run the risk of being disowned by their own parents.

Many young Moslem couples now feel that native marriage laws and customs are outdated.

Couples considering marriage now scorn unnecessary protocol and formalities such as traditional gifts by the bridegroom on Moslem festival days or seeking the consent of distant relatives before the marriage contract is signed.

They also resent marriage laws or customs which permit the parents of the bride to choose her husband.

The general belief is that forced marriages and the exorbitant price of brides are the chief causes of the frequent break-up of marriages in the predominantly Moslem states.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Deluxe Macaroni and Cheese

By MARY MOORE

This dish has several advantages. It is designed to bake in two casseroles — one for the current meal and one for freezing. The suggestion for lining the baking dishes with foil will please the girls who hate washing pots and pans. It contains plenty of nutritious protein so you will have to add only one green or yellow vegetable and — or a big salad for your main course.

DE LUXE MACARONI AND CHEESE (serves 10 and makes 2 casseroles — one to freeze)

2 cups (one 8-oz. package) elbow macaroni (or shells)
½ cup margarine — divided
2 tablespoons chopped onion
one 10-oz. can mushroom stems and pieces (or ¼ lb. scrubbed, sliced fresh mushrooms)
4 tablespoons flour
2½ to 3 cups hot milk (see below)
3 cups grated medium or old Cheddar cheese (about 10-oz.) — divided
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon paprika
2 cups cubed cooked meat—ham, beef, tongue or canned corned beef

Cook macaroni in plenty of salted water until tender. Drain. Meanwhile melt half of the margarine in very large frying pan. Add onions and mushrooms (if canned, drain and reserve liquid) and gently saute until limp but not brown. Skim onions and mushrooms from pan and reserve. To pan add remaining ¼ cup margarine and blend flour, pepper and paprika into it, then stir in hot milk until thick. (NOTE: If you have used canned mushrooms the liquid from them should be added to the milk to bring total liquid up to 3 cups.) Add 2½ cups of the cheese and stir in. Add drained macaroni, onions, mushrooms and meat.

For easy clean-up, if desired line two 1½-quart casseroles with heavy duty foil. (If one is to be frozen be sure that the casserole dish is one which can be frozen.) If unlined, butter the casseroles. Turn macaroni mixture evenly into each. Sprinkle remaining cheese over tops. Bake both casseroles at 400 deg. Fahr. about 15 to 20 minutes or until bubbly and golden. Serve one for current meal. Cool, freezerwrap and freeze second casserole.

NOTE: To reheat frozen casserole, thaw, cover tightly with foil and heat at 250 deg. Fahr. 1 hour, standing in shallow pan of hot water.

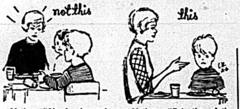
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Oh, for heaven's sake, you've spilled your milk again. Can't we have one meal without an accident?"

Child: "I didn't mean to."

Mother: "Get the cloth, Jimmy, and I'll wipe this up while you pour yourself another glass of milk."

Spilled milk is an accident — not misbehavior. Treat your child just as you would a guest who had tipped over a glass at the table.

BNA Act Defended

Manning Leads Western Assault on Concessions to Quebec

OTTAWA (CP)—Premier Manning of Alberta led western premiers Monday in a stout defence of the British North America Act against proposals by the federal government and by Quebec for constitutional changes.

He told delegates to the federal-provincial constitutional conference that his province won't go along with any constitutional amendments until Quebec makes known "the sum total of its demands."

In a point-by-point analysis of matters relating to the constitution, Mr. Manning said most Canadians are willing to accede to reasonable requests from French Canada.

However, he said, many recent demands from Quebec have been extremely unreasonable.

"Demands—publicly voiced—include abolition of all ties with the Crown and transformation of Canada into a republic, with a president assuming the duties of the Queen and Governor-General.

"Such proposals, even if they represent the viewpoint of only a small minority, are repugnant to a large majority of the Canadian people and therefore prejudicial to national unity."

The three other western premiers—W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan and Walter Weir of Manitoba—were also critical of calls for major changes in the British North America Act and for special status for Quebec.

But it was Mr. Manning who held the spotlight for the West. He finished off the first day of the three-day conference by bluntly announcing to reporters that his government won't implement the recommendations of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism until Quebec makes all its demands crystal clear.

He had said in his opening policy statement that his government believes the chances of implementing the commission recommendations are "remote, and if adopted, will hold very little hope of producing actual results."

He was also pessimistic about the chances of rewriting the federal constitution.

"In the light of past experience and present circumstances, there is little possibility of obtaining the measure of agreement necessary to rewrite or substantially amend the British North America Act in the foreseeable future.

"Those who assume that such agreement can readily be reached are ignoring the lessons taught by the experience of recent years."

Seventeen years of effort went down the drain when Quebec vetoed the Fulton-Favreau formula for amending the Canadian constitution in Canada.

Mr. Manning said the formula was much less controversial than the constitutional changes now proposed by the B and B commission and in Justice Minister Trudeau's charter of human rights.

The government's legalistic approach to constitutional matters failed to take into account that in the final analysis, language and cultural rights depend primarily "on the attitudes and responses of the Canadian people as a whole."

Premier Thatcher unloaded his heavy ammunition after listennig to Premier Johnson's Quebec submission.

"I felt it was a pretty hard line," said Mr. Thatcher. "Some of the demands just go too far—further than he could go if he wanted to keep the nation together."

"I'd certainly say that Quebec's demands are hard. If they mean them—and I'm not sure that they do—I don't think that any of the other provinces could ever agree."

Mr. Thatcher said in an interview that acceding to Quebec's demands would mean the destruction of Canada.

"We in Saskatchewan would not be prepared to see any province in Canada obtain rights that we do not have. We would never agree to one province making demands on Ottawa that would emasculate the power structure—we think a strong central government is necessary."

British Columbia's Premier Bennett concentrated on the constitutional question. He said that implementation of federal government's proposals in this field would result in Canada being saddled with an American-style constitution.

"Even an incomplete study of these proposals reveals that we are being invited to discard the constitutional philosophy of 1867 and embrace the constitutional philosophy of 1776," said the West Coast Social Credit leader.

He described the federal proposal to entrench the human rights charter and language rights in the constitution as a "restriction of the principle of legislative supremacy" and a "drastic rearrangement and reduction of legislative competence."

Federal government jurisdiction would probably be enormously enlarged at the expense of the provinces, Mr. Bennett said. The judiciary would be given a much wider scope and an increased ability to strike down municipal, provincial and federal government legislation.

"The ultimate development of course would be the altered role of the Supreme Court of Canada which would become—as in the United States—an arbiter of social doctrine by judicial interpretation."

Mr. Bennett said there has been no public outcry for a human rights charter and the whole matter could easily await solution of other vital problems such as regional economic disparities—the Number One problem in B.C.'s books.

Mr. Weir, Manitoba's new Progressive Conservative premier, said his province is still prepared to accept the Fulton-Favreau formula or some modification of it, as long as the constitution becomes a purely Canadian concern.

The formula to remove the law from the British Parliament provided that constitutional amendments would become law if ratified by two-thirds of the provinces representing more than 50 per cent of the population, as well as by the Commons.

Manitoba assigned the problem of getting the constitution under purely Canadian control top priority at the conference.

"Manitoba is still prepared to accept" the Favreau-Fulton formula or "some other agreed amending formula to achieve this fundamental goal at the earliest practicable time."

All four western premiers agreed that regional economic disparity is among the most important problems still awaiting a solution.

They also generally agreed that defence of the constitutional status quo against Quebec proposals is vital to the future of Canada.

They said areas of federal and provincial jurisdiction as now defined by the BNA Act must be preserved along with its fundamental principles.

Alberta 'Won't Break Up Canada'

OTTAWA (CP) — In the federal government's view, the attitudes expressed by the English-speaking provinces at Monday's opening rounds of the federal-provincial constitutional conference followed the expected lines.

But officials connected with the conference stressed that there have been sharp changes during the last year in provincial views on French-Canadian language and education rights outside Quebec.

It was significant that every province east of Alberta had reported progress on the extension of French rights as proposed in the report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

The lack of any immediate improvement of French-Canadian facilities in Alberta and British Columbia "won't break up Canada," one source put it.

There would have to be some "very tough" negotiating on the Quebec demand for special rights in international affairs, social welfare and broadcasting.

Quebec Surprised

Bilingualism Accepted, Two Nations Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec today planned to launch a counter-attack against widespread opposition to Quebec's claims to greater government powers as "homeland of the French-Canadian nation."

Mr. Johnson's two-nations concept was rejected outright by at least three provincial premiers Monday at the federal-provincial constitutional conference which also revealed a wave of support for bilingualism.

Premiers Smallwood of Newfoundland, Thatcher of Saskatchewan and Manning of Alberta objected to any special constitutional status for Quebec while all others stressed need for a strong central government.

The Quebecers privately expressed surprise for the binge of bilingualism, endorsed officially by Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. Ontario's pledge to honor the French language seemed even more significant.

"It seems unreal," commented a member of Quebec's delegation.

However, the Quebecers were reported to be jolted by what they considered the rude tone of some attacks on the province's claims, especially a reference to a "constitutional Munich" by Premier Manning of Alberta.

And the pro-monarchist sentiment of Mr. Smallwood, Mr. Manning and Premier Bennett of British Columbia was described by one Quebecer as lacking in "British fair play."

The Quebec official said his government has shown great care to avoid any references to the monarchy on grounds that the issue is not a priority and will only inflame sentiment in English-speaking Canada.

The unspoken attitude among the Quebecers, including even high-ranking French-speaking Canadians in the federal government, is that such a move is inevitable and should preferably originate in English-speaking Canada.

Mr. Johnson's two-nations concept, which he said is "urgent and indispensable" to continued existence of Canada, was shelled from Bonavista to the Rockies.

Mr. Smallwood said Canada is composed of "10 co-equal provinces" and must remain this way.

The remark that irked Quebecers most was Mr. Manning's comment that this conference could go down in history as a "constitutional Munich" unless there is clear knowledge now of Quebec's "total demands."

"That's getting pretty rough," said a Quebec official, "It's the sort of thing that's expected of some character picketing on the street. Munich conjures up ugly images. You don't expect that in the conference room."

Mr. Johnson's theory of vast decentralization, to be followed by delegation of powers to the central government by the English-speaking provinces, ran into one of Mr. Smallwood's sharpest cuts of the day. Mr. Smallwood said:

"This sounds like a profound, subtle or smart way to blindfold the devil in the dark."

Mr. Smallwood said Canadians "should be stricken in the spirit" that French-speaking Canadians, 30 per cent of Canada's population, do not have the same opportunities in Canada as English-speaking Canadians.

Ontario Wants Flexibility

Not Percentage But Number To Decide Language Rights

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts says Ontario has gone as far as it can to meet demands for French - language rights outside Quebec.

His government has announced its intention to ensure equal opportunity for Ontario's French-speaking population, he said in an interview Monday night.

On behalf of Ontario, he "endorsed the principles and spirit" of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism earlier in the day at the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

He stopped just short of announcing that Ontario would become officially bilingual.

"We don't want the inflexibility that automatically comes with such a decision," he said. Ontario wanted the freedom it had been exercising all along to deal with problems as it sees fit.

The B and B commission recommended that language rights be extended to districts where 10 per cent of the population speaks French.

"Why an arbitrary 10 per cent?" the premier asked. "Why not nine or 12 per cent?"

Education minister William Davis, one of four Ontario delegates at the conference, said the determining factor should be the number, not the percentage, of people involved.

A city the size of Ottawa may be able to form "a viable education unit" with a French population of only one per cent. But another city might need 15 per cent to make it practical.

The Ontario government would base its decision to establish French-language secondary schools on the demand that exists, not a fixed percentage.

"It's easy to talk about a bilingual district but how do you define it?" Mr. Robarts asked.

He also said the federal government's proposed human rights charter raises the question: Who would declare a province bilingual—the province or the federal government?

The charter cannot be treated as a separate item by the conference because it also involves federal-provincial powers, Mr. Robarts said.

Robert Nixon, Ontario Liberal leader and a conference observer, endorsed Mr. Robarts' plans and said they were contained in "a first-rate speech."

Mr. Robarts said the provinces gave a sympathetic hearing to Quebec's pleas Monday for cultural and language rights across Canada.

"There was a thread of agreement in their speech," he said.

Is this alone enough to make the conference a success? he was asked.

"We think that's enough at this time," he replied.

PM Hopes for Second Parley Ere He Retires

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson indicated Monday there may be another federal-provincial constitutional conference before he retires in April.

Speaking to a reporter as he left the opening day of the current conference, Mr. Pearson said he is confident that it will make some progress towards constitutional change.

Then he added:

"I hope we can meet once more before I leave office." Mr. Pearson is due to retire soon after the Liberal leadership convention selects his successor April 6.

He agreed that the opening statements of the premiers did not indicate unanimity on constitutional issues. "But don't look for unanimity on fundamental matters the first day," he said.

Mr. Pearson said there still is good hope for agreement on constitutional procedures.

Not Quite an Antique

Wall Cracks Add to Decor

Demand for Antiques Knows No Season

By DONALD MacKENZIE
(Staff Reporter)

Maintaining that aged appearance may get difficult for the "Staffordshire What Knot" on Front St. if the "Magic Circle" program in Belleville gets going but so far it has been no problem for Mrs. Anne Bradshaw.

"Even the store is an antique," she said pointing to the walls where cracked plaster used to be.

"I like it this way," she smiled, "they should never have put plaster on those thick concrete walls anyway."

Mrs. Bradshaw is the proprietress of the only store on Front St. which intends to maintain the status quo and it is a good thing — her antique business is thriving.

Just because good antique furniture is very hard to find at the moment isn't the only reason the "What Knot's" antique stock is at a record low right now.

According to Mrs. Bradshaw antiques have been moving really well during the past year — there has been a special demand for Canadiana Pine antique furniture (made before Confederation). Naturally, the proprietress atrributes the demand to Centennial year.

Even with a low stock the store has good old antiques left. Everything from pictures to glasses, brass and silverware as well as furniture.

Anything made before 1830 is considered to be antique.

"There is sometimes an exception," Mrs. Bradshaw pointed out, "in the case of paintings."

Three 18th century "Empire Mahogany" pieces still grace the premises, along with old books and glassware. Mrs. Bradshaw attempts to find most of her antiques locally.

When the supply really gets bad, and it is getting worse all the time, she goes to other dealers and on occasion has taken a truck to the U.S. for antiques.

"There's a better supply and better antiques in the U.S. but you run into a problem at the border with the duty," she said sadly.

Although most of her antiques are English and Canadian Mrs. Bradshaw mentioned that the American antiques she brought from the U.S. during the summer moved as well or better than anything.

There's nothing like using what you sell and Mrs. Bradshaw makes good use of her own wares. . .her entire home is completely furnished in antique furniture with the exception of her children's bedrooms.

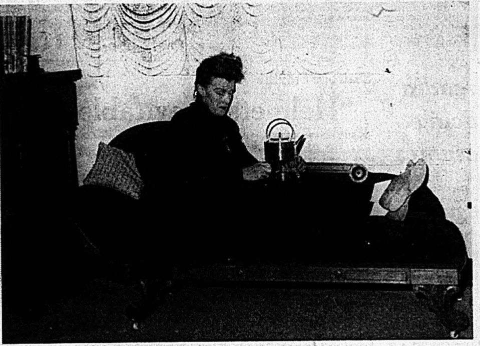
"They like the younger furniture," she said.

Apparently Mrs. Bradshaw's children's tastes are not completely indicative of all the younger folk. Antiques aren't confined to the antique generation and just as many young people patronize the "What Knot" as older people.

The trend towards furnishing new homes with old furniture could be one reason, and Mrs. Bradshaw said that many older citizens already have enough furniture.

"Quite a few of them prefer glass and silverware over furniture — it leaves the furniture to the young marrieds," she continued.

It just goes to prove that some things do improve with age.



Oldtimers Had It Good

They didn't spare the luxury in the old days and Mrs. Bradshaw still utilizes the comforts of her antique Cleopatra couch while cleaning an antique brass piece. She considers the couch to be one of her better pieces of furniture at the moment.

Antique - Inside and Out

The exterior of Mrs. Anne Bradshaw's antique store on Front Street still maintains that old world look. "The antique appearance is not just confined to the exterior either," said the proprietress, "the inside is the same."

Trenton Approves Two Sewer Projects

TRENTON — A Belleville construction firm's tender has been approved for large-scale sewer projects in two town areas.

Town council last night approved the Tatham Company's tender of $338,900 (lowest of three submitted) for construction of sewers on Dufferin and Bay Streets, and a Bay St. pumping station.

Councillors agreed to submit a routine query to consulting engineers Gore and Storrie concerning the total estimated cost of the projects — some $397,400.

The firm's estimate included stipulation for $21,000 for engineering design and general supervision, $20,000 in residential engineering fees, and $17,000 for miscellaneous land and other costs.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry told council the town can borrow two-thirds of the project's cost, 25 per cent of which is forgiven.

Mayor James MacDonald said the work should be underway as soon as possible to take advantage of a $10,000 winter work subsidy.

Ontario Water Resources Commission approval of the project is required before the 26-week job can be undertaken.

Loyalist Expects Enrolment Jump

Loyalist College may more than treble its initial enrolment next year.

Officials of the new community college are new expecting student registrations to total anywhere between 400 and 600 as Loyalist enters its second year of operation.

Basic problem posed by the expected increase is to expand classroom facilities.

Plans for construction of Loyalist's own campus are still in the basic organzational stage and the college is operating in temporary quarters at Centennial Secondary School.

Several accommodation proposals are before Education Minister W. J. Davis, college president J. K. Bradford said today.

"We have given the minister more than one alternative," he added.

Meantime, Loyalist has already been seeking staff to meet next year's expanded operations.

Advertisements in Toronto newspapers brought more than 60 replies by first mail, said Mr. Bradford. These are additional to applications already on file.

A wide range of courses were advertised, but many of these could be subject requirements for future years, he added, not indications of an immediate curriculum.

Lifeline Counsellors Graduate from Tough Training Course

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

Around the clock, time is suspended in a place that doesn't exist somewhere in Belleville.

This is the vital basis of the Lifeline venture.

Human problems know no time element—and those who seek relief by recounting their distress invariably crave anonymity.

Lifeline is patterned to both requisites.

Unpaced by time, its lay volunteers are on call 24 hours daily, staffing a personal problems listening post for any who care to call.

They remain nameless. Their working location is kept secret.

They promise no solutions. Lifeline, in the main, is a psychological telephone answering service.

"We don't want our people to be advice givers," says Lifeline's founder, Rev. William Lamb. "We want them to be creative listeners."

So far, the Holloway Street United Church pastor is satisfied Lifeline is providing a needed community service.

It has only been in operation three months; it still is struggling to put across its image.

But in that brief time, Lifeline has projected its message to slightly more than 100 citizens, each with problems that have compelled them to seek a friendly ear.

Lifeline originally was launched in Australia some years back. Its spread has been gradual — the Belleville organization is one of the few in North America.

However, it may soon gain much more attention. An American foundation had endowed it with $25,000 to spread its message.

Its service is simple: Anyone seeking to discuss a pressing problem need only dial its number.

The caller may remain anonymous — as do the counsellors at the Lifeline centre.

If the caller wishes further action the problem may be channelled to public or private sources of help.

But the task is complex — in the final analysis it all depends on the amateur counsellors.

There are 35 of them — the majority are women — graduates of a months-long course inaugurated by Mr. Lamb in Spring last year.

The course is demanding, including lectures by visiting sociologists, group discussions, homework. It is highly selective.

"We find we average about a 50 per cent drop out," reveals Mr. Lamb. "In other words, the course screens people carefully.

They began work in early October after an interested donor gave Lifeline a rent-free basement room. It's now equipped with the necessities of a 24-hour vigil — a camp cot, even a kitchen sink.

There are other donors. Service clubs, church groups, private individuals help pay the cost of services, advertising, the telephone.

The telephone is the room's vital centrepiece.

"Some days we get two or three calls, some days none," says Mr. Lamb.

He won't discuss the nature of the calls. Anonymity, is the operative word of Lifeline.

It's the operations guarantee of success, the young clergyman feels.

"Persons can hang up whenever they want to. They can remain unknown if they want."

This is where Lifeline may fill a social slot, he feels, since there are times when the professional counsellor or social agency may be deliberately ignored.

"I think it's an asset in that it's non-professional," claims the founder. "It's a layman to layman sort of thing. These are just ordinary people in Lifeline — some of them who have had problems of their own. They can identify with their callers."

"The thing we often find is that a person would sooner call an anonymous thing than go directly and talk to somebody they may know."

"We all tend to be defensive — people wear this defensiveness even towards their own (church) minister," says the pastor.

But Lifeline is not necessarily anchored in a twilight zone of social response.

It's lay counsellors are versed in the availability of local social services. They can channel a problem, if desired, to the proper agency.

It has a "backup" group of 15 willing to follow a call to its source with further advice if the caller requests.

But some needs already have come to light through Lifeline, believes the pastor.

Notable among these, he feels, is a financial counselling service.

Two people experienced in the field already work with Lifeline.

"But," says Mr. Lamb, "this is a real problem in this community. We average a loan agency for every 1,000 population. It's not economically prosperous and these two factors combine to make this a real problem (for families)."

Lifeline is still in its early stage.

Its 35 originals now are being followed by a second line of 25 volunteers now studying as counsellors.

And the Pastor still is concerned with projecting the service's "trustworthy image."

"Mind you, I'm sure there'll be mental blocks against us too," he admits. "But it's a further step in the right direction.

"We're seeing laymen getting up off their pews and finding a ministry of caring."

Anonymity Is the Key

The location of this room is a closely-guarded secret. Its tenants remain anonymous. It's the centre of Lifeline operations, a telephone answering service for distressed. But much of its appeal depends on its anonymity, stresses Rev. William Lamb, here in discussion with a Lifeline counsellor.

Pinch Hitting

By Garry Alexander

The Mo-Hawks looked much better, especially conditioning-wise, when this writer saw them Sunday than they did any time during the first half of the schedule.

Coach Floyd Crawford had nothing but praise for his charges, despite the 4-3 overtime loss. "These boys want that playoff spot and they are proving it on the ice. With a break or two we would have won today and Friday but now we'll just have to do it in these last four games," he said. Floyd also said he felt "Shaker" Baker played his best game of the season Sunday and "deserved at least two goals".

Meanwhile, manager Bob Temple and treasurer Ken Soden were beaming over the big fan turnout for Sunday hockey. It was 2,137 paid but our guess is at least 2,500 in all. Temple will be gunning for Sunday playoff games once — or if — the club clinches that spot.

Meanwhile, Friday promises to be another hot one with those nasty Aces of Kingston winding up the Mo-Hawks' home schedule.

Aside from the fact that the absence of left-winger Minnie Menard from the Mo-Hawk lineup for any great length of time can't help but weaken the club's scoring punch, the seriousness of any eye injury causes great concern.

Minnie was second on the club in points with 33 and tops in goals with 22 when he suffered the injury from an accidental high stick in a rather pointless exhibition game in Napanee last week. Few clubs, with playoffs three short weeks away and a spot in said playoffs still not secure, would have played such a game.

Coach Floyd Crawford tells us that the player whose stick hit Menard "had his back toward our end of the ice. Minnie skated in to check him and could have nailed him good but because it was just an exhibition, he eased up and arrived just in time to catch the stick in the eye as the Napanee player followed through on his backhand. It was one of those unfortunate things".

The local sports fraternity joins the Menard family and the Mo-Hawks in hoping the injury is not of a serious nature.

Here's to a speedy — and complete — recovery.

Apparently at least one veteran of the Belleville Commercial Softball League misunderstood our meaning when we wrote: "If the Commercial opens up, as it likely will if senior ball continues to slip here, it would be wise to make sure the cream of the senior players is evenly distributed to maintain the balance and rivalry on which the league thrives," in a softball column last week.

We were not advocating that the Commercial SHOULD allow senior players, only that IF it does, steps should be taken to keep the league well balanced. For example: Would it not be ridiculous to allow a team which already has Doug Ellis pitching for it to pick up Bob Ethier and Clair Leahy, plus Larry Mavety, Ralph Plane and Bob Moon, IF the door is thrown open?

Regardless of the sport or the calibre of the players, competition is the key to success.

If this writer had his "druthers," there would be a strong district senior league and a good Commercial loop, with six to eight teams in each.

No matter what eventually happens, our concern will remain for the overall sports picture, not for any one team or league. O.K. Bob?

Trenton junior hockey stars, Al Ferguson and Andy Teeple, are having great seasons while helping keep Brockville near the top in the Central Junior "A" circuit.

Ferguson was leading the league in scoring with 30 goals and 32 assists in the first 28 games. Teeple was third with 51 points including 22 goals. The third man on their line, Larry Riley, was close behind with a 24-20 -44 mark.

The Mo-Hawks would do well to contact Ferguson and Teeple re their plans for next season, before other teams beat them to the punch.

Al Rump, the hard-working president of the Departmental Softball League, has been a recent patient in the hospital here and friends are hoping to see him well and back in the harness quickly . . . Despite his 24 goals at this writing, Norm Ullman is having a bad season along with many of his mates, according to Detroit Red Wings. Ullman is charged with not playing his usual forechecking style and outside of Howe, none of the Wings are hitting, says club brass . . . Umpire Al Kelleher is rumored to have accepted the position of coach of the senior baseball Lombanks for this coming season.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland Athletics announced Monday the signing of six pitchers to 1968 contracts with the American League club. The list was headed by right-hander Chuck Dobson. Others were John Odom, reliever Ken Sandors, Mike Olivo, Don Buschorn and Rick Johnson.

NHL Scoring — Bathgate Tops In West

Gordie Howe Threatens Hull, Mikita

MONTREAL (CP) — While centre Stan Mikita and left winger Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks continue to play tic-tac-toe atop the scoring race, statistics released by the National Hockey League today show an old familiar name edging quietly up the ladder.

Gordie Howe, the 22-season veteran right winger of Detroit Red Wings, led all scorers last week with eight points to move into third place behind the Chicago pair.

Howe, who scored the 675 regular-season goal of his career Sunday, has 26 goals this season and 55 points—five fewer than Mikita and four fewer than Hull, who still leads in goals with 36.

The 39-year-old Howe, who owns nearly all the career records in the NHL, now has 1,556 points in 1,449 regular season games.

Howe, who has won the scoring championship a record six times, picked up four goals and four assists in Detroit's three games last week.

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins is currently in fourth spot with 54 points, one behind Howe and two ahead of another Detroit veteran, Alex Delvecchio. Delvecchio's total of 52 includes a league-leading 36 assists.

GORDIE HOWE

Fred Stanfield of Boston is sixth with 50 points, followed by Ken Wharram of Chicago with 49. A pair of New York Rangers—Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle—are tied for eighth place with 48 points, one more than left winger John Bucyk of Boston.

John McKenzie, right winger on the Stanfield-Bucyk combo, just misses the top 10 this week with 46 points—one less than Bucyk.

Top scorer in the west division is veteran Andy Bathgate of Pittsburgh Penguins. Bathgate has 43 points and holds down 16th place. Ray Cullen of Minnesota North Stars is one point behind Bathgate, along with Lou Angotti of Philadelphia Flyers.

Rookie goaltender Rogatien Vachon's fine play for Montreal Canadiens enable him and team-mate Lorne Worsley to take over the lead in the goaltending averages with a combined mark of 2.14. Les Binkley of Pittsburgh and Ed Giacomin of New York joined Minnesota's Cesare Maniago as shutout leaders with five each.

Ted Green of Boston is the individual penalty leader with 109 minutes, two minutes more than Noel Picard of St. Louis Blues and four minutes more than Don Awrey, another Boston defenceman.

The Bruins lead the team totals with 722 minutes in penalties.

Arcadia Racing Resumes

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Horse racing is to resume at Santa Anita race track Wednesday following settlement of a contract dispute that has kept the Arcadia track idle since last Friday.

Horse owners and track officials met Monday night and initialed terms of a contract that would raise the purse level to 43 per cent of parimutuel income. Purses in stake races, however, remain unchanged.

Members of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association came down from a demand that the purse level be raised to 47 per cent.

National Lacrosse League

DETROIT (AP) — Nine teams, six of them Canadian entries, were named Monday as franchise holders for a new National Lacrosse League to begin competition this spring.

Canadian franchises were awarded to Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Peterborough, Victoria and Vancouver. Detroit, Portland, Ore., and Seattle are the other entries.

Each team will play 40 games, 20 at home.

The Detroit entry will be made up primarily of the Oshawa Green Gaels, Canada's top amateur team, including Gaylord Powless, often rated the finest all-around player in the game.

Bruce Norris, president of the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, will serve as president of the Detroit entry. Jim Bishop, coach of the Green Gales, will serve as general manager and coach.

College Scoring Battle

LONDON Ont. (CP) — With three weeks left in the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association hockey race, the battle for scoring honors continues to be a close one.

Murray Stroud of the University of Toronto holds a slim one-point margin over teammate Bob McClelland as the teams head down the stretch.

Stroud has 29 points made up of eight goals and 21 assists while McClelland has picked up 12 goals and 16 assists for 28 points.

Right on their heels is McMaster's Chuck Cippola who has 25 points and Paul Laurent of Toronto with 24.

Two other Toronto players are among the top 10 scorers. Ward Passi has 22 points for fifth place while Brian Jones is deadlocked with Waterloo's Terry Cooke and Andre Morel of Laval for eighth place.

"Helmets Inevitable In NHL"!

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hockey helmets are like car safety belts—easy to snap on but infrequently used.

A survey in Ontario by The Canadian Press shows that despite the death during a game three weeks ago of a National Hockey League player, who did not wear a helmet, most players in the province are still reluctant to wear the protective head gear.

The reasons vary from the claim they are too hot, or too cumbersome, or hamper scoring ability.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association makes helmets mandatory for all players under 20 years of age—the junior level—but excludes those in the same age bracket who play in Junior A leagues.

Since Bill Masterton, 29, of the NHL's Minnesota North Stars, died of head injuries, three Ontario teams have made the helmets compulsory. The teams are Toronto Marlboros, Niagara Falls Flyers and Peterborough Petes, all of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Coaches and managers of other Ontario Junior A teams and senior clubs have left the decision to the players.

Helmets are mandatory in other Ontario leagues, including intercollegiate and the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Fourteen players of Belleville Mo-Hawks of the OHA senior series are in favor of helmets. But nine of them say nevertheless, they would not wear one.

Wives have influenced some players. The senior OHA Kingston Aces wore helmets when they toured Europe recently and have kept them.

Coach Danny McLeod said the team did not hear about Masterton's death until it returned to Canada.

"That's when the pressure was exerted from wives to keep wearing helmets."

A member of another OHA senior team, Marcel Labelle of Oakville Oaks, was wearing a helmet when he crashed into the boards and received a deep head cut. The mishap occurred early this season and Labelle has not returned to action.

Two other members of the team tried the helmets immediately after Masterton's death. Both discarded them after the first period.

In Minto, N.B., another player who was wearing a helmet died of a brain hemorrhage after falling to the ice. An inquest into the death of Ronald Ryan, 16, is scheduled for Feb. 13.

Stafford Smythe, president of Maple Leaf Gardens, sponsors of the Toronto Marlboro Juniors, said: "Helmets are inevitable at the NHL level so our kids might as well get used to them.

"I do not know how soon they will become compulsory in the NHL but I am prepared to support a motion that will put such a rule in the books."

NOHA commissioner Jim Aspin said: "Our league adopted the helmets four years ago and we tried to get the CAHA to make it compulsory in all hockey across the country."

Pollock, Francis

All Stars; East Versus West

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam Pollock, jovial general manager of Montreal Canadiens, has an idea to mollify critics of the National League's mid-season all-star game.

"I'm going to suggest to the league," Pollock said Monday, "that the all-star break be extended to five or six days. That way all the players won't have to rush from the all-star game into a regular game the next night."

Montreal coach Toe Blake, who handled the all-stars against Toronto Maple Leafs last month, had been criticized by Chicago's Billy Reay for using Black Hawk stars Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita too much.

"The only reason he squawked," said Emile Francis, manager-coach of New York Rangers, "was that his team got beat the next night. If they had won, you wouldn't have heard a peep out of him."

"It's a problem," Pollock continued. "And remember, now they want to rotate the game from city to city and that could mean having a guy play an all-star game in Los Angeles one night and a regular game maybe in Montreal the next."

Under the present system, the all-stars play the Stanley Cup champions on a Tuesday night and regular scheduling is resumed the next night.

"It's only common sense to have the kind of layoff Sam suggests," said Francis. "It will be better for the players and the game."

Francis and Pollock agree on another all-star innovation as well. Both believe the game should be an East-West affair with the best players in the old division facing the best in the expansion division.

Share Tops In Central Score Race

DETROIT (CP) — Centre Jim Lorentz of Oklahoma City Blazers and Len Haley, right winger for Tulsa Oilers, share top honors in the Central Professional Hockey League scoring race with 53 points each.

Haley's teammate with the Oilers, Ron Ward, a native of Cornwall, Ont., is one point behind the co-leaders. Rick McCann of Fort Worth Wings is in fourth place.

Andre Hinse of Tulsa is the top goal-getter with 26 goals in 47 games. McCann's 38 assists makes him the leading playmaker.

Goalie Al Smith of Tulsa tops the goalies with a 2.74 goals-against average.

92 Entries In Annual Car Rally

TORONTO (CP) — Ninety-two cars are due to leave here Friday night to start the 16th annual Canadian Winter Rally. They will attempt to cover 1,200 miles, most of it on back roads through Ontario and Quebec by Sunday night.

After a 10-hour stop in Ottawa Saturday, the cars will leave on a 500-mile, non-stop trip through Quebec and back into Ontario, arriving at Napanee, 20 miles west of Kingston, 15 hours later. From there, the cars return to the finish line in Toronto.

Pre-Games Disputes Flare At Grenoble; Get Under Way Today

GRENOBLE (CP) — President de Gaulle today opens the 10th Winter Olympic Games with elaborate and spectacular ceremony which includes a parade of more than 1,500 athletes and team officials.

Before any athlete went into competition the Games had been rent by problems and acrimony.

The entrances to the 60,000-seat stadium built for the opening ceremonies were opened four hours in advance of the ceremonies, which were to begin with President de Gaulle's arrival at 9 a.m EST.

Today's Olympic competition is limited to hockey, with Canada's national team meeting West Germany, regarded as one of the weaker squads in the eight-team championship series.

Today's schedule (times EST):

11.30 a.m. — Czechoslovakia vs. U.S.A.

3 p.m.—Canada vs. West Germany

3 p.m.—Russia vs. Finland

A discordant note was struck Monday by the Russians, who called more than 100 sports reporters to a press conference and used the occasion to denounce the United States for "aggression" in Vietnam.

Yuri Machin, president of the central committee of Soviet sports federations, said:

"The Soviet sportsmen are profoundly disgusted by the American aggression in Vietnam."

A United States reporter asked whether it was "right and proper" to introduce political matters at a press conference on sport.

"Questions of peace and war are not only political questions," Machin replied. "They are of vital importance to everyone, particularly in the world of sport."

In one of several ski accidents Monday, Rod Hebron, 25, received injuries which may force him out of downhill competition. The Vernon, B.C., skier suffered a bruised shoulder, arm and hand. His place will be taken by Scott Henderson, 24, of Banff, Alta., if a change in the lineup is necessary.

The downhill ski racing will start Thursday. In the draw announced Monday, Hebron was picked to start 22nd. Peter Duncan of Mont Tremblant, Que., was drawn to start 25th and Gerry Rinaldi of Kimberley, B.C., to start 27th.

U.S. skier Robin Morning, 20, had her leg broken in two places in another training accident, and will have the leg in a cast for three or four months.

In preparation for the seven-game Olympic hockey grind, the Canadian national team held a stiff hour-long practice Monday. Manager-coach Jackie McLeod concentrated on his defensive problems.

Ken Broderick and Wayne Stephenson shared the netminding duties, with McLeod trying to sharpen their glove and stick work on long shots. Both have shown weakness on long drives in recent games, the United States sinking three of them in losing to the Canadians 6-5 last Saturday in Geneva.

Ted Hargreaves, normally a left winger, was moved to defence as a partner to Marshall Johnston. The move was made by McLeod because of the absence in Canada of defenceman Gary Begg, out with a knee injury.

Underdog To Frazier

Big Buster Is Unhappy

NEW YORK (AP) — If Buster Mathis beat Joe Frazier twice in the amateurs, why is he a 2-to-1 underdog in a battle of undefeated pros for New York's version of the world heavyweight boxing crown?

That is the question that is puzzling Mathis these days as he prepares for the March 4 match with Frazier as part of an unusual title doubleheader on the first boxing show at the new Madison Square Garden.

"I learn something new every time I fight," said Mathis who has trained down from a blubbery 310 in 1964 to a mere 250 pounds. "People say Frazier has been fighting good opponents. I don't see it that way. . . .

"This time I'll fight him a lot different. He's more confident now and he is going to make a lot more mistakes. If he makes mistakes I'll knock him out."

"I don't think he beat me at all," said Frazier, in town from training camp.

"Everybody talks about his speed. Anybody can run. We're not in a track meet. This will be no running, hugging and holding. I keep on coming."

Bill Leslie Guelph U. Cage Star

Bill Leslie, former basketball star for Quinte High School, is now playing for the University of Guelph Gryphons. Bill is enrolled in the second year of a Bachelor of Arts program and is also in his second year as a Gryphon.

The 6' 1" 185 pound forward, of 30 North Park Street, played five years of high school ball under the direction of coach Jack Sisson, as well as YMCA and league ball.

At Guelph, he is one of the starting forwards and is effective as a rebounder and shooter.

He is averaging over seven points a game and has helped greatly with his defensive play.

Flyers Lead Scorers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tom Webster and his Niagara Falls Flyers' linemates are the class of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series despite the fact the team is tied for second place in the standings.

Webster picked up two assists in Sunday's 7-3 loss to Kitchener Rangers to open up an 11-point lead in the individual scoring race and together with centre Gary Swain and left winger Don Tannahill brought the line's goal output to 101.

Webster has 38 goals and 57 assists for 95 points. With five weeks left in the regular season he has a good chance to break the record set last year by former teammate Derek Sanderson, now with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Sanderson finished the 48-game season with 101 points on 41 goals and 60 assists. This year, six extra games were added to the schedule and Webster has 10 games left to play.

Swain scored two goals last week to bring his total to 37 goals and 47 assists for 84 points, five ahead of Richie Bayes of Toronto Marlboros. Tannahill is tied for seventh place with 26 goals and 40 assists for 66 points.

Webster also leads in the assault department with 57 but shares the goal-getting honors with Dan Lewson of Hamilton Red Wings at 38.

Minor Hockey

Two games were played in BMHA Juvenile division last night.

In the first, the Tigers topped O.S.D. 6-3, as G. Sero led the way with two goals. Other Tiger scorers were L. Rupert, D. Holdcroft, T. Ford and B. Curtain. N. Frappier scored twice for O.S.D. and M. Perry counted the other marker.

In the other Juvenile clash, Melrose blanked Amodeo's Aces 2-0, with Douug Botting in the Melrose nets for the shutout. G. Hopkins and J. McLaughlin were the goal-scorers.

Stanley Cup

"He Who Laughs Last..."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A titter of laughter rippled through the National Hockey League last year when officials announced that the winner of the expanded Western Division would meet the winner of the established Eastern Division in the Stanley Cup final series.

"No contest," snorted the critics.

But coach Red Sullivan didn't share in the laughter. And he believes that now he and his Pittsburgh Penguins are helping prove the critics wrong.

Saturday night the Penguins came from behind to tie the Stanley Cup champion Toronto Maple Leafs 3-3 and become the first expansion team to take a season's series from an established team.

Pittsburgh won two games, lost one and tied one with the Leafs.

"I've always said the playoffs would be no cakewalk for the East," Sullivan said Monday. "Whoever is lucky enough to get into the finals from our division is going to have a pretty good hockey team."

The Penguins must move out of fifth place in the West to get into the Stanley Cup playoffs. But so far they've fared almost as well against the old teams as the new. Pittsburgh is 6-10-2 against the East and 12-14-6 in their own division.

Sullivan says Pittsburgh has played harder all year against the established teams.

Sullivan gave goalie Les Binkley much of the credit for preserving the tie against Toronto.

Binkley, a 32-year-old rookie with five shutouts to his credit, stopped 34 shots, including a point-blank shot by Toronto's Murray Oliver on a breakaway.

Sullivan said he wouldn't hesitate to use Binkley for four straight games during the playoffs.

"Anything can happen in a short series," said Sullivan. "But right now I'm concentrating on getting this club into the playoffs."

CFB Championship

Flyers Eye Title!

TRENTON (Special) — CFB Trenton Flyers of the OHA Eastern Ontario Intermediate Hockey League may not win a "civvy" championship but they've taken their first zoom toward a national services title.

They are winners of the CFB Zone Five championship and have qualified for the national championship where the winners of eight zones across the country meet in an elimination series.

Zone Five includes base hockey teams from London, Clinton, Toronto, Borden and Trenton. It stretches from Windsor to the Quebec border excluding the Ottawa area.

The Flyers entered the finals after disposing of the London entry by a 16-7 score.

They tangled with the Borden club in the final taking over after a 1-1 first period to win 7-2.

They were presented with the Zone Championship trophy and individual desk sets.

The national championship will be held at CFB Petawawa beginning February 27th.

The Flyers will keep in shape by playing their regular schedule OHA games every Thursday night in the Trenton Community Gardens.

Peterborough Badminton Club

Nearly Sweeps Tournament

The Peterborough Badminton Club took the lion's share of major honors at the Central Ontario Badminton Association "B" Tournament in the Armories here Saturday.

Members won the men's doubles, mixed doubles, the women's doubles consolation sweeping all three events in the mixed doubles.

The tournament attracted over 100 players from Whitby, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Trenton and their hosts the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club.

With his wife Betty he won the mixed doubles and teamed with Dave Elmsley to capture the men's doubles. Mrs. Ownsworth played with Bea Moore of Napanee to reach the finals in the women's doubles.

Finalists in the men's doubles were Mario Cicco and Bill Usher, Bowmanville. Paul Fraser and Ken Lubitz, Peterborough took the consolation.

Long Green For Packers!

NEW YORK (AP) — Green Bay Packers received $7,950.96 each and Dallas Cowboys $5,878.90 for full shares of the Dec. 31 National Football League championship game.

Official receipts, announced today by Art Modell, NFL president, sent the Packers' post-season pay close to $25,000 a man.

They got $15,000 for winning the Super Bowl game, plus a day's pay (1-14 of their season salary) for beating Los Angeles Rams in the divisional playoff, unofficially estimated at about $1,500. They also will get a day's pay for next summer's college all-star game in Chicago.

Green Bay voted 51 shares and Dallas 45 shares for the game won by the Packers 21-17 in 13-below zero weather. The winning share was the third highest in league history, exceeded by Green Bay's $9,813.63 in 1966 and Cleveland Browns' $8,052 in 1964.

Dallas' share was the second best for losers, topped only by the $6,527.85 they collected last year.

Gross receipts were $2,582,578, including $2,000,000 for television and radio rights.

The player pool, representing 70 per cent of the net, came to $864,374.97. The league allocates $100,000 to second-place teams and $75,000 for third place in the Eastern and Western conference.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

To Your Good Health

Widow's TV Dinner Diet Okay

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a widow but by pinching pennies I get along. I find it much more economical to buy TV dinners instead of buying all the ingredients for a meal myself.

I have frozen juice and some fresh fruit every day, tomatoes and lettuce, often eggs and cottage cheese and cold cuts.

This arrangement is very satisfactory to me, but is it good for me? Do I get enough vitamins?—Mrs. A. D.E.

With your fruit, juices and salads you probably are getting enough vitamins — the fruit and juices providing a necessary daily intake of Vitamin C.

You do not mention breakfast cereal, but having such a dish daily will improve your Vitamin B intake. Besides, most bread sold commercially is enriched with added Vitamin B.

The prepared TV dinners vary considerably in meat content, which must be considered in judging your diet, but I note your mention of eggs and cold cuts, which means that you are getting additional protein — which is necessary.

I would say that you have worked out a reasonable diet pattern, especially since you are careful to get your fruits and salads every day. Frozen juices contain plenty of Vitamin C.

Working other salad vegetables into your salads as your grocery shopping permits is a safeguard to insure trace minerals.

Cottage cheese is a good treating it with a prescription source of calcium, often neglected by older people who prepare meals only for themselves. I would hope that you also get a glass or two of milk daily, whether on cereal or in other form — but I do believe that you have worked things out very well — far better than some people who, as they grow older, forget that they still need a balanced diet for good health.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Please send your booklet on varicose veins for which I enclose 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

What are the chances of an ulcerated vein healing? Mine developed a month before my last child was born. She will soon be two, and I am still salve. — Mrs. L. H.

This is one of the aspects of varicose veins which I keep trying to make clear. Too many people think the main purpose is stripping or removing varicose veins is for the sake of appearance.

Well, that's a good reason, but not the only one. Varicosity means that circulation is very sluggish in these distended veins. Sluggish circulation means, automatically, that ulcers or sores will not heal as readily as they would with brisk circulation.

When you have been struggling along with salves for two years, and still haven't healed the ulcer, it's time to think of getting at the basis of the problem instead of merely trying to treat the surface of the problem.

Read the booklet carefully, and then discuss with your physician the advisability of having those clogged veins removed.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there a Vitamin E? Have heard it helps circulation. — Mrs. E. A. J.

Yes, there is such a vitamin, but I have seen no evidence that it improves circulation, despite claims to that effect — which do not seem to be supported.

Principal value (in animal experiments) seems to involve fertility, but this does not appear to hold true for human beings. From all I have been able to learn, the human diet contains ample Vitamin E, and taking any more of it is just a waste of the vitamins.

A Saga Of Manchester

Mighty Matt Of The United

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — Manchester United, currently the top team in England's professional soccer league, takes time out today to commemorate the grim beginning of what has been a decade-long saga of sports resilience.

On Feb. 6, 1958, eight Manchester players died when a plane carrying the squad crashed on takeoff from Munich, West Germany.

"It will take 10 years for us to get back, lad, but we'll do it," was how one of the survivors, manager Matt Busby, tried cheering up a dazed player as both fought for life in a hospital hours after the disaster.

The remnants of their club, bolstered by men signed from other teams in the English Football Leaggue, staggered through to the season's end.

Busby, meantime, pledged that he would emerge from his oxygen tent and rebuild the stricken team.

"I realized that the whole point of life and living is to build and create," he says.

He started his monumental job in the 1958-59 season. Working for him were a first-rate scouting system, geared to spotting youthful talent, and a solid bank accocnt.

But early experiences on the field proved that the gaps left by such dead stars as Duncan Edwards were cruelly large.

By the early 1960s, however, Busby's team was sufficiently resurgent to be battling again for top league rankings.

In 1963, Manchester won a competition separate from the league championship but packed with even flashier appeal—the Football Association Cup.

In 1964-65, Manchester captured the league cup, a feat it repeated last year.

Today, with the current nine-month season more than half over, Busby's club sports a three-point margin over its nearest rival, Leeds United, in the First Division standings.

"Mighty Matt has proved he's great," one of the 1958 crash survivors enthused in summing up the achievements of a decade.

Sealing Busby's 10 years of triumph was last weekend's Manchester United victory over a bitter league opponent, Tottenham Hotspur, with Manchester star Bobby Charlton booting home a last-minute goal for the 2-1 victory.

Theatrical Row in LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the curtain falls at the Warner Playhouse, the police come and haul Jean Harlow and Billy the Kid off to jail almost every night.

Not the real Billy or Jean, of course, but two young actors who portray them in a sexy play which is causing Los Angeles' biggest theatrical censorship row in a quarter century.

The play is The Beard, and its two-member cast and producer have been arrested nine times since it opened two weeks ago. They have posted $25,000 in bail and continue to keep paying $625 each for release each night.

On each arrest they pay the bail in cash, reported to be from box office receipts, police vice officers say.

"We are going to keep on performing as long as there is life and spirit and money," says producer Robert Barrows, 42.

Meanwhile, a U.S. district judge ruled Monday that there are "serious constitutional question" involved in the continuing arrests. He has ordered a three-judge tribunal to convene Friday to rule on the matter.

Student Delivered To Friendly Barber

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Eighteen students at Bishop Brady Roman Catholic high school who ignored an ultimatum to get haircuts were delivered aboard a school bus to a barbershop Monday.

The students accepted the forced haircuts with good-natured grumbling. "I didn't really think he would do it," said one somewhat dazed student while the barber clipped away at the bangs hanging over his eyes.

The "he" in this case is Rev. Norman Limoges, school administrator, who had warned the male students Friday to get their hair cut or face a mandatory visit to the barber.

The students paid for their own haircuts and were allowed to tell the barbers how they wanted it cut, but Father Limoges said "the agreement was that if the haircut wasn't satisfactory they would go back for a second one and I would pay."

He did not have to pay for any haircuts.

Women's Curling

Dryden Rink Favored

KINGSTON (CP) — The Ontario women's curling championship for 1968 could be all wrapped up by lunch time if Peggy Wherrett of Dryden plays the way she has been.

The winner of her first two matches, Mrs. Wherrett was to play Grace Saint of Kingston in the morning fourth round.

The champions advance to the Canadian championship at Winnipeg Feb. 26-March 2.

Following the opening three rounds Monday, Mrs. Wherrett had two victories, Mrs. Saint a win and a loss and the Ricki Mathew rink from Timmins two losses.

In Monday's action, Mrs. Wherrett won 8-5 from Mrs. Mathew in the evening after scoring a 10-8 extra-end victory over Mrs. Saint earlier. Mrs. Saint won her match with Mrs. Mathew 9-5.

The three-rink double round-robin competition continues with a fifth round starting at 2:30 p.m. today matching Mrs. Saint and Mrs. Mathew. It concludes Wednesday.

Dennis Weaver of Gunsmoke Scoring Big in Gentle Ben

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The wise crowd figured Dennis Weaver was out of his mind to abandon Gunsmoke when it seemed destined to go on forever. They were even more convinced when Weaver's own starring series bombed.

The slender Missourian now can enjoy the last laugh. His new series, Gentle Ben, has scored higher in the ratings than any other freshman show of the 1967-68 season.

Of course the success has its drawbacks. He has to share the billing with a large black bear, or rather, four of them. And he is required to work eight months of the year in Florida while his home and family are in California.

"But there's no such thing as the perfect job," he says. "If you can find a job that is 75-per-cent favorable, you're lucky.

"And I've been lucky."

Weaver appeared on the stage in Come Back, Little Sheba and in the film. The Bridges at Toko-Ri before striking it rich as the gimpy Chester to Jim Arness' Matt Dillon in Gunsmoke. After seven years of the series, the limitations of the role made him restless. He played two more years of limited appearances, then cut out.

"I've never had any regrets," he says. "Obviously Gunsmoke wasn't the perfect job for me.

"I don't think it is for the other cast members, either. Then why do they stay? I suppose the attraction to the series is stronger than the urge to pull away. I'm sure they enjoy the security and may find some creative challenge in keeping their roles alive. And they don't have to face the alternative of what to do if they leave the show."

What Weaver did was to acquire his own series a couple of seasons ago. It was called Kentucky Jones, and it bounced off NBC after one season.

Gentle Ben had better luck. Although the official word has not yet been sent down from the upper reaches of CBS, a second season seems a certainty. That means Weaver will be returning to Florida around March 1, having enjoyed a two-month breather at home.

Weaver will be in the swamps of Florida, playing nursemaid to a bear.

"Fortunately we get along well together," he said. "Anything he wants, I give him.

"But he's actually a very agreeable, tame and loving animal. He cries a little when he has to do something he doesn't want to. But you can't blame him. You'd cry, too, if you had to do all that work in muggy weather while wearing a big fur coat."

Weaver was speaking of the lead bear, but there are also three others Bens—two that will pull wagons and do other stunts, and another that performs all the swimming.

Constant Exposure of Series Becomes Bore to TV Viewers

NEW YORK (AP)—There is something curious about the way last season's television hit suddenly turns into this season's great big yawn.

The distinctive style that made the show seem so fresh and novel suddenly seems as phony as a three-dollar toupee after constant exposure for perhaps a year, maybe longer.

Some wear and tear is inevitable. It is impossible for the fans who tune in weekly about 30 times a year to ignore the devices used, or to fail to see plot bones as clearly as if shown in an x-ray.

Perhaps NBC's I Spy which started out three seasons back with a crisp, funny and new approach to the secret agent business, has been trapped by its own jauntiness.

In Monday night's episode, Robert Culp and Bill Cosby were their usual fun-loving selves even though hunting a killer, constantly ducking bullets and under arrest for murder. Somehow, the old charm is lacking. After getting accustomed to their frolicsome dialogue over the seasons, it has suddenly become less amusing and more artificial. Maybe the actors are getting a bit weary of their roles, too.

What started two seasons ago as a campy put-on called Batman, today has become a self-consciously cute bore. The pretentious use of the cliche, once so droll, begins to be an irritant once a point of surfeit is reached.

The result is that Batman has dropped in the ratings and its producer announced recently that it will be among the missing on ABC next season.

Dragnet is still another program more notable for its distinctive style than for the content of its stories. And, after a time, that style can make the viewer downright restless.

Felony Squad another Monday night series, now is in its second season, and does not have much of a style of its own. But star Howard Duff's portrait of a police officer is almost its signature. He plays the cop as a man with a trigger temper constantly on the verge of going off. In the most recent episode, he was busy tracking down man holding a girl for ransom. He seemed more angry at the girl's father than he was at the heavy, and thus the story seemed a bit out of balance.

Mersey Beat Metamorphosed Into Julie Andrews on Hi-Fi

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — It was as much of a shock as finding a pinstriped stockbroker at a hippies' love-in.

There we were, a trio of eager Commonwealth reporters, combing the back streets of Liverpool in search of the Mersey beat; some authentic sleazy basement cave where we might find a sound to rock the world in tomorrow's pop charts.

Directed by a helpful Liverpudlian youth who recommended the Chequers as "different," we found our way to an ill-lit, cobbled lane lined with warehouses. A red lamp cast a sinister glow over the black door in the blank-faced building.

We rapped on the door. It opened a crack, speakeasy-style—and our ears quivered as down the stairs and into the dockland night floated the dulcet, debutante tones of Julie Andrews trilling the title song from Thoroughly Modern Millie.

Things certainly ain't what they used to be in the beat clubs at Liverpool. Wall-to-wall carpets, ornamental ironwork around the bar and soft romantic lighting give the visitor the feeling he might be anywhere from Chelsea to Park Avenue—anywhere except the boisterous Lancashire port that revolutionized pop music only six years ago.

Even the Mersey beat seems to have disappeared into the murky river that gave it its name. At the Chequers, Julie Andrews on the hi-fi was followed by the Hillsiders, a close-cropped, country-and-western trio beating out chunky rhythm straight from Nashville, Tenn., and a haunting folk-song by Canadian Gordon Lightfoot.

The customers, nattily-dressed men in their 20s and girls in conservative mini-dresses, sipped their drinks sedately on black leather banquettes and danced with an absorbed and precise footwork on a floor of colored glass, lit from beneath. The lights over the dance-floor were switched off from time to time, just like any college hop of 20 years ago.

Only the rough, raw whisky tasting like kerosene reminded us where we were.

Earlier that evening, we paid the obligatory visit to the shrine of British pop music. In Matthew Street, a dark, narrow back alley smelling of rotting oranges, the neon sign proudly proclaims the Cavern Club, "where it all began," and boasts "The Beatles played here 22 times."

The Cavern, too, has moved up in the world since its most famous sons became idols of the Establishment and were decorated for services to exports. Carpet cushions are the once-bare stone floor and a chi-chi bar has been installed on the ground floor, together with a tinselly souvenir store.

Down in the vault brick cellar, narrow as a railway tunnel and looking appropriately like a cryot, the holy of holies has been left much as it was. Now only open at weekends, it was deserted that Tuesday night, and a dank chill crept out of the whitewashed walls where some say slaves were chained in the days of Liverpool's infamous trade in humanity.

It was hard to imagine what it must have been like six or seven years ago, before the rocket went up, with 750 youngsters packed into that smoky tunnel screaming in ecstasy as the brand-new knockout beat of Please, Please Me and She Loves Me, yeah, yeah, yeah, came pounding from the tiny wooden stage with the two footlights.

That stage—not the original, which was chopped into six-inch lengths and sold for charity some years ago—shows how much times have changed. A brass plaque facing the audience now stolidly commemorates the Cavern's reopening in 1966 by the prime minister, "the Rt. Hon. Harold Wilson, O.B.E., P.C., M.P."

By that time, of course, John, Paul, George and Ringo had acquired their own letters after their names and begun to leave the teen-agers behind.

"Everybody's gone off the Beatles now," pronounced one Liverpool teen-age girl. But there's a steady stream of pilgrims to see the bare brick hole off the Cavern stage that served as a dressing-room and where the great ones' autographs are chalked on the brick somewhere under the web of lesser names, obscene graffiti and girls' telephone numbers.

The bearded, middle-aged owner of the Cavern reminisces about the days when Paul McCartney was hard-pressed to scrape up a few pennies for a cheese roll, when the group and its manager received less than $10 a night among them and when the mop-topped boys would make a pint of bitter last a whole session at the Grapes pub down the road.

The Cavern, once the haunt of the best traditional jazz bands in the land, became the Basin Street of Britain. The Mersey sound went round the world, a potent blend of rhythm-and-blues, adenoidal Liverpool twang and the explosive vitality of the city's Celtic melting-pot—Irish, Welsh and Scots, laced with Negro exuberance.

At one time four Liverpool groups monopolized the entire pop scene in Britain. Then the balance shifted farther south with the emergence of such London idols as the Rolling Stones. Birmingham always ranked above Liverpool for the number of its beat groups —400 to 300—but it somehow never gained the same tough glamor as the smoky city on the Mersey.

Not all the 40 or so Liverpool beat clubs have gone respectable. What the police call "shebeens" mushroom overnight in grimy basements, operate for three days—statutory period of police observation before a raid—then fold their tents and flit to some other backstreet haven.

Broadcasting Bill Approved Clause-by-Clause

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's hefty broadcasting bill passed its toughest parliamentary stage Monday night, winning clause-by-clause approval in the 13th day of detailed Commons scrutiny.

The breakthrough came when State Secretary Judy LaMarsh deleted a clause that would have allowed five-year financing of the CBC, which now depends on an annual parliamentary vote for its budget.

The move headed off what promised to be prolonged objections to the clause and the remainder of the bill was approved so rapidly that the government was caught off guard.

It took about 15 minutes to summon Finance Minister Sharp from a black-tie dinner at Government House to present Excise Tax Act amendments for second reading.

The tax changes result from his mini-budget late last year.

Mr. Sharp turned up in a dinner jacket to pilot the amendments.

The broadcasting bill has occupied the Commons since MPs returned from a Christmas recess Jan. 22.

Miss LaMarsh, who has said before that she will not seek re-election, said the bill was "the last piece of legislation I think I'll see through the Parliament of Canada."

She drew applause as she said she hoped she had remained below the boiling point during the 13-day debate, in which she often was left fuming and exasperated.

Ralph B. Cowan, (L—York-Humber) drew most of her ire with his acid criticism of government broadcasting policy. When he said Monday that the policy has left people wondering who pays Liberal party bills, Miss LaMarsh replied: "Liberals have nothing but contempt for this man."

More than half the bill's 67 clauses were passed last week.

Another persistent critic was Gilles Gregoire, a separatist and independent MP for Lapointe.

Despite their criticism, the bill was not heavily amended. It creates a powerful agency called the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to succeed the Board of Broadcast Governors, the present licensing and regulatory body.

The new commission will have the power to fine broadcasters who break the rules $25,000 for a first offence and $50,000 maximum after that.

Provision for a fine of up to $100,000 had been written into the act but Miss LaMarsh Monday accepted an amendment by Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) a lawyer and broadcaster, setting out the lower figures.

She said $100,000 had been set because a big TV station can make an additional $10,000 a week with one extra minute of commercial time daily.

However, $25,000 for a first offence and double that for a second should be a deterrent "even for those stations that have a licence to print money," she said.

The bill is to receive third reading at a later sitting, then must win Senate approval before getting royal assent.

It represents the first overhaul of broadcasting legislation since 1958 and will empower the new agency to write individual conditions of licence for every broadcasting station.

It brings community antenna TV systems under a regulatory agency for the first time.

At present, they need only transport department clearance. The bill also stipulates that programming should be predominantly Canadian in content.

It also requires the CBC to extend service to all parts of Canada as fast as possible and to meet English and French needs in the various regions.

It gives CBC objectives priority over those of private stations where there is a conflict, although it says such conflicts must be resolved in the public interest.

A move by Mr. Gregoire to have a reference to the Queen written out of the bill because he is against the monarchy was defeated 65 to 1.

U.S. Plans to Tax Tourist Spending On Overseas Trips

WASHINGTON (CP) — A program to "curtail temporarily but sharply" American tourist spending abroad was proposed Monday as a $500,000,000 contribution to the U.S. attack on the dollar drain.

Canada, Mexico and other sections of the Western Hemisphere, including the Caribbean, would be exempt.

Elsewhere, the amount of duty-free merchandise that could be brought back home would be sharply cut, a tax of five per cent extended to air and sea passage to foreign places and a tax of 15 to 30 per cent would be applied to the spending of more than $7 a day overseas.

The special exemption for the Western Hemisphere, applying with special emphasis to Canada, is that any curbs on American tourists there could damage the return flow to the U.S.

Officials assume that Canadian spending in the U.S. accounts for one-third of all earnings from foreign travellers.

Last year, this sum was an estimated $1,635,000,000, another record. But Americans spent more than $2,000,000,000 more than that abroad and the U.S. curbs are aimed at the fashionable watering spots of Europe, where the jet-setters and others recline.

The administration proposed a graduated travel tax on spending in excess of $7 a day outside the Western Hemisphere and a five-per-cent levy on overseas plane and ship tickets.

The program, which also includes sharp reductions in the duty-free allowance on goods brought back to the United States, was outlined by Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler to the House of Representatives ways and means committee.

The new program includes a cut in the duty-free allowance on souvenirs and other goods bought overseas to $10 from $100 and in the duty-free gift provision to $1 from $10 for each article. This would apply to the U.S. residents returning from all countries except Mexico, Canada and the Caribbean area.

Auld Glad Canada Is Exempt

TORONTO (CP) — Tourism Minister James Auld said Monday Ontario's grateful that taxation of foreign travel spending by United States citizens proposed by President Johnson will not apply in the Western Hemisphere.

"At a time when spending by American tourists in Canada is making a significant reduction in our over-all balance-of-payments deficit with the United States, it would be a retrograde step indeed if travel to Canada were impeded," Mr. Auld said in a statement.

"In 1966 American visitors spent $730,000,000 in Canada whereas Canadians spent $628,000,000 in the United States. The surplus in Canada's favor therefore was in excess of $110,000,000, reversing a long-standing trend against us."

Figures for the first nine months of 1967 showed a balance of $470,000,000 in Canada's favor which was attributed largely to the impact of Expo 67 and centennial celebrations which tended to keep Canadians at home while attracting more American tourists.

South Korea Protests U.S. Talks With North

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea complained officially to the United States today about its negotiations with the North Koreans to get the crew of the USS Pueblo released.

A South Korean protest note threatened independent action unless the United States pays more attention to the North Korean threat to South Korea.

Government sources said the South Korean ambassador to the United States, Kim Dong-jo, has been called home and is expected to be given fresh instructions for dealing with Washington.

In the South Korean view, the United States should pay more attention to the constant infiltration of North Korean guerrillas across the demilitarized zone and the commando attempt to assassinate President Chung Hee Park than to the seizure of the Pueblo and its 83 crew members.

U.S. state department officials in Washington, meanwhile, said there is no truth to a report by South Korean sources that the body of one dead Pueblo sailor had been handed over to American officials.

And State Secretary Dean Rusk dismissed reports in the South Korean press that the United States would apologize to North Korea for the Pueblo's alleged "intrusion" into North Korean waters in exchange for the release of the surviving crew members.

Meanwhile, South Korean Premier Chung Il-kwon handed a protest note to U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter registering official opposition to the secret U.S.-North Korean talks at the truce village of Panmunjom.

Porter was also told that unless the United States changes its "lukewarm attitude" toward the threat of North Korean invasion, South Korea "may have to take unilateral self-defence measures."

Strictly Personal

People's Worries Selfish

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Every day I get letters complaining about "the mess we're in." People are worried and upset and disturbed. But there is one thing all these letters have in common.

People are disturbed only by what directly affects them. What they call "the mess" is that part of the mess that injures their own self-interest. Nobody cares about anyone else's part of the mess.

And this attitude, to me, is more significant than the actual mess — for this attitude is what causes the mess in the first place. And hardly anyone can see this, or will accept it.

Take a word like "rights." Nobody is interested in the whole word. Each person is interested only in those rights that bolster his own position; other people's "rights" seem like "wrongs" to us.

Nearly every letter I get is narrow, partial, and blind to the whole spectrum of rights and responsibilites. The people who want more "law and order" can't see the rampant injustices that the status quo is perpetuating; the people who call for "militant action" can't see the evil effects of rioting and looting and defying all authority.

But it is no good being for your own rights if you are morally impervious to the needs of others.

Because the whole concept of rights is a seamless garment: it is ripped in one place, it will rip everywhere. If we are unjust to any segment of the social order, we are making it that much easier for the society to become unjust to us as well.

What is lacking, of course, is a sense of "community." And without this sense, we have only diverse factions, each trying to protect what it has and to get more. And if each faction is concerned only with its own particular kind of rights, nobody is left to guard the whole basic idea for the community at large.

This is why I cannot respond enthusiastically to the so-called "respectable" members of society, who are so upset about the "lawlessness in the streets," and other current cliches.

When have they ever cared about any rights except their own? Who have they ever gone to bat for except themselves? They are for law and order because they are on top; if they were on the bottom, they would be for different laws and a different kind of order.

This is not being democratic. This is not being Christian or religious in any way. It is being self-protective. Only when we are just as deeply concerned with the basic right of the least member of society as with our own, are we justified in appealing to the moral sense of mankind. We must stop being our own lawyers, and become our own judges.

Poor Areas Need Federal Strength

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick urged the federal government today to broaden the concept of the Atlantic Development Board and arm it with greater powers to stimulate economic progress in the underdeveloped Atlantic region.

First speaker on the third and final day of the federal-provincial conference, Mr. Robichaud said a strong Canadian federalism cannot be achieved while some areas of the country are far behind in development.

For that reason, the Atlantic provinces were firmly opposed to any constitutional revision that would strip any powers from the federal government. This would weaken Ottawa's ability to help the poorer provinces.

Mr. Robichaud reiterated his region's plea for a massive increase in Atlantic Development Board funds, suggesting it be given $1,000,000,000 in lending power.

The board's basic fund now is $100,000,000.

It should also have greater authority to design and implement programs without requiring Ottawa approval.

The conference got under way 10 minutes late, at 10:10 a.m. EST. Its first business was regional economic disparity.

Manitoba Treasurer Gurney Evans agreed with Mr. Robichaud that special measures, tailored to the different regional needs, are essential to achieve some degree of economic equality across the country.

Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said "another Canada," a poorer one, exists east of the Ottawa River. He pleaded for larger equalization grants.

The rich provinces like Ontario were that way because of the existence of the other "customer provinces." They should have no complaint if some of their taxes were sent to help these less fortunate provinces.

There would be no purpose in Confederation unless equalization worked to remove this lopsided economic situation. The alternative was for the rich to become richer and the poor poorer.

Mr. Smallwood asked why Canada couldn't take a lesson from the United States and permit sale in have-not provinces of tax-free bonds to be used for economic development.

Finance Minister Sharp interjected that the U.S. has been a lot less enthusiastic about this device lately than in the past.

Premier Bennett of British Columbia said tax-free bonds were introduced in the U.S. at a

CPA Crash Kills Two

VANCOUVER (CP) — At least two persons were killed and 14 injured today when a large Canadian Pacific Airlines jet with 61 persons aboard crashed into a building after landing in a thick fog at Vancouver International Airport.

Dead are a male member of the plane's crew and a ground employee at the airport.

All those injured were aboard the aircraft, a Boeing 707 on an overnight flight from Honolulu. The 707 has a capacity of 126 passengers.

Reports indicated the jet, leased by CPA from a Seattle company, shot off the runway after bouncing a few times while landing in morning darkness and fog.

The jet struck several small aircraft parked near the runway and buried its nose into a small building, 200 feet from the busy main airport terminal.

Passengers and crew escaped by crawling out emergency exits. A fire on the aircraft was brought under control quickly.

The crew member died in hospital. The other person died in the fire-wrecked airport building.

The aircraft smashed four parked planes and a car before hitting the building, used by the department of transport.

Pilot of the jet was identified as Capt. Al Burkhalter of Seattle.

Prostitution Ring Ignored

TORONTO (CP) — An Iroquois princess charged Tuesday night that the federal Indian affairs department does not answer letters from Indians and has ignored a Vancouver prostitution ring that uses "hundreds" of 15 to 17-year-old Indian girls.

Kahn Tineta Horn, a 25-year-old Montreal model raised on the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal, also criticized Indian Affairs Minister Arthur Laing.

Of the "terrible scandal" of Vancouver prostitution, Miss Horn said:

"I certainly do not suggest that anyone so fine and honest—and he is fine and honest—as Mr. Laing has anything to do with this. But it cannot happen without the knowledge or the co-operation of police and some politicians."

Seoul Students Clash With U. S. Soldiers

SEOUL (AP) — U.S. Army troops clashed today with about 400 demonstrating South Korean college students. At least 24 students were injured by bullets or rifle butts, the South Korean national police reported.

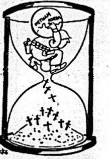
The U.S. soldiers fired an estimated 20 rounds of warning shots during the two-hour melee on the Freedom Bridge a mile below the demilitarized zone, the police said.

Nine students were reported in serious condition. None of the soldiers was reported hurt. The injured included several girls, the police said.

The students were demonstrating against U.S.-North Korean talks for the release of the USS Pueblo and her crew. Police said the demonstrators were trying to march over the bridge across the Imvin River to the conference site at Panmunjom, where U.S. and North Korean officials met today at an open meeting of the Military Armistice Commission. But the Pueblo was not mentioned at the meeting.

Anti-American demonstration broke out in Seoul this week for the first time in five years after South Korean officials accused the United States of slighting South Korea's cause in the secret talks U.S. officials have been holding at Panmunjom with the North Koreans since last Friday.

Korean officials did an about-face today and withdrew much of their criticism. But the clash between the students and U.S. soldiers is certain to inflame public opinion.



Almost a Third Of Prison Deaths Were Violent

NEW YORK (AP) — The Times says records at the Arkansas state penitentiary since 1936 show at least 70 of the 254 deaths reported resulted from violence.

The newspaper, in a dispatch from Grady, Ark., says records show prisoners were murdered, shot "accidentally" and during what were described as escape attempts, burned to death, poisoned, drowned, run over by farm wagons, and "accidentally" electrocuted.

Two Rivers Subsiding

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Kent County residents today turned to the job of pumping out and mopping up as two flood-swollen rivers continued to subside after a four-day rampage.

Leonard N. Johnson, resources manager of the Lower Thames Valley Conservation Authority, said at 8 a.m. the river was 15 feet above normal and was dropping at two inches an hour.

Tuesday, the river which runs through Chatham, crested at 17½ feet above normal.

"I think we are safe," said Clarence Wilson, chairman of the conservation authority. "I am not saying it could not rise again, but we are not anticipating this."

Mr. Johnson said the river was clear of ice from Chatham to its mouth in Lake St. Clair. An ice jam near Kent Bridge, about 12 miles upstream, was no longer a threat.

City residents Tuesday began manning pumps supplied by the Emergency Measures Organization, which hoped to have most homes drained by late today.

About 300 people in the Chatham area, forced out of their homes, will not be able to return until after extensive repairs. All evacuated families here were being housed in private homes.

The floods, which started last weekend after heavy rains and melting snow, also left several hundred persons homeless in Thamesville, 15 miles upstream from Chatham, and in Wallaceburg and Dresden on the Sydenham River north of the Thames.

Mayor E. N. Savage of Wallaceburg said Tuesday about 600 residents there were still homeless and about 200 of those were being housed in two public halls. Efforts were being made to relocate them in private homes.

Mayor Savage said only five of the town's eight sewage pumping stations were operational.

North Vietnamese Use Tanks Against Special Forces Camp

SAIGON (AP) — The North Vietnamese sent their Soviet tanks into the Vietnam war today, apparently for the first time, against South Vietnamese irregulars and their American advisers at a U.S. Special Forces camp in the northwest corner of South Vietnam.

Reports from Da Nang said a Special Forces sergeant had radioed that only five of the 25 Americans in the Lang Vei camp were still alive—he and four others in the headquarters bunker. He reported a knocked-out tank was on top of the bunker.

The U.S. command said Lang Vei's defencers destroyed five sent against them.

The massive assault on Lang Vei, four miles west of Khe Sanh, could be the kickoff of the long-anticipated offensive along the northern frontier, which Gen. William C. Westmoreland has predicted will be the biggest Communist push of the war—exceeding the furious assault on South Vietnamese cities and towns last week.

The campaign against the cities has died down at most Cong forces still fought stubbornly in Saigon and Hue.

The U.S. command said the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese death toll in the last eight days reached 22,748 by midnight Tuesday night. It said 1,768 combined forces troops have been killed, including 614 Americans and 1,130 South Vietnamese.

Military spokesmen said the North Vietnamese began pounding the Lang Vei camp with artillery at dusk Tuesday, then launched the ground attack about two hours later.

The camp's garrison—300-400 South Vietnamese and Montagnard irregulars and their American advisers—took cover in their bunkers, and North Vietnamese sprayed the bunkers with flamethrowers to drive the defenders back from rifle and machine-gun ports.

Civilian Toll 10,215

SAIGON (Reuters) — A total of 2,015 civilians were killed and 8,200 wounded throughout South Vietnam in the Viet Cong offensive which began last week, a South Vietnamese government spokesman said today.

The spokesman said provisional casualty figures listed 350 civilian dead and 1,200 wounded in Saigon alone, while there were 67,264 refugees in the capital and 189,000 in provinces for which figures were available.

The U.S. military command today reported 22,748 Viet Cong killed since the start of the Communist offensive Jan. 29, but observers remained skeptical of the accuracy of this figure.

The U.S. command said the U.S. and its allies lost a total of 1,768 killed and 7,358 wounded in the fighting in Saigon and cities and towns throughout the country.

Moira Channel Open

Belleville Flood Unlikely This Year

A public project carried out under threat will pay dividends this Spring for Belleville.

Local authorities said today it's highly unlikely the city will face any flood emergency this year — despite higher water tables throughout the province.

The comforting confirmation comes at a time when communities in western Ontario are still combatting the effects of severe flooding.

Responsible for virtually erasing the threat was recent quick action by the city to open a channel in the Moira River and keep the waterway draining into the Bay of Quinte.

Tons of ice and frozen snow were clawed from the Moira's mouth in a crash program to unplug a channel.

"It looks like we're now in the clear — and we're very, very happy about it," said Quinte Emergency Measures co-ordinator Angus Duffy.

"Considering the amount of water, the situation couldn't be better," he said.

About the only cause for worry now is the possibility of sudden heavy rains which could unleash ice further upriver.

"But we'd need a terrific amount — maybe three inches in about 48 hours," said the co-ordinator.

"We don't anticipate any problem now," agreed an official of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Level in the Moira's watershed is higher than usual and "there's still a lot of water content on the land," he said.

Under these conditions "a higher-than-average" runoff could be anticipated this spring.

"But the important thing now is the channel through Belleville is clear," the conservation official added.

Spring Thaw No Threat

Moira River is wide open and running through Belleville — a good omen for spring. Despite high water levels, officials say there is scarcely any flood danger when winter thaws.

William V. Fairbairn, 91 Dies

Former locomotive engineer and at one time active in church and community affairs, William V. Fairbairn, 325 Charles Street, died suddenly this morning in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 92nd year.

Born in Kingston, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Fairbairn and had lived in the city for the past 58 years.

A graduate of Kingston Normal School he had intended to make education his life vocation. But while waiting to enter Royal Military College he started on the railway with the old GTR in Kingston in 1900 and worked as firemen and engineer for the next 41 years.

He was classed as engineer in 1905 and from then until his retirement in 1941 ran many of the crack trains of the period.

Highlights in his railway career included operation of the royal train which in 1939 carried King George and Queen Elizabeth during their tour of Canada, and also the train which carried President Franklin Roosevelt to the official opening of the Ivy Lea Bridge.

He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Division 189 Belleville; and was a past chief engineer.

A member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church he served on the board of managers, was on the church session for 43 years (many years as treasurer), served as representative elder and was on the Kingston Presbytery board for 38 years.

He served on the Belleville Board of Education for 12 years, and on the city board of health for nine years. He was a past president of the local Liberal Association.

Predeceased by his wife, the former Mary Isabella Marshall in 1953, he is survived by three daughters, Miss Margaret Fairbairn and Mrs. Jean Smoke, both of Belleville, and Mrs. Richard (Marion) Jacoby of Columbus, Ohio. There are two grandsons, William Arnold and Robert Fairbairn Jacoby, both of Columbus.

He was the last of his family.

The funeral will be held Saturday from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home to St. Andrew's Church for service at 2.00 p.m. conducted by Rev. Laurie Sutherland. Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations are invited to the St. Andrew's Church Organ Fund, or to the Ontario Heart Foundation.

Concert Orchestra Outlined

Benjamin G. Thompson, Q.C. described the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra yesterday at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Belleville Kiwanis Club.

Mr. Thompson dealt with the history of the club as well as its accomplishments and purpose. He stated that the orchestra's members were drawn from many municipalities in Eastern Ontario. Concerts are performed in as many localities.

Mr. Thompson's address was followed by a queston and answer period in which Stephen Choma, conductor of the orchestra and also a guest at the meeting, assisted in answering queries from the Kiwanians.

Yesterday's meeting was the first official one for four new Kiwanians who were inducted a week ago. The new Kiwanians are Roy Cheeseman, Norman Davis, Bruce Mosolf and Victor Pyetle.

Sea Scouts' Organization Is Formed

DESERONTO — Boys of Deseronto will again have the opportunity to learn scouting. A troop of Sea Scouts is being organized, the first meeting is to be held Thursday evening at 7:00 p.m. in the Legion Hall. Boys between the ages of 11 and 14, inclusive, are eligible to join under the leadership of David Saunders and Rev. William Hendry.

C. A. Sergeant is the chairman of the group committee, F. P. Dickinson is secretary, and treasurer is P. A. Morris. Representative of the Legion is Brian Masay of Napanee and P. A. Morris represents the Lions Club. James Gaylord is a member at large.

The program of the Sea Scouts is much like that of the Boy Scouts, with emphasis on boats, boating, swimming and rescue work. Because Deseronto is on the Bay of Quinte with facilities for boating and water sports, the group committee felt that this form of the work would be more useful in Deseronto, and possibly more attractive to boys, than the usual type of scouting.

George Olsen and Unsold Product

No Sale But Stock Will Go

There isn't any talk of a February sale, but local auto licence issuer George Olsen has more than 8,000 sets of 1968 plates which he would very much like to sell.

"Sales are slow", was Mr. Olsen's description today of business activity. "If people don't start buying their plates soon, they will of their own choice find themselves in a last day line-up.

Since plates went on sale last fall he has sold only 4,300 sets. And with more than 8,000 to go he has still sold less than 35 per cent of his annual quota.

Conservation Demonstrations

Area Educational Program Extended

Thanks to an extension of its educational program, the Moira River Conservation Authority this spring will make it possible for an estimated 1,000 school children to see how maple syrup is made.

Authority field officer Sandy Griswold told the Authority inaugural meeting yesterday that details were about completed for the sugar bush demonstration project to be staged at a Moira area farm during the last two weeks in March and the first two weeks in April.

School children will make the sugar bush visits during the week with visits by the general public to be invited on weekends.

Also this year the Authority conservation school at the Vanderwater Park will be expanded to allow attendance by all Grade 6 children in the watershed. It is expected that about 1,200 school children will be accommodated at the one day conservation school during a six weeks period next spring.

The Authority generally came in for commendation from H. G. Hooke, supervising field officer for Eastern Ontario.

Mr. Hooke said officials of the Moira Authority deserved a "pat on the back" for the various phases of conservation work carried out.

He said the Moira program in recreation, forestry and water, compared with the best offered by Authorities in Ontario and often had been cited as an example.

Mr. Hooke referred briefly to recommendations of the select committee on conservation noting these were now "in the mill" and said results would shortly be seen.

The re-writing of the conservation act would bring it up with the times and would make it easier for Authorities to operate. There would be a new scale of grants tied in with assessment per square mile but also encouraging program expansion.

Fish and Wildlife Advisory committee chairman William Armstrong said his committee was working on plans for the setting up of a wild life sanctuary.

Authority Chairman Gerald Irvine said he would like to see this idea brought to fruition noting that various species of wild life were fast disappearing.

The Authority now owns more than 15,000 acres and purchases of sub marginal land are continuing. Efforts will be made to consolidate future purchases in blocks or areas to allow for easier forest management.

The Authority this year is working on plans for one of its more ambitious water control projects — the Deerock Dam on Partridge Creek north of Flinton. Detailed plans for the dam structure are now being prepared and clearing of the flood area is underway.

The meeting approved the 1968 budget as recommended by last year's Authority.

Total budget for the year is $234,100 with all but $30,685 to be covered by provincial, federal and ARDA grants. The biggest expenditure for the year will be in connection with the Deerock dam for which $194,000 has been allotted. ARDA grants on the Deerock project will amount to $131,000.

The local levy of $30,685 is being reduced to $24,685 as result of $6,000 being taken from accumulated surplus.

The $24,685 will be levied against the participating municipalities with 60 per cent of the over-all figure being paid by the city of Belleville.

Moira Authority Elects Officers

Gerald Irvine of Sidney township was re-elected chairman of the Moira River Conservation Authority at the organizational meeting of that body held in Cannifton Tuesday afternoon.

Also named to another term was vice chairman James Spry of Rawdon township.

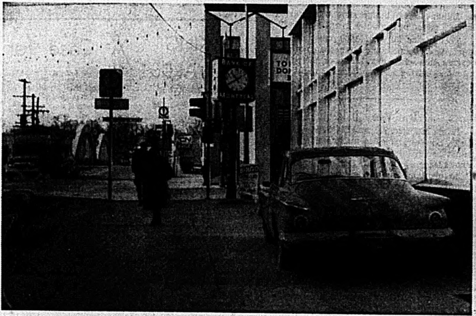
Advisory board chairmen are: conservation areas — Cecil Ketcheson; water — Graham Bell; forestry — Leslie McLaren; education extension — Mrs. Robin Jeffrey and fish and wild life — William Armstrong.

The 1968 Authority executive will be the chairman and vice chairman, together with advisory board chairmen, and the second representative from the city of Belleville — this year Mayor J. Russell Scott.

Provision for both representatives from the city acting on the executive committee was made out of recognition for the fact that Belleville pays 60 per cent of the total Authority levy.

Nominating committee chairman Earl Sager of Madoc township, felt it was only fair that the city should have the additional member on the executive committee and the meeting agreed.

Authority members for 1968 are as follows: Belleville — Mayor J. R. Scott and Ald. Robin Jeffrey; Deloro — C. Gordanier; Elzevir and Grimsthorpe — John Thompson; Huntingdon — Harold Thompson; Hungerford — R. Clarence Graham; Kaladar, Anglesea and Effingham — Mrs. Lela Casey; Madoc township — Earl Sager; Madoc Village — William Armstrong; Marmora and Lake — Graham Bell; Rawdon — James Spry; Richmond — Carl Richmond; Sidney — Gerald Irvine; Thurlow — C. B. Ketcheson; Tudor and Cashel — James H. Sprackett; Tweed — Guy Hughes; Tyendinaga — Leslie McLaren; Ontario government representatives — Barton Haggerty, Harry Coulter and Carl Thompson.



Deposit or Lack of Space?

Either way it's a weird situation. Perhaps the owner of the locked car in front of the Bank of Montreal tried to make a deposit. It could be that he wanted to demonstrate emphatically that the city of Belleville just doesn't have enough parking spaces.

OWRC Proposal Accepted

DESERONTO — At its meeting Monday night the Deseronto town council voted unanimously "to concur with the proposal of the Ontario Water Resources Commission and install a sewer system in Deseronto". The proposal is that the OWRC install the system and that the town pay for it on a rental basis over 40 years.

This is the culmination of a struggle which began at least eight years ago in the town. There has been one frustrating delay after another with the town at a standstill until modern facilities could be guaranteed to prospective industries and many desirable would-be residents. Progress was almost impossible. On the other hand, when the OWRC proposal was submitted, the figures for annual payments to each industry and resident were so staggering that the council could not come to an immtdiate conclusion and the mater was laid over. A meeting with two representatives of the OWRC last week clarified the situation and gave the councillors the courage to come to Monday night's decision.

No rates for either industry or residential has yet been set. Only the overall cost is known.

Meeting Slated On Mental Health

Education Hall at the Belleville General Hospital will be the scene of the annual meeting of the Belleville chapter of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

The meeting will be held on Feb. 20 at 8.15 p.m.

Speaking will be W.S. McKegney, supervisor of rehabilitation services at the Ontario Hospital in Kingston.

Mr. McKegney will show a film entitled The Road Back after which there will be a discussion of the efforts to rehabilitate the mentally ill.

At the January meeting of the Mental Health Board, it was reported by Mrs. Louise Hurst, chairman of the Christmas gift campaign, that 565 gifts had been distributed to patients at the Ontario Hospital.

Mrs. Helen Kelly reported, at the same meeting, that she and her group travelled over 600 miles setting up programs and encouraging local community responsibility for the district homes for special care in each area.

The Canadian Mental Health Association has announced that it will sponsor a charter flight to England. Two jets have been chartered for the journey. Members of the association may make the visit for $218.

Rotarians Hear Talk On Heart Disease

TRENTON—If you're a fat person, smoke, and don't exercise, your heart's in trouble.

Dr. Brock Nugent told Trenton Rotarians most people seem to qualify for at least several vital symptoms that could contribute to heart disease.

"We lead very sedentary lives and most of us spend more time talking than walking.

"I particularly find a tendency among vacationers to cram all their year's exercise into a month or so."

Associated illnesses such as diabetes and familiar traits are also contributing factors to heart disease, which, Dr. Nugent said, is North America's number one killer.

The Trenton physician spoke on behalf of the up-coming Ontario Heart Foundation drive to be held in the Trenton area between Feb. 12-29.

Rotarian Dan Senik, chairman of the Trenton Chapter Heart drive, said local canvassers are workng towards a $3,000 objective this year.

"THE SMUG MINORITY"

"The march of social progress is like a long and straggling parade, with the seers and prophets at its head and a smug minority bringing up the rear . . ."

THE SMUG MINORITY is Pierre Burton's fifteenth book and in many respects the most important book he has ever written. It expresses his mature convictions about the society in which we live.

THE SMUG MINORITY continues to present as realities copy book maxims that have long since become obsolete:

- A woman's place is in the home.
- Satan finds more mischief still for idle hands to do.
- Too much security kills initiative.
- Anyone who works hard will rise to the top.
- Higher taxes will wreck the nation.
- Private property must be sacrosanct.

All of these statements are open to challenge and it is the purpose of this book to challenge them.

Council's Decision

City council's decision Monday to get along with the Dundas street project is welcome news. At long last there is concrete evidence that some measure of relief is in sight for the downtown cross-town motorist.

Council has shown it is willing to come to grips with the problems facing it. At its previous meeting it brought the community centre project to a head by calling for tenders. Now the phase one overpass of the CPR tracks has been given the green light.

The near unanimity of the vote should mean that there will be no reason at all for even one day's delay in the start of phase two — the bridge over the Moira.

But the battle is only just begun. For the most advantageous engineering conditions, the Dundas street bridge should be started during a period of low water in the Moira.

This means June of 1969 must be the target date. Council must see that nothing prevents such scheduling. If it does, their time and money-saving action of Monday night will be wasted.

The Way It Is

Prime Minister Pearson is nothing if not sincere. However, he leaves the impression that against such determined and politically ruthless leaders as Quebec's Daniel Johnson — not to mention the unrelenting secessionist pressures he represents — he is virtually powerless.

The other premiers similarly appear impotent in the face of whatever it is that Quebec is seeking. Premier Manning of Alberta is one of those who are still wondering what Quebec wants. "This conference," he said at the opening of the constitutional meeting in Ottawa, "has a right to know the precise nature and extent of their demands and the point where insistence on additional concessions is going to cease."

From Premier Robarts there was a grudging recognition of French Canadian aspirations when he said: "The source of much of our current tension has been our reluctance to commit ourselves to the idea of our two languages and our many cultures."

Premier Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland on the other hand reacts merely by expressing righteous indignation. He says he does not see any reason why Quebec or any other province should have special status or assume powers now vested in Ottawa.

Nor does anyone else really. However, quite apart from the personalities involved, the trend in Quebec is plainly discernible. Quebec is not like other provinces because it is the home of the French Canadian who until a few years ago lived a largely subservient existence, submerged on the one hand by the church and by English-speaking government in Ottawa on the other.

Now, with the support of troublemakers like President de Gaulle of France, Quebec is claiming a much greater measure of control over its own affairs. That is what this latest meeting of the provincial and federal authorities is all about. As ever, Premier Johnson is there, speaking in his faultless English, and quietly furthering the cause of a Quebec that is unique in Canada because of its predominantly French culture.

For light relief in this whole business we have to turn to Premier Bennett of British Columbia. The western premier did not attend the last premiers' meeting in Toronto some weeks ago. He is of course something of a separatist in outlook himself, just as the province he leads is a sort of never-never land far-removed from the dictates of Ottawa.

While Mr. Manning warned of a "constitutional Munich," Mr. Bennett brushed off the whole problem with jokes and generalities. There was no constitutional crisis in Canada, he said. Perhaps Mr. Bennett is even farther away from the Ottawa and Quebec scene than we had imagined.

Opera Coming

Loyalist College's sponsorship of Don Pasquale by The Canadian Opera Company gives a further boost to the cultural endeavors of Belleville and of the Quinte area generally.

We have had several fine performances here in recent times — from the Quebec folk dancing group, Les Feux Follets, to the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. These, allied to the presentation of Belleville Theatre Guild, give a fresh dimension to the life of this community.

As yet without a permanent home — although the site has been chosen — Loyalist in its temporary quarters at Centennial High School, nevertheless, is wasting no time in living up to its title of "community college."

A Case for Postponing Medicare

Ottawa Journal

The Journal has questioned whether medicare deserves the priority the federal Government proposes to apply in making the program effective on July 1.

With a majority of the provinces unwilling to start medicare on that date, chiefly because they feel they cannot afford to pay half the costs of a $1 billion-a-year program, it has been the view of this newspaper that the federal Government should announce now that it wants medicare to be postponed. We are impressed with the priorities, such as education and housing, provinces put ahead of medicare.

Our view has not changed, but the arguments against postponement are of interest.

The primary factor is cost. This problem is recognized even by those most in favor of medicare at once. Finance Minister Sharp said in November that in a full year medicare would cost $1 billion and the federal Government's share would be equivalent to a 12½ per cent increase in personal income tax.

The minister's figures revealed that inflation had ensnared medicare even before it began. When the medicare legislation was passed in December, 1966, the cost was estimated at $340,000,000 a year each for the Dominion and the provinces, a total of $680,000,000.

Federal experts say the estimate now is that if medicare had been made operative in all the provinces in the calendar year 1968, the cost would have been $885,000,000.

The figure of $1 billion, they explain, is the estimate for the fiscal year 1969-70. It assumes that the scale of medical fees and other costs will be higher than in 1968.

New Zealand's View of Trade and Defence Links

Christchurch, (N.Z.) Star

Even as Britain, Australia and New Zealand worry about the effects of the American cutback, conversely they have some encouragement. For, in accordance with the grouping prepared by the president's advisers, New Zealand and Australia, along with Britain, Canada, Japan and some other countries appear in a bloc that is economically favored by comparison with the Six of the European Economic Community. One consequence of this basis of national selection, whether or not it was by design, is that for the first time there is an official and operational system of economic grouping linking the United States more closely with the old British Commonwealth — plus Japan and without South Africa — than with Continental Europe. This trend is supposed to be temporary, but many permanent ties have temporary beginnings.

• • •

N.Z. Economist and Taxpayer

The most intolerable aspect of the chop-back of Far Eastern defences is the manner in which Britain went about announcing the decision — a decision obviously taken before Commonwealth Secretary George Thomson had had time to complete his "negotiations" with Malaysia, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand. The process was a mockery of negotiation and it was only right and proper that Holyoake in New Zealand, Gorton in Australia and Lee in Singapore should show their anger. Britain's hasty retreat from east of Suez emphasizes that her present-day view of the Commonwealth ends just short of the English Channel, with a spur in the direction of some of her former territories in Africa.

Dominique Lapointe

Quebec's Press Spokesman

Watertown Times

The government of Quebec, lauded and maligned, depending upon one's sympathies has come up with an announcement that is refreshingly candid.

Premier Daniel Johnson has decided to establish an official "government information leak." Named to the post will be the premier's press attache, Dominique Lapointe. In this country he would be known as a press secretary.

Mr. Lapointe's duties will be to serve as the official spokesman for the cabinet on government policy. That job in the States is usually done by the governor's press secretary. He dispenses the information the administration desires, conducts briefings, and is generally available to the news media on matters of major significance.

Neither the governor nor his press secretary, however, would ever admit, let alone imply, that the secretary is an "official leak." Such frankness could hardly be tolerated. Nevertheless, in many ways, the Quebec government's choice of title is closer to reality. How often has one read a story attributed only to a "high state government source" or a "source close to the governor?"

Such a device is generally used to test public sentiment or to seek public reaction. Often a story is "leaked" to one particular newspaper or television network. If the results are less than what they had been hoped for, the whole thing can be denied, of course.

Readers, radio listeners and televison viewers in Quebec will have one benefit which those in the States do not. They, at least, will know that a story has been "leaked."

He Wants To Buy the Britannia

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

The world has always had its share or more of persons who will kick a man when he's down, or at least make the attempt.

The Toronto millionaire who has made the offer to rent HMY Britannia for a year-long cruise for $2,000,000 belongs in this category.

In making his offer he based this on the current need of Britain for more foreign currency and the devaluation of the pound sterling.

HMY Britannia costs the people of Britain about $28,400 per week to operate.

The millionaire who made the rental offer, evidently doesn't know very much about the British temperament. If he did he would realize that the British, despite the economy wave through which they are going, would sooner see the Britannia scrapped, than have it turned over to some far distant or even local millionaire, for his own engrandisement and that of his friends.

To add insult to injury, the millionaire in question has announced that should he obtain rental of the vessel, he would be willing to cater to guests at $60,000 a head. To date, he's had people who want to work the cruise out, but nobody wants to pay the fare.

In the days of the first Queen Elizabeth, he would have wound up in the Tower for such affrontery and perhaps ended his career on the executioner's block.

Letters to the Editor

Bridge and Arena Projects Seen as No More Than Costly White Elephants

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

When the shouting and the tumult had died down after the last council meeting, I thought once more how wonderful it would be if a majority of our aldermen (it would only take six) possessed, and used, some plain, old-fashioned common sense.

For example, we will collect 'X' millions of dollars in taxes for 1968. Out of this amount, let us put aside amounts for education, policemen, firemen, welfare, upkeep of roads and sidewalks, a very sizeable sum for principal and interest on our debts and so on. Then what is left could be applied to new sewer and water services or new bridges or new arenas or what have you. This way we could hold the line on our mill rate.

The cost of Government at the federal and provincial levels is ever upward and beyond our control, or so it would appear. Only at the municipal level does the taxpayer have any hope today of putting the brakes on spending beyond our means. Let us stop debt upon debt year after year and as the saying goes "consolidate our position."

I think our administration is attempting the impossible if they feel another bridge is going to solve rush hour traffic congestion. Will there not be traffic lights at both ends of this new bridge? Can traffic move any faster than the traffic lights allow? Are the streets going to be any wider to permit more volume of traffic?

Let us suppose that we had no Moira river going through the centre of Belleville. In its place we would probably have another street—let's call it River Street. Under such circumstances we would no doubt have traffic lights at Front and Dundas, River and Dundas, Coleman and Dundas, Market St. and Front, Market St. and River Market St. and Coleman, Bridge and Pinnacle, Bridge and Front, Bridge and River, Bridge and Coleman, Campbell and Front, Campbell and River, Campbell and Coleman, and so on up the line. How fast do you think traffic would move under these circumstances? Rush hour traffic congestion is a fact of life, here to stay and not unique to Belleville alone.

I was only faintly amused by Alderman Soden's suggestion that letters to the Editor should not be printed if they bear a nom de plume. Mr. Soden pointed out that this is not Russia, and everyone should feel free to stand up and be counted i.e. sign letters with their ownership so stated. I wonder if Mr. Soden is so naive as to believe that our society is totally free from religious, racial and financial discrimination? If he thinks this is so, then perhaps we should question his championing of a new white elephant on the fairgrounds, because we need a new arena just about as much as we need higher taxes.

I would think our members of council could read and interpret the economic signs about us, some of them being Dosco Steel pending closure in Sydney, N.S. Our own temporary, we hope, closing of Canada Cement, the nation-wide ten percent cut back in CNR employees, steel companies in Ontario operating at 75 per cent or less capacity, the Bank of Canada interest rate boosted to 7 per cent, the CHMC or NHA mortgage rate boosted to 8¾ per cent, our local area unemployment three times or more higher than the national average, and so on.

Let us take a breather to pay off some of our existing debts before we take on any more.

Druggist Had Store On Front

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

We have received a letter from Minnesota asking for information regarding any descendents of a Merrick Sawyer.

Mr. Sawyer was a druggist and chemist, established in 1835, and his shop was on the west side of Front St. His home address was William St.

After 1870, he is no longer listed as a druggist (presumably he retired) and the name is last listed in the 1890 Directory.

If any of your readers have any information regarding any members of Mr. Sawyer's family, it would be much appreciated if they would call me at the Hastings Museum — 962-3731.

Young Canadians and Vancouver Free School

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In an editorial Dec. 30 you comment on a Vancouver free school. Your attitude towards the school and the young people involved with it is commendable.

Instead of seeing a new school structure as undesirable you note the initiative of the people involved and accept that something positive could develop from it.

Your willingness to give the school a chance to develop, in light of your observation about the regimentation and conformity of the present system, is only logical, but it is logic which is ignored by a great many others.

The free school in Kitsilano is an experiment, one which the Company of Young Canadians is pleased to be part of. We see a definite role for ourselves in situations like this for, contrary to common belief, our work is supposed to be in all segments of Canadian society. The accent, though, is on the deprived.

However, if new programs, such as the free school, continue to be given a chance by newspapers like yourselves, Canada cannot help but benefit in the long run.

IAN HAMILTON,
Field Information Officer,
Company of Young Canadians.

Apple Crop A Record In 1967

Windsor Star

Canadians who accept the proverb that an apple a day keeps the doctor away need have no fear. There are plenty of apples for everybody. Canada in 1967 had a record crop of almost 25,000,000 bushels, 18 per cent more than in 1966 and eight per cent higher than the previous record year of 1963

This may surprise some in Ontario who have witnessed most of the farm orchards falling into decrepitude. But apple growing on a commercial basis now is big business and these large orchards have had a fine yield.

So we can eat up, either for pleasure or for health. Indeed, to get rid of the bumper crop, many will have to be exported. And processed apples are a handy form of export.

Montreal's African Visitors

The Montreal Star

Judge Henri Beaulieu has ruled that a bare-breasted dance staged by les Ballets Africains did not come within the criminal code's definition of obscenity or indecency. We applaud the decision.

Montreal prides itself on being a sophisticated metropolis and a centre of world culture. This case made the city look silly. There was never any suggestion that a performance of classical native dances was intended to arouse prurient interests. And in view of the fact that such great cultural centres as Toronto, Ottawa, Quebec and Sherbrooke had not found it necessary to take police action against the company, Montreal's official position became all the more ludicrous.

What seemed at first like a rather humorous incident ceased to be funny as the city insisted on going ahead with the case. It is a relief that sanity has finally prevailed. But we await with apprehension the claim that all those go-go girls around town are performing nothing more than native dances. Such is culture.

Poor Areas Need Federal Strength

time when income tax rates were low. The Canadian people today wouldn't stand for a system that allowed the rich to invest in such bonds and escape income tax.

Mr. Bennett said low wages in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces caused unfair competition with B.C., where wage rates were the highest in Canada. Efforts should be made to eliminate low-wage regions.

He said he looks forward to Mr. Smallwood's annual speech. B.C. and Newfoundland were the bulwarks of the nation, holding it together.

"You are the book ends," Mr. Pearson interjected, to laughter.

In contrast to Mr. Smallwood, Premier Bennett attacked the whole concept of equalization payments.

He said they are basically wrong because they go into government hands, not into the hands of workers. Ottawa should convene a meeting with provincial labor ministers to set minimum wages, encourage modernization of industry and set goals for higher productivity.

Separatism is bound to collapse, he said, because it is "based on wrong thinking." If Quebecers left Canada, "where would they go?"

There is no more danger of Canada breaking up than of Mr. Pearson's minority government being defeated, he said.

Premier Campbell of Prince Edward Island made a strong plea for financial assistance that would allow the Atlantic provinces to develop better education facilities.

Premier Robarts of Ontario said that while the conference is "in this national mood" the whole question of disparities should be re-examined including the federal equalization payments.

The time had come to "rethink" the subject of economic development in Canada and to find ways of making the various regions self-supporting on their own resources.

The conference should begin a re-examination of the division of powers between the federal and provincial governments. While that was being done, it should be remembered that power carries responsibilities and responsibilities have to be paid for.

The whole question of sources of revenues for the two levels of governments required examination to ensure that each has the revenue sources with which to carry out its responsibilities.

Present tax arrangements between Ottawa and the provinces expire Dec. 31. In the examination of future arrangements, a new approach was required. Ontario had been greatly disappointed that the work of the federal-provincial tax structure committee had been given little weight in the present tax arrangements.

Mr. Robarts said a gratifying degree of consultation has been achieved between the two levels of government on financial matters. What is needed is an even higher degree of consultation and integration if Canada is to avoid getting into "real trouble financially."

Ford Steals New President from General Motors

DETROIT (AP) — Semon E. Knudsen, named president of Ford Motor Co. after resigning a top position with General Motors Corp., will take over many of Henry Ford II's duties with the second largest manufacturing firm in the U.S.

Ford announced Tuesday that Knudsen, 55, had been chosen as president. He said Knudsen will be the chief operating officer and take on Ford's duties as chief executive in his absence. Ford, whose grandfather founded the automotive company, remains as chairman of the board.

In Washington business circles, there were rumors that Ford might be in line for a high government post, possibly at cabinet level. But the White House said it knew nothing of such a move, and Ford told a press conference he had no plans to take a government post "at the present time."

Only a week ago, Knudsen was an executive vice-president at General Motors, the No. 1 U.S. automaker and Ford's chief competitor. But Knudsen resigned after he was passed over for the presidency of GM in favor of Edward N. Cole, who in turn replaced James Roche, now board chairman.

Knudsen, son of a former GM president, had worked for GM nearly 30 years. He guided the Pontiac division into third place in the industry behind Chevrolet and Ford.

Later, as manager of the Chevrolet division, Knudsen presided over sales that soared to an all-time record 7,000,000 cars in one year.

After Tuesday's announcement, Ford stock went up half point while GM fell 1⅛ on the New York Stock Exchange.

Automakers will be watching to see if Knudsen's reign at Ford will result in gains for his new employer. The favorite Knudsen formula is the injection of what he calls "massive doses of engineering."

The executive shuffle—which found former Ford president Arjay Miller named to a newly created post of vice-chairman—constitutes a fourth regime in Ford's postwar management.

The first three were headed in turn by Ernest R. Breech, Robert McNamara and Miller. But Henry Ford has always been the admiral on the flagship, no matter who was the captain.

Recently, Ford accepted an appointment from President Johnson to head a special businessmen's program seeking jobs in the next three years for 700,000 hard-core unemployed.

The Ford family still holds 40 per cent of the company's stock and is proud of its postwar recovery. There appears to be little doubt that he will continue to hold a firm grip on Ford Motor Co. reins.

Gravel Men Concerned

Quarry Operators--Despoilers or Industrialists?

TORONTO (CP) — They say the public look on them as despoilers and exploiters rather than industrialists, and believe that all they make is money.

"You'd never win a popularity contest," a member of the Ontario legislature told them.

Their association president warns that unless they change their tactics they may be banned from built-up areas.

These beleaguered businessmen are the Ontario aggregate producers— about 120 companies who do more than $100,000,000 worth of business annually scooping sand, gravel and crushed stone from southwestern Ontario.

But many citizens who live or work near them see them only as noisy operators who shatter householders' nerves—and sometimes windows— with their blasts and bulldozers, spread layers of dust over green fields, spill gravel on to highways from their trucks and finally depart, leaving nothing but a gaping hole in the ground.

The gravel men are beginning to be concerned.

"The operating methods of 25 years ago are no longer acceptable," R. L. Whiting of Nelson Crushed Stone told the Aggregate Producers' Association convention this week. "The free-loading days are over."

Besides getting along with nearby residents, he said, today's gravel company has to think how its operation looks to the man driving by with his family on Sunday.

If it doesn't, he warned, the municipality may pass a bylaw restricting or halting its operations.

Gravel pits can be aesthetic. A landscape architect's slides at the convention showed scenic sites created from quarries in the United States, where companies had an imaginative plan of reclamation.

Old quarries have become swimming pools with beaches, golf courses, housing developments and parks.

Mr. Whiting told operators his company has kept on the good side of Burlington, Ont., residents, even with the largest pit in the area, by using overburden as fill and seeding it immediately.

The company even built an 80-foot ski hill complete with tow on which it invites area residents and customers to try their skill.

In summer the quarry pond is stocked with trout, proving, Mr. Whiting said, that quarries don't cause pollution.

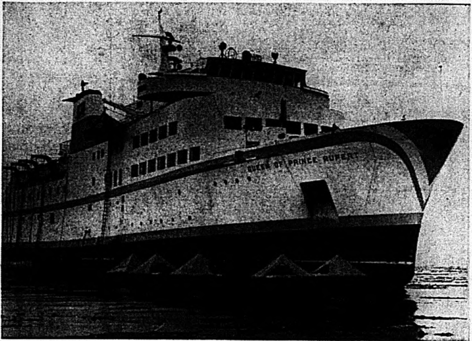
Some companies hire engineers to measure the sonic strength of their blasts so they will have a defence if someone brings a damage action against them later.

But the costs of this sort of thing are crushing for many small companies, and so far there has been no concerted attempt to create a pool of funds.

One operator says his company is forced to spend $10,000 annually replacing overburden, at 38 cents a cubic yard of earth, to conform to a township bylaw enacted after the firm had bought its quarrying land.

Association president, Stephen Farkas says the association hopes to set up a program to help operators plan the future use of their pits.

"But members would have to pay for it voluntarily," he said. "You can't assess people for a thing like this."



Unlucky Queen

The Queen of Prince Rupert, flagship of British Columbia's ferry fleet, is scheduled to resume service March 28 after a run of bad luck. Here, on her unluckiest day, Aug. 11, 1967, the 3,500-ton ferry rests hard aground on Haddington Reef, near Alert Bay, B.C. Damage was estimated at $1,000,000 plus thousands more in lost revenue. TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were mixed in light mid-morning activity on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Industrials and golds were up, base metals and oils slipped.

In the main list, Inco advanced ¾ to 115¾ and Imperial Tobacco and White Pass and Yukon 1 each to 14½ and 28.

Jobless Increase Is Normal

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment in Canada rose to 464,000 in mid-January from 353,000 in mid-December, official figures showed today.

Unemployment in January, 1967, was 381,000.

The number of men and women out of work represented 6.1 per cent of the labor force, highest percentage since March, 1964, and up from 4.6 per cent in December.

After adjustment for seasonal factors, the rate was 4.4 per cent, down from 4.7 per cent in December.

A report issued jointly by the manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said total employment dropped 244,000 from December.

But the labor force shrank by 133,000 as seasonal workers withdrew, resulting in the 111,000 increase in the unemployment count.

The job picture in brief (estimates in thousands):

	Jan. 1968	Dec. 1967	Jan. 1967
Labor force	7,564	7,697	7,364
Employed	7,100	7,344	6,983
Unemployed	464	353	381

The estimates are based on a survey of 35,000 households during the week ended Jan. 13. They do not include students and housewives who have not sought outside work, persons too old or unable to work, and the voluntarily idle or retired.

Council Re-acts Favorably

TRENTON — An Orillia council resolution calling for the increase in interest that may be charged on municipal tax arrears met a favorable reaction from Trenton councillors Monday night.

The resolution would petition the Department of Municipal Affairs to allow municipalities to raise interest ceilings on tax arrears to one per cent a month, instead of the present maximum two - thirds per cent monthly.

"It's good business," commented Councillor Paul Tripp.

"Some contend people often don't pay taxes because it's cheaper to owe the town than anyone else," added Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry.

Council agreed to refer the resolution to finance committee for further study.

Strictly Personal

The Brain Is the Thing

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

People speak of the journalist's "nose for news," or the painter's "long, sensitive fingers," or the musician's "ear." It pleases our primitive sense of fitness to believe that specially gifted people can smell or feel or hear better than ordinary people can in such fields.

But, of course, all this is a strained metaphor. Most artists I have known have had short, stubby fingers, more like brick-layers than esthetes. Where they "feel" is the same place the musician "hears" — in their brain, and not through any other organ.

For the last 20 years of his life, Renoir was immobilized by the most crippling kind of arthritis; he could scarcely unclench his hands. But he painted every day, by attaching the brush to his forearm; and his work done in this freakish manner is not at all distinguishable from his earlier work done with the full hand.

Beethoven, as everyone knows, on the way to invincible deafness, began transforming the sounds of music his ears could not hear into the most profound spiritual language. Beethoven literally "invented" his music, unlike Mozart, who seemed to have captured his from some inner structure already residing within the nature of things.

And, speaking of sound, it is not commonly known that the whole modern science of acoustics was begun in 1700 by Sauveur, a French physicist who was deaf and dumb from birth. He laid the foundation of acoustics long before its practical consequences were foreseen by anyone.

While it is true that everything we know we know through the senses, it is even more important that the sense alone can do nothing with such knowledge until it is codified and manipulated by the mind. The eye alone sees all objects upside down; it is the brain that puts them right side up again, so that even the simple act of "seeing" is not just a sensory function of the organ of sight.

And even in the interpretative arts, where natural equipment counts for a good deal (such as in singers or piano players), the ultimate pinnacle is not necessarily reached by those with the longest and most flexible fingers or the largest pair of lungs. Schnabel's technical fingering was often the despair of purists, but nobody else in our time could interpret the finest music as greatly as he could.

And a singer such as the late Mario Lanza had probably the most prodigious natural equipment of anyone in the world, but apparently a brain no larger than a pea, so that he squandered and ruined prematurely the physical gift he had been blessed with. For, alas, a voice, unlike a paintbrush, cannot be worn on the sleeve.

Trenton Council Briefs

TRENTON — At its meeting Monday evening Trenton council:

Approved a public works committee recommendation that property owners be charged the full cost for cleaning plugged sewer laterals, except for obstructions caused by trees growing on town property, or the collapsing of sewer pipes.

One such obstruction recently unearthed by Public Works employees in a home's sewer hookup was a diaper.

Approved a public works committee recommendation to increase the sewer deposit for lateral installation from $100 to $200, since $100 no longer covers the actual cost of the work.

Agreed to turn down a request from the E. L. Ruddy sign company to erect billboards in three areas within the town's boundaries.

The company asked permission to place the large advertising signs at Southeast Dundas and Byron Streets, Dufferin St. north of the CNR tracks, and at Sidney St. near the CPR subway.

Council felt the signs would be detrimental to town appearance.

Referred to the industrial committee the question of membership in the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council. Trenton dropped its membership in the industrial - promoting body three years ago.

Cost to join is seven cents per capita, amounting to $916 in Trenton's case, said clerk O. W. Larry.

General council feeling is that the town's industrial committee, under chairman Paul Tripp, with Mr. Larry's assistance, has been doing an enviable promotion job.

Approved the appointment of George Greer (Board of Education representative) and J. B. Kroeze (Separate School Board) to the 1968 Trenton Recreation Committee.

Agreed to meet in special session, Monday, Feb. 26 to discuss the ramifications for Trenton of the Smith Report on Taxation.

The Department of Municipal Affairs has invited municipal councils to submit a brief on the Smith Report by April 1.

Clerk O. W. Larry recently attended a special Toronto conference dealing with the taxation study.

Called for further study into the matter of installing sanitation facilities into homes where persons were unable to pay for them.

The Hastings County Health Unit recently recommended installation be carried out by the town in two local dwellings which were described as public health nuisances.

Clerk O. W. Larry cautioned council to consider the preferability of condemning such dwellings when installation of sanitary facilities would merely be delaying the necessary demolition of undesirable structures.

Weaver Named To Committees

TRENTON — Councillor Gerald Weaver will have a lot of catching up to do when he returns from his holiday in Hawaii.

At Monday's council session, his colleagues nominated Mr. Weaver as Trenton's representative on the Napanee Regional Detention Centre Committee, and as chairman of Trenton's Emergency Measures Organization local committee.

Mr. Weaver, elected to council Dec. 4 after several years' absence, is council's Protection to Persons and Property Committee chairman.

His absence did not give Mr. Weaver immediate opportunity to reply to a parking authority report, which opposed his bid to open the old post office property for free downtown parking.

Smoking Not Cause Of Blaze

Careless smokers are getting a bit more blame than they deserve in being responsible for fires.

Monday the local fire department reported a recent blaze at the home of Rudolf Rudolphi, 12 Symington Drive had been caused by careless smoking.

Later investigation however, has revealed the blaze started in a clothes hamper in the basement — as the result of combustion from an oily rag used in polishing furniture.

None of the Rudolphi family has the tobacco habit.

U.S. Air Force Commander Says Bombing Results Worth Cost

SAIGON (AP) — Gen. William M. Momyer looked back today on three years of bombing against North Vietnam and concluded that the losses are worthwhile and the efforts on the North widespread.

The air campaign has kept Hanoi's air force in the North and hit North Vietnamese logistics at their most vulnerable point, the commander of the U.S. 7th Air Force said. Without these factors, he suggested, combined forces losses in "a probable or possible expanded conflict in South Vietnam would more than offset what we've lost in terms of dedicated and heroic airmen in the North."

Regular bombing of the North began three years ago today. From the start, it has aroused international controversy, and last week's Viet Cong attacks on 35 South Vietnamese cities again raised such questions as these from critics:

—How effective have the more than 200,000 sorties been in curtailing the flow of military supplies and men to the South?

—Is the cost in human life, planes and bombs worth it?

Nearly 1,000 airmen have been killed or captured. It costs 283,000 to train a jet fighter pilot. At least 797 planes worth $1,600,000,000 have been downed over the North. More than 1,000,000 tons of bombs have been dropped.

Momyer, Gen. William C. Westmoreland's deputy commander for all U.S. air operations over Vietnam and Laos, summed up the results:

"I think we kept most of the war in the North, that we prevented his (the enemy's) air force from coming down where it was a threat to our forces in South Vietnam. . . . It's permitted us to use concentrated logistical installations like Da Nang, Cam Ranh Bay and the others that otherwise would be very difficult to operate if you didn't have control of the air. . . ."

"Secondly, I think we've had a major impact on disrupting his lines of communications and deploying of forces to the South. I think that we've upset his time schedule . . . that he needed in order to sustain the type of operations that are essential.

"And thirdly, I think that we've accomplished one of our objectives of bringing our close air support operations to a higher state of effectiveness than we've achieved at any other period in the war."

Has the bombing significantly reduced the flow of North Vietnamese troops and supplies into South Vietnam?

". . . Under the circumstances which we are fighting," Momyer said, "I feel our interdiction program has been highly successful in the disruption and inconvenience and the difficulties if has placed upon his system in moving these troops and equipment on a regular and scheduled basis."

Such critics as senators Robert F. Kennedy and William Fulbright have repeatedly urged a halt in the bombing to test North Vietnam's intentions to come to the peace table.

Last August Kennedy said the United States can't win the war for the South Vietnamese "no matter how much we bomb North Vietnam."

Momyer's answer is this: "I think the war in the North and the war in the South are all one and the same war. The fighting that we're doing in the South and the bombing that we're doing in the North, I think, have to go on concurrently for us to have the best opportunities of achieving our objectives."

The Experts Say

Leap Year Male Catch Will Go To Sweet Old-fashioned Girl

MONTREAL (CP) — If you want to catch and hold a man this Leap Year play it cool, girls.

Some of Montreal's bachelors and a few of its young married men dropped their guards in recent interviews to detail what the modern male wants in a woman.

The bachelors agreed that it takes more than a pre-marital affair to get them to the altar.

Pre-marital sex is "fun," they said, but it's no prerequisite for marriage.

As for total independence, the "new woman" free as a bird with no children, "you can keep it."

"No kids, no marriage," said the bachelors.

The married men agreed.

Said Bill Marrs, 27-year-old bachelor who works in advertising:

"I like a gal who's with it, who knows how to dress and how to make up, but she has to be mentally active. If she doesn't have any fabulous interests herself and latches on only to what I do, I'll soon become bored."

A resident doctor at Royal Victoria Hospital, 28 and single, said:

"A woman must be able to give of herself, yet she must play it cool to keep a man interested. I wouldn't mind if my wife didn't want children at the outset of our marriage, but if she said no children at all, I wouldn't marry her.

"And I don't think I'd ever marry a woman who was totally dependent on me".

Guy Jernaey, 34, married nine years and a sales representative, said he always steered clear of a woman who began to spout about not wanting to be tied down with children.

"When I first began to date my wife, it was because of a physical attraction. She looked neat and didn't advertise the product. If a girl has to over-advertise her product, there's probably something wrong with it."

What kept him coming back was "the fact she was genuinely interested in me yet had interests of her own."

One married man in his mid-30s gave this summation of marriage:

"Of course a successful marriage depends in part upon a good sexual relationship, but when the house is a mess I don't want a mistress. I want a girl who can take care of things. And when my child is sick, I want a mother for the child."

Frahm Ackhard, 30 and divorced, who works in a reservation office, commented:

"I was 18 when I got married and I thought sex was the most important thing. Now I'm looking for a girl who's likeable. You know, it's very important to like someone. I want her to be honest and interested in me. If she wants to work, that's fine."

A majority of bachelors said they were attracted to blondes more than brunettes, but most of the married men interviewed were wed to brunettes.

"Blondes are for fun but brunettes are for wives," said one bachelor.

Bachelors and married men were unanimous that they would marry a girl who was not a virgin, but would hesitate to marry one with a reputation for promiscuity.

Religion did not seem to be a factor in deciding about marriage as long as both parties had liberal attitudes toward the upbringing of children.

All the men interviewed agreed money problems were the single major factor leading to marital break-up, with misunderstanding running a close second.

Pork Is Plentiful, Economically Priced

Pork was a staple item in the Canadian diet even prior to Confederation. In fact barrels of salt pork were then regarded as important items of commerce. One's grandparents ate more pork than any other meat. In those days "eating high off the hog" meant living well on loin roasts and chops instead of salt pork.

Today the term does not have the same connotation that it once had. To most people "eating high" invariably means switching to beef, over the past 10 years we have continued to eat about the same amount of pork but the amount of beef consumed has increased tremendously.

This month the public can take advantage of pork for it is plentiful and economically priced. Look for the "specials" on certain cuts and save on your meat money. Pork is satisfying and nutritious for winter meals. It supplies valuable protein and is a good source of B vitamins and minerals.

The Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture have these tips on buying and preparing pork cuts.

Pork is sold in many forms — fresh, pickled, smoked, canned, and in ready-to-serve cuts. The higher priced cuts such as pork tenderloin, butterfly loin chops, back bacon and thick ham steaks are popular to serve when entertaining. Economy minded consumers can choose other cuts such as picnic shoulders, Boston butts, pork hocks, blade or shoulder steaks, pork hocks and shank portions of ham. Most of these are sold both cured and fresh. Boneless pork loins are tender and meaty and a good buy, particularly when offered as "specials".

All cuts of fresh pork are tender enough to be roasted. Roasts such as the leg, loin and shoulder are cooked at 325 deg. F. Roast the meat uncovered in the oven to the well-done stage (internal temperature should reach 185 deg. F. on a meat thermometer).

Pork chops and leg steaks are tender enough to panfry, covered, or may be baked. Shoulder chops and leg steaks are best braised in a well-seasoned gravy. Loin and rib chops may be broiled but care should be taken to thoroughly cook them.

Ann Landers

Student Wants Ann To Write His Essay

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a college freshman and when I tell you I am just barely making it, this is no exaggeration. I knew college was going to be rough but I didn't think it would take so much of my time.

I'm a little late with my psychology paper and I would certainly appreciate it if you would help me out. What I need is a rough draft, about 1200 words. I'd like you to list the principal causes for the deterioration of morality in our society. And please touch on the major problems of today's youth. Some authorities say the youth of today has more social pressures than the youth of 25 years ago. Please bring out this point.

ANN LANDERS

Thank you from the bottom of my heart, Annie old girl. I knew you wouldn't let me down. You have a kind face. I'll bet you weren't bad looking in your day. — EIGHT BALL.

DEAR EIGHT: So all you need is 1200 words — sort of a rough draft? Are you sure you don't want me to write the paper and have it typed in finished form? Look, Doll, every year about this time I get a few dozen requests from kids who would like me to do their work. I'll tell you what I tell the rest of them. Nobody wrote my papers when I was in school and I'm not going to write papers for anyone else. Haul your carcass over to the library (Slippery Rock has a fine one) and get to work, Bub.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 12-year-old boy who used to be happy and normal until my mother decided I should be a great piano player. I have been taking lessons for eight months and I hate it. Music is supposed to bring happiness but it is ruining my life.

I have thought of calling our doctor and asking him which is healthier for a growing child, to be in a stuffy house practising the piano or to be outside playing ball in the fresh air. Somebody said that Erroll Garner still practises every day. If a great piano player like that has to practise every day after all the playing he has done, when does a person get good enough to relax? Please help me. — NO MOZART

DEAR NO MO: Erroll Garner doesn't practice to get good. He practices to stay good. Keep beating those ivories, fella, even though you hate it. It's good discipline and one day you'll be glad your mother made you stick with it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Every time you print a letter knocking "drop in" company I bless you for it. I notice, however, some readers do not agree with you.

I have just figured out the rationale of the people who love drop-in company. They are the ones who like to do things the easy way. After all, an invitation carries with it an obligation to be well-groomed when you greet guests. One must have the house in order and refreshments on hand.

When people drop in, anything goes. Moreover the day is yours till the moment they arrive. What if the house is a mess? "I was cleaning the basement — forgive the way I look. I haven't baked a thing this week but if you'd like a cup of coffee — with cream, I'm afraid . . . "

When I entertain people I do it properly and I don't need any excuses for goofing off. — NO COP OUT.

DEAR COP OUT: You sound like someone I'd like for a friend. I wouldn't drop in on you and you wouldn't drop in on me. Who was it that said high fences make good neighbors?

Canadian Olympic Team Presents Colorful Picture

GRENOBLE (CP) — When it comes to color, the Canadians had it in abundance at the opening parade of the 10th Winter Olympic Games.

The 80 Canadians in Tuesday's opening ceremonies wore big Hudson Bay coats, ringed with bands of black, yellow, red and green — the Olypmic colors. They also wore white fur hats.

Many others among the 37 national teams also wore fur hats, commonly regarded as a Russian style. But the Russians were different. The Soviet team wore blue-and-white woollen caps, tipped with white pompoms.

Russian, West Germany, Italy, Norway and France were among countries which dressed their athletes in a nylon-type material. The Italians, in shiny, ill-fitting coats of royal blue nylon, were judged by some observers as the worst-dressed.

The nine representatives of tiny Liechtenstein were rated tops in sartorial elegance. They wore fur-trimmed, Edwardian-style coats and fur hats. Three-quarter length frock coats also were favored by several other teams.

Chile, Poland and East Germany were also high on the best-dressed list.

The East German men wore half-length camel-hair coats with hats to match and sealskin boots. The girls were all in red.

The United States team also wore red, with stylish blazers buttoned off-centre and a white band down the shoulders. The Americans wore dark blue headbands — not regarded as hats.

McGill Professor Appointed To Commission on Status of Women

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson announced the appointment Tuesday of John Peters Humphrey, a professor of law at McGill University, as a commissioner on the royal commission on the status of women.

Professor Humphrey, 62, served as director of human rights at the United Nations and was principal secretary in 1963 to the UN mission in Vietnam.

He replaces Donald Gordon, University of Waterloo political science professor who resigned the commission last fall, as the second male on the seven-member commission.

The commission, established by the federal government Feb. 16, 1967, is headed by Mrs. John Bird of Ottawa.

Other commissioners are Miss Elsie Gregory MacGill, Toronto, Mrs. Ottomar Lange, Claresholm, Alta., Miss Jeanne Lapointe, Quebec City, Mrs. Robert Ogilvie, Fredericton, N.B., and Jacques Henripin, Montreal.

The commission is scheduled to start its hearings April 15 in Victoria.

Social Workers' Group Marks 40th Anniversary

VANCOUVER (CP) — If life begins at 40, the Canadian Association of Social Workers has just started living, the national president said in an interview here.

"In this 40th anniversary of our association we are making sincere efforts to rebuild our Canadian society," Anne Demoulin said. "The professionals in our association are not just giving solutions to problems like poverty but are trying to rout out the reasons behind them."

Miss Demoulin said Canadians have reached the stage where there are more people wanting to hear what professionals have to say about social problems than there are people to say it.

"We are trying to dispel the picture of the social worker as a person who only picks up drunks out of the gutter . . .

"But our main problem is getting more people into social work."

Prairie Newspaper Women's Editor Dies

SASKATOON CP - Violet McNaughton, first women's editor of The Western Producer died here Saturday at the age of 88.

Mrs. McNaughton held the post for 25 years before retiring in 1950. She continued to contribute a weekly column until recent years.

She was made a member of the Order of the British Empire in 1934 for her service to agriculture and her interest in the welfare of rural women. She received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Saskatchewan in 1951.

She was elected first president of the women's division Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, and was one of the original signatories to the charter which established the Progressive party in Saskatchewan.

She was active in the fight for universal suffrage, and assisted in the organization of farm women in Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario.

Born Nov. 11, 1879, at Borden, Kent, England, she emigrated with her father to Canada in 1909 and married a homesteader, John McNaughton, in 1910.

Since retirement, Mrs. McNaughton divided her time between Saskatoon and Victoria. Her husband died in 1965.

Funeral will be in Saskatoon. Arrangements are pending.

Dinner Menu for Two

By MARY MOORE

Preparing a gourmet dinner for two career people is no small feat. I have made use of three convenience foods to produce this proud dinner for two tired but particular workers.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

DeLuxe Macaroni and Cheese (see Tues.); Broccoli; Harvard Beets; Tomato Aspic with Cucumber Dressing; Pumpkin Pie; Tea.

DINNER MENU FOR TWO

Crumbed baked chicken
Legs
Baked Squash
Buttered Spinach
Cheese Biscuits
Avocado with Lemon
Baked Bananas
Coffee

NOTE: You will have to do the grocery shopping one day in advance.

1) Before you take off your coat turn on the oven to 400 deg. Fahr.

2) The squash should be bought in foil boat, peeled and cut up. Sprinkle it with salt, pepper, cinnamon and brown sugar. Cover well with foil and put in oven at once. (Do not wait for heat to reach 400 deg.)

3) Melt 2 tablespoons butter in shallow baking dish in oven. Dip 2 (or 3) large chicken legs (thighs and drumsticks attached) in milk, drain, then shake each one separately in plastic bag containing Shake 's Bake crumb mixture. Arrange in baking dish, turn over to coat all with melted butter and put in oven, uncovered, at once. It requires at least 45 minutes.

4) Baked Bananas: Peel 3 large green-tipped bananas and cut in halves crosswise and arrange in 2 rows in small baking dish. In a small saucepan mix together ¼ cup bottled pure lemon juice, one-third cup granulated sugar and ¼ cup butter. Bring to boil, stirring to be sure sugar is dissolved. Pour evenly over bananas and put in oven.

5) Cheese Biscuits: Mix together in bowl ½ cup unsifted all-purpose flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder and one-third cup grated packaged nippy cheese. Cut in 2 tablespoons butter with pastry blender until size of peas. Stir in 5 tablespoons water to barely moisten all. Drop by tablespoonfuls [illegible] buttered baking sheet. You should have 4 medium-sized drop buscuits. Put in oven.

6) Wash one cello package spinach under running water, drain, put in large saucepan, cover and cook until limp and tender. Drain through colander and chop. Return to saucepan, sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon each salt and lemon juice and add 1 tablespoon butter. Stir and reheat over very low burner.

7) Wash then cut ripe avocado in halves lengthwise and remove stone but do not pare. Place each half on attractive bread-and-butter or tea plate, spoon 1 tablespoon lemon juice in each depression. Take to dining - room table on a large tray along with knives, forks, teaspoons, dessert spoons, salt and pepper, butter, cups and saucers, cream and sugar.

8) Make coffee.

9) Warm dinner plates under running hot water and dry. Remove squash and chicken from oven. Serve dinner plates with chicken, squash and spinach and carry to table. Test one biscuit to see if it is baked. Serve in napkin - lined small bun basket. Turn bananas over. Carry biscuits to table, sit and calm down, say Grace and enjoy your dinner.

10) Remove dinner plates. Serve 3 banana halves on two dessert plates, pour pan syrup over. Carry them and coffee to table and now savor this lovely dessert. Without a helping hand I did this in 1¼ hours With a helping hand you can accomplish it in one hour.

Points for Parents

Mother: "Whenever I punish Dickie, he acts so mean to the baby for the rest of the day. He hits her every time she crawls over and bothers him."

Mother: "Dickie, the baby doesn't know any better than to grab your little cars. You must not hurt her. Let's move your race track into the living room where she can't bother you."

Couple Fight and Apologize Later

Dear Doris: My husband is 46. I am 26. We fight a good deal, about sex, about my mother, about having a family. He hit me once when I was crying, then slept in the other room. Next morning we both apologized.

One time he wanted to lie with his head in my lap, as I sat on the couch, and I refused because my mother was there. At bedtime we had a fight over that

What do we do? He doesn't want us to see a counsellor. — Upset.

Dear Upset: Fights are not taboo, if it's the only way you can get your feelings out and look at them. Naturally the ideal is to gain enough poise to explain yourselves to each other without high and hurtful emotions.

Would it have ruined anything to show a little affection in front of your mother? I'm thinking he wanted just that: some demonstration to your mother that you cared about him.

You have a gap of a whole generation to bridge in achieving oneness with a man 46. If you don't want a counsellor (which is a stupid way to limit yourselves), you'll just have to learn enough about sex, about family relationships and your own personalities, that you can talk things out without such help.

The book list on "Sex, Marriage and Birth Control" is on its way.

Dear Doris: How do I convince people that two heart attacks in as many months don't exactly leave one brimming over with vim, vigor and vitality?

True, I am only in my 40's, and for 20 years I was everybody's Girl Friday. In any given situation the magic words were: "Phone good old Ruth; she'll know what to do, or she'll come over to look after you." Now that I have to say No, some of these people act as though I've done them a grave injustice by daring to get ill, and becoming somewhat less than the rock of Gibraltar. — Crumbling Rock.

Dear Crumbling: Hardy souls may not have the first inkling of what it means to lack git-up-and-go. They may look at you and disbelieve what you say. Seldom does one wear heart disease on one's sleeve.

But does your sympathetic soul have to crumble with the physical handicap? I know one asthma and heart sufferer who never gets out, but is the mainstay by telephone of a dozen or so ailing or worry-wart relatives.

Then there is the table-turning technique. Perhaps you could make more permanent improvement in your particular lame ducks by beginning to lean on them. Nothing helps a person like being needed.

Confidential to "A Friend": Thank you for those kind words. It is true that in teenage years there is a great love of excitement — which is sometimes mistaken for the excitement of love. I hate to say this, but there are times when the kindest thing a parent or older person can do is to help a Cloud Nine teen-ager to drop back to earth, even if the thump hurts.

Longer, fuller replies went privately to those correspondents who enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Girl Shoots Self Rather Than Kill Dog--Parents Supply Gun

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Linda Marie Ault killed herself rather than make her mongrel dog Beauty pay for her night with an air force lieutenant, police said Tuesday.

Detective Ronald Cromer quoted her father as saying of his divorcee daughter:

"I killed her, I killed her. It's just like I killed her myself.

"I handed her the gun. I didn't think she would do anything like that."

The 21-year-old Arizona State University student died in hospital Monday of a gunshot wound in the head.

Detectives Cromer and Dan Rodriguez quoted her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ault as giving this account:

Linda went to a dance Friday night. When she returned home at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, she told her parents she had spent the night with an air force lieutenant, and had been intimate with him.

The Aults told her they wanted her to marry him. They called the lieutenant and were allegedly told by the officer that he was married. However, this was not confirmed.

On Sunday morning, the Aults decided on a punishment that would "wake Linda up." Ault told her she was to kill the dog she had owned about two years.

The three went into the desert about 100 yards from their home, Linda leading Beauty on a leash.

They had the girl dig a shallow grave.

Ault loaded his .22-calibre revolver, leaving the hammer on an empty chamber.

As Mrs. Ault held the dog, Linda pointed the pistol at her pet, and the mother looked down at the dog. She moved the gun away. The mother thought she was stalling.

The girl then placed the pistol to her right temple and fired.

Police said there were no charges that could be filed against the parents, except possibly cruelty to animals.

War Demonstrations

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto, concerned about recent student-staff demonstrations against the Vietnam war and the growing use of narcotics on campus, has appointed a 10-member committee to review staff and student discipline.

Acting President John H. Sword, in making the announcement Tuesday, said there has been "a growing feeling that our disciplinary arrangements are cumbersome and outmoded."

"Certainly they have not come under close examination for many years."

The review committee, to be headed by Ralph Campbell, associate dean of arts and science, will include three students. It will redefine the limits of the university's jurisdiction, including policy in the use of narcotics.

Consolidation Issue

Teachers Study Program

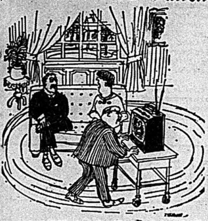
TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Teachers' Federation has launched a program in an effort to ensure that the provincial government's re-organization of school boards does not dilute the quality of education.

Federation President H. R. Wilson said Monday the group is organizing teachers' associations throughout the province to study the government's proposed reorganization in their regions. The federation will also offer the services of advisory committees to present the views of regional teachers to superintendents.

He said the federation will survey its 85,000 members to determine which of the units proposed for their areas the teachers consider workable.

Education Minister William Davis said last week the school board consolidation program will involve replacing 1,012 public, elementary and secondary school boards next Jan. 1 with about 80 divisional boards of education. The net result of the program would be to reduce the total number of school boards to about 600 from the present 1,446.

THE PICK OF Punch



"Doctor told him to walk at least an hour a day."

Reduced Training

Emergency Measures Budget to Be Chopped

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Drury Tuesday announced cuts in the civil defence program involving reduced training and the placing of some facilities on a standby basis.

But he added in a Commons statement that the Canada Emergency Measures Organization will continue and that there will be no wholesale dismantling of facilities.

Reductions in civil defence spending were promised in the government's Dec. 7 statement outlining planned spending cuts.

Mr. Drury said his statement was designed to clarify questions that had arisen because of that announcement.

He said the government has approved a series of recommendations arising from a detailed study by EMO.

"The government will continue to support this important work but with a reduced budget, a streamlined organization and improved national management and co-ordination," he said.

Greater emphasis would be placed on emergency planning, as part of the day-to-day work of governments on all levels. This was a change from the training of large groups of volunteers as civil defence workers.

Major systems such as the emergency broadcasting system and emergency government operating centres would be maintained in a reduced state, "but in a condition that will allow their activation in short order" in the event of a crisis.

None Reported Killed

Safety of Canadians Confirmed

OTTAWA (CP) — The safety of most Canadians in Vietnam has been confirmed but a few remain unaccounted for, Industry Minister Drury told the Commons Tuesday.

He also told Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) that while communication with communities beyond Saigon and other centres remained difficult, there had been no reports of Canadians being killed last week.

Replying to questions asked Monday by Michael Starr (PC—Ontario), Mr. Drury said the government continues to regard the International Control Commission, of which Canada is a member with India and Poland, as the "one surviving institution" of the 1954 Geneva agreement on Indo-China.

Although External Affairs Minister Martin, for whom he was replying, had often mentioned the frustrations, the commission had not been rejected by either side in the Vietnam war and remained potentially useful.

Mr. Starr asked Monday whether the government "continues to feel there is any basis in reality for any useful role for Canada at the present time on the commission."

Opposition Members Urge Higher Exemptions for Income Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs appealed for higher tax exemptions for the ordinary Canadian Tuesday night as the Commons debated legislation to implement income tax increases announced in the government's Nov. 30 mini-budget.

The measure finally was given second reading—approval in principle—by an 84 to 73 vote. Only the Liberals supported the bill.

They were opposed by 50 Conservatives, 14 New Democrats, four Creditistes, four Social Crediters and Independent Gilles Gregoire (Lapointe).

Standings in the 265-seat House: Liberals 130; PC 95; NDP 22; Creditiste 8; Social Credit 4; Independent 3; vacant 3.

The government announced a five-per-cent income tax surcharge in the mini-budget. It has been in effect since Jan. 1.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) criticized the $600 limit on the surcharge. The average taxpayer, he said, should not have to carry the brunt of Mr. Sharp's fight against inflation.

Mr. Peters said more realistic basic tax exemptions would be $4,000 for a married man and $2,000 for a single man, instead of the present $2,000 and $1,000 limits.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax), pressed the argument for higher income tax exemptions claiming that most Canadians spend all their income on food, clothing, shelter and health care. Inflation for them meant less food or poorer houses.

Conservative House Leader Michael Starr said the finance minister should have encouraged consumer demand and industrial production. Instead, he had increased the money supply, reduced industrial production, raised imports and hobbled exports.

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) urged the government to give tax concessions to single parents and working mothers.

Bud Germa (NDP—Sudbury) called the bill the most dastardly piece of legislation he had seen in his six months in the Commons.

Russian Subs Get New Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviets are reported to be refitting some of their submarines with nuclear missiles capable of achieving twice the range of present weapons from submerged firing positions.

The program, to permit the Soviet G Class subs to fire their missiles from below the ocean's surface, indicates the U.S.S.R. has mastered technology pioneered with U.S. Polaris missile-firing submarines, U.S. defence department sources said.

These sources said the new missiles will have a range of about 800 miles.

Sources would not say how the U.S. learned of the G Class refit.

G Class subs make up most of Soviet submarines capable of launching ballistic missiles.

Over-all, the Soviet Union has about 350 submarines, largest sub force in the world. But most are attack submarines designed to sink shipping or enemy subs rather than to bombard hostile countries with missiles. U.S. strategists believe the missiles aboard the G Class subs are aimed against strategic objectives in the Eurasian land mass.

However, the missiles in nuclear-powered H Class subs with a range reported to be up to 3,000 miles, are believed targeted against the United States.

Ameliasburg Dilemma

Combined School Area Possible Answer to Township Plight

By ROGER WORTH
Staff Reporter

Ontario minister of education, William Davis, claims it is conceivable Hastings and Prince Edward County boards of education may be united sometime in the future.

In reply to a request from Ameliasburg township that students be allowed to continue attending classes in Belleville the minister states: "It may be that Prince Edward and Hastings County may at some time in the future decide to unite."

Secondary students from Ameliasburg have been attending Belleville schools for the past 40 years and new government legislation would link them with Prince Edward County. This means students would be forced to travel between 15 and 30 miles to attend Prince Edward Collegiate in Picton.

Officials of the Bay of Quinte High School Board said this morning about 300 students from Prince Edward County attend schools in Belleville.

The resolution from the township, passed at a special meeting on Jan. 23, protested the fact that the government's re-organization of school jurisdictions would mean a 30 mile trip for some students.

"We also felt we get a wider variety of classes for our youngsters in Belleville," clerk-treasurer William Nightingale said today.

"The students have more choice when there are four schools rather than the one in Picton. The quality of education is higher."

The letter from the minister also points to the fact that students attending Belleville secondary schools at the present time would continue until they have completed their courses.

This is also included in government guide lines concerning the setting up of the new county-wide boards of education.

Mr. Nightingale says Ameliasburg is also concerned about the public school system when the change is made on Jan. 1, 1969. The four public schools handling a total of 600 students would be administered by the Prince Edward County board of education when it is formed.

Apparently the township has contacted Prince Edward-Lennox MLA Norris Whitney to set-up a meeting with Mr. Davis.

At the present time Ameliasburg has two appointed members on the Bay of Quinte High School Board.

Government guide lines for the changeover to county jurisdiction on education state: "Where a former school jurisdiction prior to Jan. 1, 1969 included parts of two or more counties the students from the portion in one county attended school in another county, it is proposed that the students who attended such schools in another county will have the right to complete their education at those schools."

"In the future students residing in that portion of the new school division will also have the right to attend those schools in the neighboring school division until such time as the boards of education concerned mutually agree to make other arrangements for their accommodation."

Many residents of Ameliasburg are upset over the change in jurisdiction although a small group have petitioned county council for the right to be included in the Prince Edward County board.

This group feels a second secondary school in the Ameliasburg area is a possibility.

If the minister of education's suggestion for a consolidated two county board was instituted it would create one of the largest boards of education in eastern Ontario.

The new Hastings County board will cover 2,400 square miles and will include an area about 100 miles in length.

Some Hastings county officials claim even this area is too large and unwieldly to administer under a single board. They contend that it will be difficult to get equal representation for the northern end of the county.

The new board of education in Hastings will have 16 members. In Prince Edward County the board will have 14 representatives.

If a two-county board were formed as the minister suggests, the total area would be served by an 18-member board.

The minister states in his letter to Ameliasburg township: "We propose to make it possible in the future for boards of education in adjoining counties to unite under one board of education.

"But there is no intention to require such action."

Under the consolidation to take place in January of 1969 representation on school boards in Hastings County will be reduced from 131 members to 16.

In Prince Edward County the representation will drop from 60 trustees to 14 members on a single elected board of education.

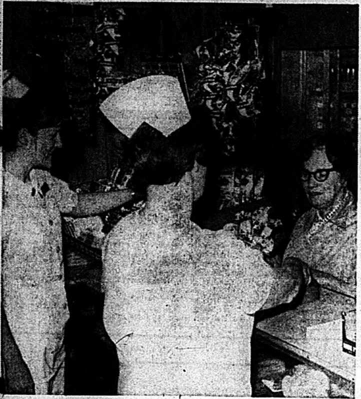
In guidelines for consolidation presented by education minister Davis last week he contends the new boards will assume greater responsibility for the supervision of school programs within their jurisdictions.

Interim committees to prepare comprehensive reports on the education systems in both counties are being formed as an initial step in the reorganization.

These committees will include one representative from each board in existence at the present time. They will hold their first meetings later this month.

It is expected that elections for positions on the two county wide boards of education will be held next Sept. or Oct.

The number of members of boards is based on the total population of the area. With less than 50,000 population, Prince Edward County gets 14 members. The 16-member representation in Hastings is based on a total population of 87,235.



Business Always Brisk

CNIB store at Belleville General Hospital does brisk business all day. Here manager Betty Dobson waits on hospital staffers before readying for visiting-hours rush.

Operators of Store at General Hospital Handle Job Despite Sight Handicap

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A store far removed from the city's sidewalks doing a thriving walk-in business?

For Belleville, it's one of the tangible exhibits in proving how the blind are gainfully occupied in modern community living.

Nearly every Bellevillian has done business at the store in Belleville General Hospital. It's so accepted a part of the scene few customers likely surmise its significance.

However, the bustling operation has its own niche in the achievement pattern of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The Belleville General shop is run by members of the CNIB, which for years has made possible the rehabilitation of the blind across Canada.

Its success is being currently marked by CNIB Week.

For manager Mrs. Betty Dobson and Douglas Huffman the store is no chore.

"For us it really isn't work at all," reveals Mrs. Dobson. "We enjoy being here."

"We do as much business as a small downtown store," she says.

Reason for the bustle is also business-like: the operation has never stood still. Its range of offerings have expanded through the years.

In its early years it dispensed cigarettes and soft drinks in the old waiting area of the General.

"Now we sell everything from (imitation) flower displays to bobby pins," says Mrs. Dobson.

Its busiest time is visiting hours at the hospital. Between times the demand still is high from hospital staff and patients.

Fore some, in slacker hours, it also is a pocket-size social centre.

"Patients just come in to talk with us. They say it helps cheer them up," said the store manager.

Mrs. Dobson is partially blind.

Assistant manager Huffman has a total loss of sight, but the store poses no problems.

He has memorized every item of stock for ready service.

There's something more:

"We have to trust our public," Mrs. Dobson admits.

Mr. Huffman can discern value of coins by touch. Bills are something else.

Once, some customers - admittedly few and far between - took advantage of the shop hands and lied about the value of paper money.

"Now we don't change a big bill unless we have somebody confirm its size," says the manager.

"But the majority of people are honest. Overly honest some of them. They sometimes come back thinking you've given them too much change.

"I think it's a wonderful thing to be able to trust your public," she muses. "But then, we also like people to know we do appreciate them all."

Montreal Firm Wins Contract With $374,000 Bid

Contract for Napanee Building Awarded

OTTAWA (Special) — R. E. Stewart Construction Corporation, of Montreal, has been awarded a $374,000 contract for construction of a federal building at Napanee, Public Works Minister George J. McIlraith has announced.

Tenders were opened Dec. 13, and the successful bid was the lowest of eight received. The high bid was $418,281.

A 90-by-60-foot, two-storey building is to bt built on Napanee's Centre street, where the Armory building now stands. The building will house the post office department, the national employment service, customs offices and the department of public works.

The structure is to be reinforced concrete frame on a reinforced concrete foundation bearing on solid rock 12 feet below street level. Exteriors will be faced with brick and precast concrete. A full basement will house storage space and a boiler room.

King of the Instruments

Otto Seifert describes the organ as king of the instruments. Here he plays the one at Eastminster United Church where he has become organist end choir leader.

Newcomer to City

Organist, Teacher Has Varied Background

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

A distinguished musician is probably the best way to describe Otto Seifert, the new organist and choir leader at Eastminster United Church, here in Belleville.

Mr. Seifert just recently came to Belleville, to commence activities as organist and choir leader and as a teacher of the organ.

He was born in Dresden, Germany where he spent the first 30 years of his life. He was educated there, at the State Conservatory of Dresden where he studied music.

From there he took post graduate studies at the Vienna Music Academy under a man whom he remembers only as Professor Popr-Grama. He graduated in 1940.

Mr. Seifert spent some time in Austria as a high school teacher as well, teaching at the State high school in Melk.

"I liked it in Austria," he says. "I liked it very much." Mr. Seifert explains that the country is so musical and musical people get along well together.

While in Germany he was a choir leader and organist and has kept at it even upon his coming to Canada.

Mr. Seifert played violin in the Northern German city of Wilhelmshaven in its Philharmonic orchestra.

When he came to Canada in 1951, he went to the Peace River District in Alberta, where he remained for eight years.

Mr. Seifert founded and conducted the Lethbridge Camber Orchestra when he moved to the Alberta City.

"We were quite popular and had quite a few engagements," he remembers.

After Lethbridge he continued to move in Canada and went to Truro, Nova Scotia, where he taught school as a music specialist.

Teaching is probably his first love but he enjoys the choirs and being organist. "Once, in Germany, I had three choirs all at once."

To Mr. Seifert no instruments are as lovely as the organ and the violin. "The organ is the king of instruments and the violin the queen."

Of the teaching Mr. Seifert remembers well when he was engaged by the German government for singing classes during a week in Germany called "sing week."

"Teachers and youth groups got together for three subjects, folk-dancing, drama and singing."

Concerning future plans he would like to remain in Canada. "I like Canada. I am a Canadian citizen."

Still, he would like to visit Germany again. "I haven't forgotten my homeland."

Belleville he describes as friendly, and he hopes to continue teaching here.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

Sports Editor

It was the consensus of the ancient and honorable members of the weekly bull session that the miners for Sunday sport struck pay-dirt — at least hockey-wise.

Said Harry the Hat, "the presence of 2,147 paid puck addicts plus the season ticket holders and the free-loaders at last Sunday's tiff between the Mo-Hawks and Guelph, proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that what the hockey sawbones ordered was the right medicine for the box-office flu."

"You must remember," chimed in Five-Finger Freddie "that there are several factors to be taken into consideration — most of them in favor of the Mo-Hawk cabinet and back-benchers."

"Such as . . ." murmured Whispering Willie.

"First," offered Freddie, "in the Mo-Hawks you have a resurgent team that bounced back from an early-season condition of lethargy and tired blood to a fighting contender for a playoff spot."

"That's right," said Louis the Lip. "Sunday or no Sunday the fans today won't patronize a club that sags in the middle and droops at both ends. You gotta squeeze in the occasional win."

"That was proven," hissed Horace the Hogger "by the marked increase at the box-office when the Mo-Hawks shook off the apathy and third-period weariness and started to show their true potential."

"And another thing," injected Willie, "the downtown part of the city is where peace reigneth on a Sunday afternoon. The stores are closed, the streets almost vacant. And most important of all there is plenty of parking space for would-be hockey fans."

"That's right," injected Horace. "On Friday nights when the old man's wallet takes a beating at the shops you couldn't park a scooter downtown with a shoehorn."

"Also, mes amis," lipped Louie "the hours are great. The hockey game last Sunday started at 1.30 and the crowd was home by four-thirty. This gave them a chance to see their favorite afternoon television show, snatch a snort and have dinner before settling down to a quiet evening."

"I imagine," quoth Harry the Hat, "that the Mo-Hawk brass after last Sunday's record-breaker, is smiting itself on the south side of the lap for not inaugurating Sunday hockey earlier. Perhaps they ran into schedule trouble."

Bert the Brush stroked his chin foliage, thought for a moment then sifted through his beard, "Some of you guys are looking forward to summer Sunday sports and visioning standing room only in the open-air diamond stadia."

"Don't count your summer chickadees before they crack the shell."

"Remember the diamond sports have been played on Sunday before and I have never noticed any management calling for help to assist taking the proceeds to the bank."

"I agree," hissed Horace. "Summer has a great many more counter attractions than the winter athletics. Come Friday night and there's the call of the highways; the cabins, cottages and beaches, not to mention the fishing haunts."

After the record turnout of last Sunday it almost goes without saying that hockey on that day is a surety in the future.

And you can bet your income tax rebate that the Mo-Hawk brass will insist on Sunday games in the upcoming playoffs — if and when.

I don't know if the crowd here was a league record. It seems to me the Toronto Marlboros have been quoted as playing before thousands in Maple Leaf Gardens.

When they drubbed the Kingston Aces 6-5 with a six-goal third-period comeback a short time ago, one Toronto newspaper said it was played before "less than 1,000." An opposition paper had it "before a sparse 200 fans."

There was some wishful thinking done here, too, after last Sunday's big turnout — on the part of the owners of the city's downtown suds emporia.

And a lot of the joy of life was taken from some 22 hockey fans last Sunday who parked their cars outside the arena. The limbs of the law out for the Sunday afternoon stroll tacked parking tickets on their windshields.

Tonight In Montreal

Leafs At Chicago

Zooming Flyers Tangle With Habs!

By GRAHAM COX

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The fired-up Flyers from Philadelphia and Montreal's equally potent Canadiens are ready for a National Hockey League showdown.

High noon for the two clubs is tonight in Montreal when the Western Division leading Flyers and Canadiens, leaders in the East, match shooting power in one of five scheduled games.

The Canadiens had a 12-game winning streak snapped Sunday by New York Rangers while the Flyers extended their expanded Western Division lead with weekend victories over Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs.

Chicago won the regular season schedule last year and the Leafs are defending Stanley Cup champions. Both are top contenders in the East division this year.

Two players instrumental in the Flyers two weekend wins—centres Forbes Kennedy and Lou Angotti—foresee ominous stormclouds for the Canadiens.

"That's two down and the Canadiens to go," said Kennedy, a Charlottetown native. "We'll beat them Wednesday night in Montreal."

Angotti earlier said he feels now the way he felt when with Chicago last season and the Hawks were on the verge of their first league championship since joining the league.

As for the Canadiens, they still are unsettled following reports that centre Henri Richard is considering retirement after a brilliant 13-year career with the club. A series of knee injuries has impaired his effectiveness.

Coach Toe Blake said Tuesday, with the exception of Richard the club is fully fit.

He also said that Lorne Worsley probably will play goal against the Flyers in his first start since suffering a pulled hamstring in a pre-game warm-up at Pittsburgh Jan. 10.

In tonight's other games, the Leafs are at Chicago while Boston Bruins are at St. Louis Blues, Pittsburgh Penguins are in Oakland against the Seals and Minnesota North Stars take on the Kings at Los Angeles.

The game in Montreal, though, could be a hockey classic as well as a fore-taste of the Stanley Cup final this year with both teams showing startling similarities where it counts—down the centre.

With Worsley and Vachon, the Habs have the best goaltending combination in the league with a combined 2.14 goals-against average. In third place over-all and first in the expansion division is the Philadelphia combination of Doug Favell and Bernie Parent, with a combined 2.28 average.

The Canadiens though have Jean Beliveau with 21 goals, Jacques Lemaire with 15 and Ralph Backstrom with 14 goals. In comparison, Philadelphia centres Angotti, Bill Sutherland and Kennedy have 10, 15 and seven respectively.

CFL Commissioner

Gaudaur; To Be Or Not To Be

VANCOUVER (CP) — Appointment of Jake Gaudaur of Hamilton as commissioner of the Canadian Football League appears certain to just about everybody but Jake Gaudaur.

The CFL annual meeting opened in Vancouver Tuesday, amid reports that Gaudaur has the commissiiner's job in his back pocket.

Gaudaur, who has played a prominent role in the CFL for 28 years as player, director, general manager and president of the Tiger-Cats, first was reported in Hamilton to have divested himself of his financial interests in the Hamilton club so that he could take the commissioner's post.

And when he arrived in Vancouver later Tuesday, he told reporters:

"I consider this job one of the top sports executive jobs in the world. I will present myself to the commissioner selection committee and let them know what my position is."

Still later, however, Gaudaur said reports that he has sold his interests in the Ticats were "a little premature."

"While it's true my affairs are in order in case the job is offerered to me, I haven't gotten rid of my interests in the Tiger-Cats yet.

"People just don't divest themselves of their interests in one job before they have another job."

Officially, Gaudaur won't know until Thursday if he has the position. CFL President Allan McEachern of Vancouver took over on an interim basis a year ago after Senator Keith Davey resigned under pressure after 54 days on the job.

Today, the commissioner selection committee—McEachern, Hugh McColl of Edmonton, Dr. Neville Winograd of Winnipeg, Sam Berger of Ottawa and Joe Atwell of Montreal—must decide if Gaudaur is the man it wants.

Then, Thursday, the committee must present Gaudaur to the rast of the CFL executive for approval. Each of the rine teams has a cote, and eight affirmative ballots are required.

Thad Spencer Not Drunk, Says Spencer

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A jury deliberates today a drunken driving charge against Thad Spencer, the heavyweight boxer who lost to Jerry Quarry last Saturday in the World Boxing Association title eliminations.

Spencer, of San Francisco, denied in Municipal Court Tuesday that he was under the influence of alcohol when highway patrolmen arrested him.

Spencer spent four hours in Riverside County Jail last Dec. 8 after patrolmen said they clocked him at 95 miles an hour on the Riverside Freeway.

Aces Whip Marlies

Single Loss; Orillia Out!

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A single loss will eliminate Orillia from a playoff berth in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series.

The prospect became a fact Tuesday night after Woodstock drubbed Orillia 10-5. With four games remaining in regular league play, Orillia remains in last place, eight points behind Belleville Mo-Hawks who also have only four games to play.

Orillia has only managed 10 wins in 36 games this season.

Belleville holds the eighth and final playoff position in the 10-team league. The Mo-Hawks have 28 points, Oakville Oaks 24, and Orillia 20.

In other action, Kingston Aces broke a six-game losing streak by defeating Toronto Marlboros 5-2 at Kingston.

Woodstock was led by the line of Gary Sharp, Dino Leggio and Dan Mahoney. Sharp had three goals, Leggio two goals and three assists, and Mahoney a goal and four assists.

Other Woodstock marksmen were Art Sullivan with two, Jerry Harringan and Nick Smith.

George Ford scored twice for Orillia with single goals going to Bill Little, Ken Thompson and Allan Micks.

The Aces got two goals from Bob Dawson and Jim Sprott and one from Ron Earl.

Olympics; Away And Running!

By BRUCE LEVETT

Canadian Press Sports Editor

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — The 10th Winter Olympic Games, a measure of harmony restored to it by executive compromise, sent its skiers, skaters and bobsledders into action today.

The Games were declared open Tuesday by President de Gaulle, participating with 9,000 other persons in impressive opening ceremonies before 60,000 spectators. Uncounted millions in Europe and North America watched on television.

Canada's national hockey team started its quest for an Olympic medal in good style by defeating West Germany 6-1. It was one of three championship-round hockey games which made up the entire athletic program on opening day.

The Soviet Union swamped Finland 8-0 and Czechoslovakia downed the United States 5-1.

Of utmost significance for the success of the Games was an agreement reached Tuesday by the International Olympic Committee and the International Ski Federation to curb commercialism.

Canada's Nancy Greene, her left ankle mended after a January accident, will compete in the women's downhill runs Thursday. Seventh in the downhill in the 1964 Games, the 24-year-old Rossland, B.C., skier wants an Olympic medal as a follow-up to her 1967 World Cup triumph.

At 7 a.m. (1 a.m. EST), 32 girls began the long grind in quest of the women's figure skating medals.

Peggy Fleming of the United States, world figure-skating champion, is a heavy favorite, and she drew a favorable starting number, 18.

Canada's chief hopes rested with 15-year-old Karen Magnussen of North Vancouver, the Canadian champion, who reported Tuesday that a slight skate cut had healed and she was ready to compete.

Canada's other women's singles skaters are Linda Carbonetto, 18, of Toronto, and Lyndsai Cowan, 19, of West Vancouver.

Compulsory figures have been reduced to five from six for the current Olympics, with two figures to be skated today and three Thursday. Compulsory figures count as 60 per cent of the total score.

The medals will be awarded Saturday night at the conclusion of free-style competition.

The Games' first medals were up for winning today in the 30-kilometre-18.6-mile-cross-country ski race, with 66 men from 19 countries setting out at 30-second intervals.

Canada had three entries—Rolf Pettersen of Prince George, B.C., in the 27th starting position, David Rees of North Bay, Ont., in 39th position, and Nils Skulbru of Vancouver in 59th.

The first two heats of the two-man bobsled event were to be held under the lights tonight at Alpa d'Huez, 36 miles from Grenoble. The remaining two heats will be run off Thursday night.

Canada's No. 1 team of Purvis McDougall, Montreal, and Bob Storey, Collingwood, Ont., was drawn to start 18th tonight. The No. 2 team of Hans Gehrig and Harry Goetschi, both of Montreal, was to start 13th.

There were four hockey games on tap here. In the championship round, Sweden played the U.S. and the Soviet Union met East Germany. In group B, the games were Japan vs. Yugoslavia and Romania vs. Austria.

Women's Curling

Dryden Rink Wins Title

KINGSTON (CP) — It took a great many missed shots, but Peggy Wherrett and her rink from Dryden still managed to win the Ontario women's curling championship Tuesday.

The victory in the three-rink double round-robin event advanced the Dryden quartet into the Dominion championship Feb. 26-March 2 in Winnipeg.

With the last of the six rounds still to be played today, Mrs. Wherrett's crew has an unbeatable 3-0 won-lost record while Grace Saint of Kingston is 1-3 and Ricki Mathew of Timmins is 1-2.

Mrs. Wherrett was to play Mrs. Mathew in today's windup event, which could have no bearing on the championship.

Even her decisive victory, a 9-8 win over Mrs. Saint, was gained with the last rock in the final end. Mrs. Wherrett Monday defeated Mrs. Saint 10-8 in an extra end and Mrs. Mathew 8-5. Mrs. Saint won her Monday match from Mrs. Mathew 9-5 then lost to the Timmins skip 10-5 Tuesday.

On the Wherrett rink are third Shirley Lake, second Doreen McKay and lead Audrey Tew.

Olympics Briefs

GRENOBLE (AP) — One of the loudest roars heard at the opening ceremony of the Olympics Tuesday was for 350 Olympic hostesses who came over the rim of the stadium and marched in formation on to the infield.

Labelled bunnies because of their red rabbit fur coats and tight fitting blue ski pants, the girls are serving as interpreters for athletes, newsmen and officials.

When President de Gaulle sat down in the stadium, one of the bunnies rushed over and tried to place a blanket over his legs. But de Gaulle brushed her away, refusing the blanket, and the girl stepped aside.

As Alain Calmat ran up 101 steps to light the Olympic flame, the crowd of 60,000 could hear his heartbeat. An electronic device was attached to his chest, and the sound was amplified through the loudspeakers.

American League

Eight Teams, Four Ties

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The American Hockey League today has a case of blurred vision that only a couple of victories can cure. Standings show each of the eight teams tied with one of the others.

In the Western Division Rochester Americans and Cleveland Barons have 56 points while Quebec Aces and Buffalo Bisons have 46.

The same situation exists in the Eastern Division where Hershey Bears and Springfield Kings each have 52 points while Baltimore Clippers and Providence Reds have 47.

Rochester, Baltimore and Quebec created the rare situation Tuesday night when the Americans and the Clippers tied 4-4 and the Aces bumped the Reds 5-3.

Hawks Rally, 6-6 Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oshawa Generals learned an important lesson Tuesday night that can be applied to hockey—don't count your chickens before they are hatched.

The Generals, tied for eighth place in the 10-team Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, led St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-2 after eight minutes of the third period only to see the fired-up Black Hawks come back and score four goals for a 6-6 tie.

With The Trotters

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Driver Al Webster of Goshen, N.Y., reined Grandiloquence to victory in the feature mile pace Tuesday night before 4,454 fans at Windsor Raceway.

Grandiloquence paid $12.50, $7.20 and $3.50.

In the fifth, Janice M. Gratton and Hickory Harry combined for a $74.20 quinella. The daily double paid $33.90.

Midgets Draw 110 Minutes In Penalties

In a midget game played last night the Trenton Lions defeated Belleville Ellis 6-3 in a game that had a touch of hockey Vietnam.

According to the scoresheet the teams injected some semblance of hockey in a game that saw both sides battle it out with sticks and fists.

Referee Tom Glover handed out no less than 34 penalties that amounted to 110 minutes.

Trenton drew 19 of the sentences.

Three misconducts and four majors were included. The rest were minors for-you-name it — and you have it.

The teams battled to a 1-1 tie in the first period and Trenton wrapped up the win with three in the second against a single return. They held a 2-1 scoring edge in the third.

Long sparked the Trenton win with four goals, Teeple and Farrell scoring the others.

Ferguson drew three assists, Howard, Danylchuk, Hadley and Webb getting singles.

McKenzie, Moore and Healey scored for Belleville, Meagher drawing two assists, Buchanan and McCormack one each.

Damascus Seeks Record

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Santa Anita makes up for lost time Saturday by staging a double-header—Damascus heading one cast and Australian Tobin Bronze the other.

Racing resumed at the track today following agreement on a new contract which boosts purses to 43 per cent of the track's share of pari-mutuel receipts.

The pact ended three days of boycotting by horse owners who refused to enter races ard caused the track to cease operations Friday, Saturday and Tuesday. No races were scheduled Sunday or Monday.

Damascus, with scheduled rider Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., will be seeking an unprecedented sweep of Santa when he heads the lineup in the $100,000-add 1¼-mile Charles H. Strub Stakes. The Strub Stakes was originally scheduled for last Saturday.

Ontario Curling

Kingston, St Thomas Rinks Favorites

KINGSTON (CP) — Bob Mann of Kingston and Don Gilbert of St. Thomas meet tonight in a match that could decide the outcome of the 1968 Ontario curling championships.

Mann, winner of the provincial final in 1963 and 1964, drew Gilbert as his first-round opponent in the 16-rink, double-knockout competition to find a southern Ontario representative for the Dominion finals March 5-9 at Kelowna, B.C.

A Northern Ontario representative will be decided this weekend in Sudbury.

Mann and Gilbert are both hot favorites for the 1968 title because two of the provinces' strongest rinks, Alf Phillips Jr. and Joe Gurowka, both of Toronto, were eliminated in Ontario Curling Association playoffs.

In 1966, Gurowka won the title after beating Gilbert with a draw through a port in the final end of the final game.

Mann is rated because he has the Lewis family playing the front three positions. Veteran Bill Lewis is at third and his two sons, Guy and Dale, are playing second and lead respectively.

The Lewises represented Trenton last year and finished second to Phillips after a marathon playoff in Orillia. Phillips went on to win the Dominion championship, but Bill Lewis feels the move to Kingston to play with Mann will give them the edge this year.

Another favorite is Bill Creber's rink from Toronto, winner of an all-star bonspiel late last year in which he beat most of the teams entered in the Kingston competition.

Creber has Jim Sharples at third, Larry Dare second and Pete Phillips lead.

Ray Grant of Unionville, winner of the 1965 provincial final and the man who eliminated Phillips this year, is another tough rink to beat.

Grant has virtually the same rink that went with him to the 1965 Dominion final—Keith Jewett third, Al Claney second and Mike Huggins lead.

The championship starts tonight with all 16 teams in action at 8 p.m. at the Cataraqui Curling Club and the Kingston Curling Club. Thursday morning at 9 a.m., the teams will again play at both clubs, but Thursday afternoon at 2:30 they will shift to Cataraqui and remain there for the rest of the week.

Other draw times: 8 p.m. Thursday, 2:30 and 8 p.m. Friday, and 2 and 7 p.m. Saturday.

Quinte Basketball

Teachers Finish On Top

Belleville Lightfoots threw a roadblock into Cobourg's bid for a Bay of Quinte Basketball League tie for first place last night defeating the lakeshore club 64-49.

It was the city team's second win in 10 starts and their first over Cobourg.

The league wound up its schedule with the Belleville Teachers on top with a 9-3 mark; Cobourg second with 8-4: CFB Flyers, 5-7 and the Lightfoots 2-10.

Teachers meet Lightfoots in the semi-final playoffs nest week with Cobourg taking on the Flyers. The series will be a two-games, points-to-count affairs. Dates later.

Lightfoots playing their best game of the season led Cobourg 27-18 at half-time. They edged the losers 12-11 in foul shots.

Dave Hurst led the winners with 15 points; Paul Goodfellow had 14 and Frank Long 12. Other scorers were Bob Michaud (7); Brian Langabeer (8); Jack Matthews (3); Jim Vickery (5); Bob Smith (2).

Jeff Ravensdale topped the Cobourg scorers with 13, Dennis Clarke had (4), Al Healey (6); Claude Anderson (2); Doug Day (4); Brian Ravensdale (3) and Bill Scribe (7).

Picton Ints. Defeat Trenton

A four-goal second period, and a five goal performance by L. Pero gave Picton a 10-8 victory over Trenton in an Intermediate "B" game played at Picton last night.

The teams were even in the first period, scoring three goals apiece. Pero counted two of these for Picton, with S. Mulholland getting the other. D. Larock, J. St. Pierre, and M. Murphy got the Trenton goals.

Pero scored twice in the second as the home team put in four pucks, while Trenton replied with just two. G. Haennel and B. Hopkins were the other Picton scorers, while St. Pierre and J. Scott scored for Trenton.

The third period was even again at three goals apiece. Pero, D. Dafoe, and B. Beatty counted the Picton markers, while St. Pierre, with his third, A. McVicar, and E. Collinson connected for Trenton.

Trenton outshot Picton, 47-30, on the game, and Picton were handed four penalties to only two for the visitors.

English Nag Eyes First Handicap Win

MIAMI (AP) — Patrick C. Rowe's Polyfoto will attempt to become the first English race horse to win the $25,000 1 3-16 mile Bougainvillea Turf Handicap at Hialeah this Saturday.

In its 23 runnings, this turf fixture for older grass specialists has been won by horses from Argentina, Chile, Ireland and France. Yet England, homeland for all thoroughbred race horses, has only been able to record a second-place finish.

That was by Tudor Era in Bougainvillea 1960.

Polyfoto, a six-year-old, won important races in England, Ireland, and France before being imported to the United States in 1967.

Rick Dawson, Art Thomas and Roger Wilding each scored two goals for Loyola, and Bernie Austin added one.

Nationals Defeat W. Germany In Opener; Russians, Czechs Win

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Canadian coach Jackie McLeod got his dander up, but that was before his national team made quick work of West Germany 6-1 in the opening round of the Olympic hockey tournament Tuesday night.

A mixup over documentation procedure for the Canadian players had McLeod boiling just before the game started. The players were asked to produce documents to verify their identities as they were preparing to take the ice.

The Canadians, held scoreless in the first period by West German goalie Josef Schramm, scored four goals in the second period. Roger Bourbonnais wound up the scoring with a pair of goals in the third period.

Others registering opening-game victories in the eight-country round-robin championship play were the 1964 Olympic champion Russians, 8-0 over Finland, and Czechoslovakia, 5-1 over the United States.

The U.S. held the Czechs 1-1 in the first period. But then Vaclav Nedomansky and company started to skate, scoring two goals in each of the final two periods.

Four years ago, the Canadian national team defeated a combined German squad 4-2 while the Czechs beat the U.S. 7-1.

Canada wound up fourth in the 1964 tournament, behind Russia, Sweden and Czechoslovakia. The last Canadian team to win an Olympic title was Edmonton Mercurys in 1952.

The Russians have won every world championship since 1963, in addition to their two Olympic gold medals in 1956 and 1964. Canada's last world title came in 1961 when Trail Smoke Eaters won the big prize.

At Grenoble, Canada won't meet the Russians, Czechs and Swedes until next week. Organizers rated Canada the team to beat, and they scheduled the final game of the tournament between the Canadians and Russians for Saturday, Feb. 17.

Sweden and East Germany drew byes in the schedule Tuesday, but both countries will see action today in the two championship games on the program. Canada, Czechoslovakia, West Germany and Finland are idle.

The schedule, times EST:

11 a.m.—Sweden vs. U.S.A.
3 a.m.—Russia vs. East Germany

The Canadians missed repeated opportunities early in the game before the line of Fran Huck, Ray Cadieux and Morris Mott each scored once.

Huck, a third-year veteran of the Nationals, also picked up a pair of assists and Mott had one assist. Gary Dineen also scored for the Nationals. Ernst Koepf got the West German goal while defenceman Barry MacKenzie was serving a tripping penalty.

After Cadieux, Dineen, Huck and Mott scored within an 11-minute span in the second period, it wasn't until 11:30 of the third period that the Canadians were able to crack Schramm again. Bourbonnais beat him cleanly and then with just five seconds left the 25-year-old law graduate added his second goal.

The Canadians outshot the West Germans 37-25.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are thinking of attending the Mardi Gras 1968 Carnival in Louisiana. What date does it fall on, and how many days for the parade? Is the parade before or after Mardi Gras?

ANSWER: Mardi Gras is no ordinary holiday. It is gaiety, disorder, hilarity and merriment rolled up together. Mardi Gras is a single day — — Shrove Tuesday — which this year falls on February 27th, but the carnival preceeding it begins on Twelfth Night and runs for weeks.

QUESTION: Will the Ontario Motor League — Eastern Ontario Club take a look at the early days of motoring?

ANSWER: In Philadelphia, in 1921, garage owners loaned automobiles to the police to pursue motor bandits. In 1896 Henry Ford made his first car. Early century statistics pointed out the decline of blacksmiths' shops. The oldest highway in the world was built 6000 years ago in Egypt. Between 1908 and 1933 the Hubb Motor Car Corporation manufactured 493 different makes of car. Early Ontario licence plates were made of rubber. In the early days, the automobile was placed under ban by the German Baptist Church of America. In 1922, an American firm patented a bath-tub for automobiles; the start of today's automatic car wash. In 1905, 237 cars had been registered in Toronto and 153 elsewhere in the province. In 1937 the first over-snow motor-driven vehicle was produced by Armond Bombardiers.

QUESTION: What date is the sportsman show in Toronto this spring?

World's Biggest Hovercraft

The SRN4, the world's biggest Hovercraft, is shown during a trial run off Cowes, Isle of Wight, England. The 165-ton "Mountbatten" class craft skimmed up to 60 miles an hour in the six-foot high waves of the English Channel. She will carry 254 passengers and 30 cars between Dover, England, and Boulogne, France, and is due to go into service in August. (AP Photo)

'Back Britain' Ad Drive Opens

LONDON (CP) — Readers of Britain's leading newspapers now have no excuse for running out of ways to back the country during these months of economic trial.

Charging out from full-page advertisements taken in a number of papers today are dozens of down-to-earth Back Britain suggestions, ranging from "Drink British" to "Don't abuse the National Health Service."

The graphically-designed ads boast a sponsorship which includes Lord Thomson and an inveterate enthusiast of such campaigns, Beaverbrook Newspapers Ltd.

They have all lined up behind what they call the How to Help Britain and Yourself Campaign.

Topping one of the big spreads is a close-up photograph of the men who lead Britain's political parties—Prime Minister Wilson for Labor, Opposition Leader Edward Heath of the Conservatives and Liberal Chief Jeremy Thorpe.

"Whatever you think of them," reads a giant caption, "surely you think enough of your country to choose six practical things to help Britain get out of the red."

Listed among the "ways a mum can help her country" are reductions on purchases of imported articles.

Fathers are told, among other things:

"Drink British. Some of the best booze in the world is brewed in Britain."

Essay on Chairs Had Little To Contribute to the Subject

NEW YORK (AP)—CBS's team of producer-writer Andrew Rooney and narrator Harry Reasoner have developed, over the last couple of seasons, a television specialty—the illustrated essay.

Rooney has contributed a delightful point of view about the most ordinary objects of our environment—bridges and doors—and has turned them into bright symbols of our lives. Reasoner, who is the fellow CBS entrusts with the lighter aspects of life the way it hands Eric Sevareid the sober aspects, has been able to suggest that the relationship of mankind to both doors and bridges is both funny and significant.

Therefore, it was with considerable interest that we awaited the approach of the Rooney-Reasoner team to the subject of chairs. Alas and alack. Rooney and Reasoner, in Tuesday night's Essay on Chairs had little to contribute to the subject beyond some glittering, rather tired, generalities, plus a rollcall of the species.

"There was a first man and he probably sat on the first chair," began Reasoner in his best crisp, dry style. Then he proceeded to inform us that the throne was "the supreme chair."

There followed a display of chairs that would have done credit to any furniture catalogue. We first saw the kitchen chair, which seemed to have inspired Rooney—he called it a chair of all work that was used for sitting, as a ladder, "to change light bulbs and is frequently painted, usually hurriedly."

Then came the overstuffed living room chair, the dining room chair, the one chair in everybody's house that, for some reason, nobody ever sits on, assorted folding chairs, the morris chair, the windsor chair, the rocking chair in various styles, the deck chair which has now become a lawn chair. But after showing them, there seemed to be little that could be said that was either witty or wise.

It once seemed that the Rooney-Reasoner combination had a whole series of essays ahead of them—on tables, beds, rugs, windows, maybe even on porches and wall decorations. As it turns out, perhaps the spring of inspiration has dried up.

The problem, perhaps, lies not so much at the hands of the writer and narrator as with network demands. About once a month, CBS breaks its weekly Tuesday night news hour into two parts, one handed back to the local stations for programming, and the other consisting of a short network program. Thus, inspiration or no inspiration, somebody has to come up with a 30-minute news department program. It is pretty hard to come up on cue with something as fragile as an essay.

To Your Good Health

No Cause Known For Bell's Palsy

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: I am only now recovering, after five months, from Bell's palsy but no one seems to know a great deal about it. Would you outline it, its causes, prevention, etc? — R. H. T.

Bell's palsy is a paralysis of nerves which control the muscles of the face. It distorts the appearance of the face, so both patient and his friends and family are anxious to end it. Speed is not always possible.

No specific cause is known, but injury or infections may be a factor. In any event, the nerves cease functioning. Because so little is known of the precise cause, there is no preventive, although exposure to cold sometimes precipitates (but does not cause) an attack.

From 60 to 85 per cent of cases recover, in varying lengths of time, even without treatment. However, early treatment brings better results.

Therefore the doctor usually is cautiously conservative at first, without going overboard or over-treating, until he gets a clue as to whether a case shows signs of clearing up. (An electromyel organ, which measures muscle activity, is an effective index of recovery rate.)

The most effective treatment is electrical stimulation of the muscles of the area involved. This forces the muscles to react even though the nerves are not doing so. Thus the muscles maintain their tone. This in turn keeps them in condition so the patient is both enabled and encouraged to undertake exercises of the facial muscles as soon as possible. This is important.

Since nerve fibres, when damaged, regenerate slowly, the rate of recovery from Bell's palsy can be aggravatingly slow—it depends on how severely the nerves have been damaged, and how extensively.

In some cases it can take from months to a year; for luckier patients it can be less.

Besides the electrotherapy mentioned above, other aspects of treatment include massage, heat, Vitamin B, and drugs designed to stimulate circulation.

The secret of recovery, however, hinges on prompt institution of electrotherapy. That and patience.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it unheard of for the menopause to begin at the age of 30? And if not, why? — Mrs. M. J.

What do you mean, "If not, why?"

Menopause can occur as early as 30 although it is very unusual. Menopause means that the ovaries have stopped their activity. Usually this occurs naturally, around age 45 more or less.

But some rather uncommon ailment can at times cause them to quit sooner, hence an earlier menopause. Or some condition may require surgical removal of the ovaries, in which case "surgical menopause" results.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: What is your opinion of removing cataracts with medicine and diet? A doctor in — is making this claim. — Mrs. G. P.

I have heard of this man, and I don't believe he can do what he claims. None of the reliable experts in eye diseases know of any such method which will work. And — I think this is significant — the man you mentioned has not reported his method to the rest of the profession, which ethically he should do if he has a method which is of value.

• • •

Note to Mrs. E. S.: The blood-thinners, such as you were getting, do not cause excess growth of hair. It would have to be some other factor in your case.

Council Approves Addition to School

DESERONTO — The Deseronto Council Monday night approved the building of a $250,000 addition to its public school, and will issue debentures for this amount if the proposed addition is approved by the Department of Education and the debenture issue receives the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board.

The addition proper will cost $225,000, according to estimates. The total cost will include furnishings and architects' fees.

The full Public School Board waited on Council and submitted full details of its requirements and of the estimated costs, and received the commendation of Mayor James Sharpe for presenting the matter so clearly.

With the school already so overcrowded that one class is now meeting in rented quarters, there was the possibility that education for some of the senior classes might have to be taught in neighboring schools. This argument probably influenced the council members in making their decision to approve of the addition. There is still resentment in some quarters that the Deseronto high school pupils are not receiving their education in Deseronto.

The motion to sanction the addition, prepared while council and board members were meeting in committee was read by Councillor Mrs. Dorothy McCullough, seconded by Councillor William Higgins. This was passed unanimously.

SEEK EXPANSION

SWANSEA, Wales (AP) — The Welsh Nationalist party hopes to raise $360,000 during the next three years for an expansion program. General Secretary Elwyn Roberts said the party will run a candidate in every one of Wales' 36 parliamentary districts in the next general election, which must be held by 1971. The party now has one MP, Gwynfor Evans.

Shocked Delegates Hear Two Quebecers Berate Each Other

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Johnson of Quebec and Justice Minister Trudeau electrified the federal-provincial constitutional conference Tuesday with a head-on collision over Quebec demands for special status in Confederation.

Using the bluntest language yet heard at the conference, the justice minister charged that the enlarged powers sought by Quebec would destroy the role of French-Canadians in Parliament and lead to separation.

Other premiers and delegates sat around the conference table in shocked silence as the unscheduled debate raged for the better part of an hour.

Prime Minister Pearson, obviously deeply upset by the exchanges, ended the episode by calling a coffee break.

Mr. Johnson touched it off with a speech in which he said a new form of federalism with greater powers for Quebec would avoid a breakup of the nation.

Quebec had already asked for a direct voice in international affairs, with the right to negotiate treaties in matters of provincial jurisdiction; control of social welfare payments such as pensions and family allowances, and a say in the operations of the CBC.

Mr. Trudeau, speaking for the first time at the conference which began Monday morning, said the granting of such powers would remove the need for having Quebec members in Parliament.

There would be no need for any French-Canadian to come to Ottawa to deal with powers already held by his own province. Separation would follow.

During the noon adjournment the Quebec premier said in a TV interview that Mr. Trudeau had put personal ambitions ahead of national unity. He had spoken like a "leadership candidate."

Although Mr. Trudeau has not yet declared himself, he is considered almost certain to be a candidate for the Liberal leadership convention here April 4-6.

Neither man lost his temper during the clash and each sometimes spoke with a smile, but the tone was acid.

The premier was the first speaker at the morning session. He rose to reply to statements delivered Monday by the other premiers, particularly that by Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland who criticized Quebec's constitutional objectives.

Originally the morning was to be devoted to a round of remarks on a federally-proposed charter of human rights. But it turned unexpectedly into the Johnson-Trudeau debate, with some intervention from Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Johnson began in a highly conciliatory tone, saying every Canadian must be delighted with the expressions of good intentions voiced by the English-speaking provinces Monday.

"I feel it my duty to state that this has been an event of major importance and to say thank you for your good will and understanding," he said.

But then he went on to restate Quebec's claim to special powers that would enable it to protect and promote the French culture in Canada. This would reduce the crisis, providing equality between French and English Canada.

Without such action, there was a possibility that the federal government would have no French-speaking representation. "This would be a splitting up of the country."

Mr. Trudeau expressed the exactly opposite view.

The justice minister said he wondered how a Quebec member of the federal cabinet could take part in debates at the federal level if his own province had powers in such domains as international relations, broadcasting and social programs.

"No politician worth his salt" would want to come to Ottawa from Quebec.

This contradiction in Mr. Johnson's position should be settled immediately, Mr. Trudeau said, adding that Premier Manning of Alberta had put it well Monday when he asked where the limit was to Quebec demands.

Johnson Does Not Want PM from Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) —Overtones of the Liberal leadership campaign permeated the federal-provincial constitutional conference Tuesday.

Conference sources said Quebec Premier Johnson's sharp exchange with Justice Minister Trudeau arises from the fact that he does not want to see Mr. Trudeau or any other French-speaking Quebecer, become prime minister.

The reason for this—and it has applied to other Quebec premiers besides Mr. Johnson—is that Quebec usually regards an English-speaking prime minister as more responsive to its requests.

Mr. Trudeau has not yet declared whether he is a candidate for the Liberal leadership — and thus prime ministership — and may not for another few days or even weeks.

Though a Quebecer, Mr. Trudeau made a strong pitch to English Canada Tuesday in his debate with Mr. Johnson.

Ottawa itself has firmly fixed in its mind the line beyond which it will not go in granting Quebec, or any other province, new fields of jurisdiction.

The clash comes here: Between Quebec's demands and Ottawa's insistence on keeping certain jurisdictions which that province wants.

A federal source said: "It is out in the open now. But it was no use trying to sweep it under the rug, anyway."

However, the difference in approaches between the federal and provincial authorities did not preclude negotiations. It was likely there would be conference agreement on the machinery to be established to continue the constitutional talks.

Ottawa maintained that Mr. Johnson started Tuesday's argument and that it could not let it go unchallenged.

Mr. Trudeau had been stating federal policy.

Prime Minister Pearson clearly indicated that Mr. Trudeau was speaking for him, though Mr. Pearson's red face on a few occasions indicated he would not have used the same blunt words as his justice minister did.

Though it appears too early to judge reaction to the Trudeau-Johnson confrontation, the declared candidates for the Liberal leadership are unlikely to feel comfortable.

Robarts Ready To Talk About Rights Charter

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts is willing to hold further talks on the federal government's proposed human rights charter despite Ontario's serious objections to it.

The objections were outlined to the federal-provincial constitutional conference Tuesday by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

Mr. Robarts told reporters later that Ontario has not completely rejected the charter. "It requires more study," he said.

However, his attitude appeared to be that Ontario has been successfully handling civil rights problems without federal help and would like to continue to do so.

Mr. Wishart said the charter tabled in the Commons Thursday would "trespass" an area of jurisdiction given to provinces by the British North America Act.

He also gave these reasons for being cool towards it:

1. Ontario has a human rights code "recognized as one of the most effective and enforcable expressions of the law of freedom from discrimination;"

2. J. C. McRuer, former chief justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, now is completing a royal commission inquiry into civil rights in Ontario;

3. Ontario reviews all its legislation "to ensure detailed study and revision of any provisions that affect the rights of the individual;"

4. "An entrenched bill of rights should not be considered unless this is done as an integral part of a complete constitutional review;"

5. In Canada rights are guaranteed by parliaments, not the constitution, and this concept shouldn't be changed "except in the revealing light of full and complete discussion;"

6. The charter, in addition to declaring rights, should also contain "complete definitions of the rights protected."

These definitions, Mr. Wishart said, would then be open to interpretation by the courts. This would, in effect, give powers to the courts now held by parliaments.

He urged that action on the new charter be withheld until the McRuer report is published.

Mr. Robarts said he expects to receive at least the first part of the report "any time now."

He also predicted the conference would adopt today his proposal that a continuing constitutional committee consisting of federal and provincial leaders be set up.

A conference sub-committee was formed Monday to determine how the proposal could be implemented.

The Ontario premier spoke only once during conference sessions Tuesday—to ask how the charter could be made part of the constitution if the provincial and federal governments can't agree on an amending formula.

Prime Minister Pearson said it may take years to agree on an amending formula, but this should not halt discussion of the charter.

If agreement is reached on the charter, the constitution can still be amended in the "old fashioned way" through Westminster.

But it is not likely agreement will be reached. Only Newfoundland, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have given it some measure of approval.

Separatism No Longer Dirty Word

MONTREAL (CP) — Charlotte Whitton, former mayor of Ottawa, startled a service club meeting Tuesday when she said "separatism now may be the only answer for Canada."

"I no longer regard separalarm as a dirty word," she said. "Canada can survive separation but it cannot survive the hypocrisy of enforced unity."

The alternative to separation might be an unjust imposition of bilingualism throughout the country, "leaving a small group of people in control of the top positions of government and bureaucracy."

The vast majority of Canadians not bilingual would thus be deprived of their rights "in a manner bordering on fascism."

The Antagonists

Federal Justice Minister Trudeau (left photo) and Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson (right photo) clash at session of the federal-provincial conference on the constitution at Ottawa. Mr. Johnson maintained that bilingualism everywhere in Canada is not enough for Quebec. It wanted more powers. Mr. Trudeau said Premier Manning of Alberta had put a good question Monday: where was the limit to Quebec's demands?

Parley May Tell Committee To Recognize Language Rights

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson asked the federal-provincial constitutional conference Tuesday to recognize that French-speaking Canadians outside Quebec should have the same language and education rights as English-speaking Canadians in Quebec.

Later, he told The Canadian Press he hopes the conference will approve his request at its final session today as an "instruction" to the continuing committee which will be established to look at constitutional reform.

Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta voiced some objection in the conference to Mr. Pearson's proposal but afterwards told a CP reporter he can accept it as an order of procedure for the continuing committee.

Mr. Pearson put forward these five steps:

1. Recognition by the conference "that as a matter of equity French-speaking Canadians outside Quebec should have the same rights as English-speaking Canadians in Quebec.

2. Recognition of the desirability of proceeding as speedily as possible to implement these rights "in ways most appropriate in each province."

3. Constitutional amendments to guarantee these language and education rights for French-speaking minorities. The amendments would apply in each province as it agreed to them.

4. Establishment of a special committee to consult on methods of implementation and the form of constitutional amendment.

5. Consideration of the consolidation of the language and education guarantees in a constitional charter of human rights when the charter had been agreed upon.

On the charter itself, serious reservations were expressed by some provinces that rights entrenched in the constitution would diminish provincial authority.

But there was at least general agreement to consider such a charter. There was no outright rejection.

Mr. Pearson said a consensus seems to be emerging at the conference on the need to act on French-language rights.

French-speaking Canadians had for too long been asked to accept generalities and "amiable ambiguities."

As far as federal jurisdiction was concerned, the language guarantee would be applied "within a matter of months."

Mr. Pearson said the question is of such "exceptional urgency" that provinces should be allowed to opt in as each agreed to the guarantees.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia said a way should first be found to amend the constitution in Canada before amendments to guarantee language rights in English Canada were carried through.

Mr. Pearson said the amendments could be made in the traditional way—by asking the British Parliament to pass them.

Mr. Manning said he cannot conceive of a province-by-province adoption of constitutional amendments.

Mr. Pearson said there is a precedent for such action.

Justice Minister Trudeau made the plea for embedding a charter of human rights in the constitution.

Mr. Trudeau said the charter would not redistribute powers between federal and provincial authorities. But it would mean transfer of some rights by both authorities to the people.

The justice minister maintained that individual rights have been abrogated in Canada by legislatures. He referred indirectly to withdrawal of French education rights in Manitoba 78 years ago and the Quebec Padlock Law during the Second World War.

The charter would protect people rather than governments and give Canadians common values by spelling out individual liberties.

Nova Scotian's Main Interest Is in Economics

OTTAWA (CP) — The average Canadian is more concerned with the problem of earning a livelihood than he is about his constitutional rights, Premier Smith of Nova Scotia told the federal-provincial conference Tuesday.

In a plea for economic equality, Mr. Smith said he spoke for an area where incomes are well below the national level, whose citizens have paid millions of dollars in higher prices over the years for the protection of industrial development in central Canada.

"We delude ourselves," he said, "if we think that satisfaction of the demands respecting constitutional or human rights matter very much to the man, in any province of Canada, who is unemployed for months each year."

In a 21-page submission to the conference, Premier Smith appealed for "a national policy" of massive spending to stimulate secondary manufacturing and other economic activity in underdeveloped regions such as the Atlantic provinces.

He mentioned a federal fund of $1,000,000,000 suggested by Premier Robarts of Ontario as an indication of the amount that might be needed.

Economically Independent Quebec Called A Myth

MONTREAL (CP) — Economist Andrew A. Brichant Tuesday described the idea of an economically-independent Quebec as a myth because of the province's "dependence on outside capital for its many needs."

Addressing a Montreal service club on the subject of the economic implications of separatism for Quebec, Mr. Brichant said a number of studies confirm that Quebec is a net importer of capital although no precise statistical information exists on the province's "international" capital position.

"This capital flow into the province has led to the creation of hundreds of thousands of new jobs for Quebec's inhabitants," he said. "It has also meant that outsiders—principally American interests—own the majority of business enterprises in the province."

Mr. Brichant, a McGill University graduate associated with the New York-based institutional investment and financial advisory firm of Equity Research Associates, took a leave of absence from his regular duties last fall to write a study on the economic implications of Quebec separatism.

Describing separatism as a French-Canadian socio-pspchological "phenomenon peculiar to Quebec," the Belgian-born economist and financial investment analyst added:

"It is a movement or rather a psyche-cultural state of mind that is rooted in a rejection of some or all of the consequences of history and geography by a still very small intellectual and professional minority of the French-Canadian population.

"Separatism is thus primarily a manifestation of its followers' alienation—whether conscious or not—from the Canadian and North American realities."

He said recent reliable estimates which place American ownership or control at 70 per cent of Canada's natural resources and 60 per cent of her manufacturing companies suggest the extent to which ultimate control over Quebec's economy lies outside its own hands.

French-Canadians living in the province own or control less than five per cent of the natural resources and less than 10 per cent of the manufacturing companies, he added.

"In the service industries, an area in which French-Canadians have traditionally been more active, I would estimate that they own or control perhaps some 35 per cent of the province's service companies."

Philby's Wife Unveils Life With Master-spy

LONDON (CP) — Somewhere in the Soviet Union master-spy Kim Philby may be again drinking himself into insensibility, overcome by what his former wife describes as "a profound gloom" which even the bottle could not dispel.

On the surface, the one-time high British agent who divulged secrets to the Russians for years was as charming, kind, sensitive and attentive as any middle-aged bride could desire.

But Eleanor Philby detected sense of restlessness, frustration and disappointment that seemed to clash against an inner dscipline and from which Philby tried to escape by drinking himself "into insensibility."

Her book, The Spy I Loved, published by Hamish Hamilton, provides no deep insight into the anatomy of a traitor. Eleanor said she knew he was a British agent though he posed as a journalist, but claimed she had no knowledge of his Russian links until he slipped a closing British net and vanished from Beirut in 1963.

Philby later told her he was a dedicated Communist and had been for most of his life. When she said British intelligence had been on his tail for seven years, he replied that he actually had been a spy for 30 years.

Eleanor, previously married to an American journalist, was no Communist but when he later beckoned from Moscow, she went. She knew no Russian and showed no particular sympathy for the Russian people but she was devoted to Philby until one day he threw her over for the wife of Donald Maclean, another defector and spy forced into the monotony of Moscow's protection.

Maclean and the late Guy Burgess owed a lot to Philby, the "third man" who tipped these British officials when Western security men were closing in. But the Philbys and the Macleans didn't have much in common. The two couples were forced on each other by the sheer boredom of Moscow life for expatriates.

Drinking, cards and little excursions helped. When Eleanor was away in America, Melinda Maclean bitterly complained about life with her husband and soon Philby, married for the third time, was comforting her. It took Eleanor months to catch on and even when she did, she would have done anything to get her husband back. That is the kind of influence Philby had on women.

Little by little, Eleanor got an inkling of Philby's mind. When she suggested once that he thought more of his work than his wife and family, he agreed. When she suggested he should have married a dedicated Communist, he again agreed.

Malcolm Muggeridge, who also was a British agent during the Second World War and knew Philby, says in a commentary that he readily agrees with Eleanor when she said her four married years with Philby were her happiest.

"I well remember him with his previous wife and what an atmosphere of happy domesticity was conveyed in their home; the ungrown-up make better husbands and kinder lovers than adults—which is why women so assiduously go after them. No doubt his present union with Melinda Maclean is similarly blessed."

Hugh Trevor-Roper, in his review, is caught by the description of the deadening struggle for existence in the squalid wintry world of Moscow; the attempt by Kim and Donald to convince themselves of the good times they would have in Paris and Rome "when the revolution comes."

Trevor-Roper, writing in The Sunday Times, suggests Burgess died partly because he was bored to death. In Moscow the standard response is to drink until the brain stops thinking.

"As his (Philby's) usefulness to the Russians declines—and by now, for all their public flattery, he must be almost useless—this may be for him, as for Burgess, the way out."

However, Eleanor's book suggests the Russians want to keep Philby alive. She quotes one Russian official who said the Soviet Union could never repay Philby for all he had done.

On one occasion, when Philby drank so heavily he became critically ill with pneumonia and tuberculosis, the Russians gave him a special hospital suite, devoting to him the attention usually reserved for high Soviet dignitaries. But they took his razor away, probably fearing an irrational act.

Muggeridge, writing in The Observer, suggests that while Philby will go down in history as "one of the select band of super-spies," his abilities and qualities have been exaggerated. He saw Philby as a somewhat romantic figure, "more foolish than sinister," leaving behind a highly dubious legendary picture.

French Language Rights Approved

Parley Wins Praise

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Robarts of Ontario says the federal-provincial conference that ended here Wednesday is "a victory for Canada."

"We made very significant progress," he told reporters, referring in particular to a willingness on the part of most provinces to extend French-language rights and the formation of a continuing constitutional committee.

Prime Minister Pearson, Mr. Robarts and Premier Johnson of Quebec all suggested a continuing committee in opening statements Monday.

The committee was assigned a set of five topics—a blend of federal and Quebec proposals—plus a sixth suggested by Mr. Robarts, federal-provincial relations.

Federal - provincial conferences are "growing like Topsy," the Ontario premier said, and more consultation is needed.

"As a matter of fact, I think Ontario is going to have to open a permanent office in Ottawa because we spend so much time here."

'This is a very good point," Mr. Pearson said. "Perhaps we should make a broad study of the subject."

He added that there now are 170 agencies for federal-provincial consultation.

Mr. Robarts modestly turned aside praise from Mr. Johnson for getting the press admitted to the conference.

It would not have happened, Mr. Johnson said, if Mr. Robarts had not opened his Confederation of Tomorrow conference in Toronto in November.

"Anything we accmplish in this whole area will be the result of many men's minds," Mr. Robarts replied.

This was an apparent reference to the fact that neither conference would have been open without the consent of delegates.

When talking to reporters later Mr. Robarts predicted the days of closed federal-provincial talks are "gone forever."

"It will be impossible to have all our discussions open" but he expected at least part of each conference would be.

The premier denied a statement that haggling during the afternoon session over the wording of a consensus on language rights weakened the document.

Otto Ready To Fight For Unity

TORONTO (CP) — A Liberal member of Parliament said Wednesday he is "ready to shed blood to maintain one Canada, one nation and one people."

Steve Otto, a Second World War infantry officer who represents York East, said he is opposed to the spread of racialism in Canada "even at the price of blood."

In a speech to the German-Canadian Businessmen's Club, Mr. Otto said: "I've taken up the sword for what I have considered important and I feel the unity of the country is as important."

Mr. Otto, born in Austria, came to Canada with his parents at the age of six. He criticized Prime Minister Pearson's proposal at the constitutional conference in Ottawa to extend French-language rights.

He described as "tragic" and "machiavellian" Mr. Pearson's plan to pay bilingual civil servants seven per cent more on certain jobs.

OTTAWA (CP) — A statement of the Roman Catholic bishops of Canada reiterated Wednesday the church's view that abortion and infanticide are "unspeakable crimes."

Veto Avoided On Second Try

OTTAWA (CP) — A historic declaration that French-speaking Canadians should, "as a matter of equity," enjoy full language rights in English Canada was worked out Wednesday at the windup of the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

It emerged as the first paragraph in a three-point "consensus on language rights" put together by Prime Minister Pearson and the 10 premiers after several revisions to meet provincial objections.

For a few ticklish minutes it looked as though British Columbia might veto unanimous agreement.

An earlier version giving tacit approval to a constitutional guarantee of French-language rights, with a provincial option, had to be scrapped when Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta coldly rejected the idea.

A continuing conference of premiers, ministers and officials will conduct a general review of the constitution, the British North America Act of 1867.

Subjects referred to this committee by agreement of the conference were official languages fundamental rights, distribution of powers between Ottawa and the provinces, reform of institutions such as the Senate and the Supreme Court of Canada, regional economic disparities, constitution-amending procedures and general relations between the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Pearson at his news conference said he thought the constitutional study could be completed in less than three years.

The three-day conference, conducted with complete news coverage, finally adopted this 143-word declaration:

"Recognition by this conference that, as proposed by the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism and as a matter of equity, French-speaking Canadians outside of Quebec should have the same rights as English-speaking Canadians in Quebec.

"Recognition, as the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism has recommended, of the desirability of proceeding by government action as speedily as possible, in ways most appropriate in each province and without diminishing existing rights recognized by law or usage.

"Establishment of a special committee to examine the report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism and the views expressed at this conference on the report, and on other matters relating to language rights and their effective provision in practice, and to consult on the methods of implementation including the nature of possible federal assistance, and on the form and method of constitutional amendment."

Asked about the last-minute B.C. objections, which left some observers wondering whether the final document had been adopted unanimously, Mr. Pearson replied:

"The revised statement . . . was accepted by all members of the conference." B.C. agreed in principle on language and cultural equality across Canada, he added.

Premier Johnson of Quebec, at a news conference immediately after Mr. Pearson's, said a successful step had been taken toward his long-sought goal of a new Canadian constitution. He also welcomed the recognition of French-language rights outside Quebec.

But he added that Quebec is not retreating from its demand for special powers, including an international role in the French-speaking world.

The dramatic B.C. incident threw the conference into an unexpected flap just when it ap-

We Were Lucky on This One Expert Says After Crash

VANCOUVER (CP)—The wreckage of a jetliner, buried to its wings in a building after cutting a mile-long arc of destruction early Wednesday, has been pulled free for an intensive investigation.

Two persons were dead and 14 others injured when the Boeing 707 leased by Canadian Pacific Airlines crashed on landing in heavy fog.

The 100-ton plane veered off the runway to the right then skidded and slewed toward the main passenger terminal and tower facilities of Vancouver International Airport.

"We were lucky on this one," said Bob Cole, a transport department spokesman. "It could have been a hell of a lot worse.

"We had some miracles out there."

Killed were Martinus Verhoef, 33, of Vancouver, the purser aboard the flight from Hawaii, and Elmer Nedcalf, 44, of Vancouver, a transport department employee.

The 14 injured were reported suffering minor ailments.

Passengers and witnesses said the plane, owned by Standard Airways of Seattle, seem to bounce on landing, veer, catch fire in a forward section and then begin hitting things.

It first charged through a covey of four small planes, leaving them tangled bits of smouldering wreckage. Then its right wing sliced through a frame transport department field office. A fuel tank ruptured and aviation fuel fed a resulting fire that killed Nedcalf. Several cars parked nearby were also burned.

The jetliner continued on its mile-long wild arc toward the terminal. It dropped an engine and part of its landing gear.

En route it clipped an Air Canada DC-8 waiting to be loaded. Then it picked up an Air Canada ramp vehicle and dragged it along as the big plane buried its nose in bricks of the Aviation Electric Pacific Ltd. building, 50 yards from the terminal.

"I couldn't see any airport lights at all, and I remarked to my wife that the pilot would be doing well to bring us in with such darkness," said passenger Conrad Lamb of The Pas, Man.

"Then, bang, we hit."

Six Dead, 78 Hurt by Fire

CHICAGO (AP) — Fire and a series of explosions ripped a sausage factory Wednesday killing six persons and injuring 78.

The body of the president of the firm, Roy R. Laidly, 61, was found in the rubble hours after the fire was extinguished. One person was missing and feared buried under fallen timbers and bricks.

Three of the dead and 18 of the injured were firemen who were fighting the blaze when the main explosion shattered the building. A policeman said the blast hurled bodies of firemen and workers across a street.

"People were running, falling, screaming everywhere," said Frank Shear, 52, general manager of the plant. "You could see bodies going up in the air."

A bystander, Charles Peppers, 23, said he saw a boy, about 10, with a badly cut face run out of a damaged house across the street from the factory.

" 'Help me, mister, help me!' the kid was screaming," Peppers said. "I lifted him over a fence but he ran away and I couldn't catch him."

Windows were shattered in buildings and cars a block from the Mickleberry Sausage Co., located on the South Side. Cars parked on streets along the building and in a used car lot across the street were battered by the debris.

About 250 firemen and 50 pieces of equipment battled the fire for hours in freezing temperatures.

The injured, many of them spectators watching the fire, quickly filled nearby hospital emergency wards and were taken to hospitals miles from the scene as the casualties mounted.

About 36 persons were thought to have been in the factory, which normally employs about 110, when the fire started.

Police and firemen learned how to handle radioactive material during demonstrations at West Moira Street Fire Hall yesterday. Here EMO instructor A. G. Ford shows class the use of geiger counters in tracking radioactivity through various obstacles. Powerful Cobalt 60 was used for instruction.

Where's the Cobalt?

What happens if you lose radio active material?

You just keep trying until you find it. After which you may lose your licence—never to handle the stuff again.

Three tiny seeds of radioactive metal were shipped from Belleville yesterday, after being centrepieces in a sophisticated safety demonstration.

The gingerly-handled specks were Cobalt 60 used by Quinte Emergency Measures Organizations instructors before a group of police and firemen.

The metal — the same as that powering the cancer-combatting cobalt bomb—was used in a demonstration on fissionable material at the West Moira street firehall.

Object of the exercise was to acquaint the officers and firemen with the handling of fissionable material in the event of an emergency.

The cobalt, explained inspector A. G. Ford, was shipped from regional EMO headquarters in Toronto.

"The controls are very rigid," he said. "All people handling it are licensed. Losing it can mean losing your licence.'

What happens if radioctive material goes astray?"

"If you lose any of this stuff you have to find it. That's all," said deputy instructor Al Pinder.

peared that the declaration had been completed.

G. S. Bryson, deputy finance minister occupying the B.C. desk after Premier W. A. C. Bennett departed, suddenly broke into the discussion to complain that the opening paragraph of the declaration was in "conflict" with his province's position as stated in its opening statement Monday.

He went on to suggest that the declaration be a majority statement rather than a unanimous one.

After an exchange with Mr. Bryson, the prime minister said "I want to include B.C. even if I have to telephone Mr. Bennett."

Following further dispute on the wording Mr. Bryson left to catch a plane. There apparently was a departing nod of agreement, however, because the other delegates went on to approve the statement.

Fatal Mishap--Foxboro

Provincial police today were still investigating details of a fatal mishap near Foxboro last night when the driver of a sports car was killed as his vehicle somersaulted off Highway 62.

Fatally injured was 33-year-old Douglas George Burkitt, of Foxboro.

Burkitt was alone in the car when he apparently lost control of the vehicle just south of the Wallbridge Road intersection.

Police say the vehicle may have rolled several times before somersaulting a fence into a farmer's field.

He was pronounced dead after admission to Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. Burkitt was born in Belleville, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burkitt. He resided in Foxboro for three years and lived in Belleville previously.

He was the assistant manager of Sherwin Williams in Belleville.

Mr. Burkitt is survived by his parents; by his wife, the former Betty Doreen Peters; and by one sister, Mrs. Alan (Vivian) Steele of Toronto.

The body is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home where the service will be held on Saturday. Rev. J. William Lamb will officiate. Interment will be in the Victoria Cemetery.

Fatal End in Field

The driver of this sports car was fatally injured when it crashed off Highway 62 near Foxboro last night. Victim of the mishap was Douglas George Burkitt, 30, of Foxboro.

The apples-for-the-teacher tradition may be only one of the customs bowled over by Loyalist College's new approach to education. However, a byproduct — soft apple cider — was part of the catering service when Loyalist went on open-house display to more than 40 Trenton high school students last night. Technology director Paul King pours for Carol Alguire, Linda Saddlemeyer, Jerry Finn, political science teacher and James Drinkwater, economics.

Town Sits on County Line

Trenton School Board Asks for Clarification on Status

By MAURICE SWITZER
Staff Reporter

TRENTON—Board of Education members still aren't sure to which consolidated "country-size" school board they belong.

But whether it will be Northumberland or Hastings, local trustees are pressing demands for adequate Trenton representation.

Larger units committee chairman W. Douglas Whitley last night called for a Trenton appointee to sit on the educational steering committee for both Hastings and Northumberland-Durham. The town lies directly on the borderline of the two areas.

The department of education is setting up the committees to compile data on existing schools and to act as a liaison body with the Ontario government in its plans to reduce the number of school boards in the province to about 100 by 1969.

Each steering committee is to consist of an appointee from every board of education, high school board or public school board in the county of its jurisdiction.

This raised another point, said Mr. Whtley.

Since Trenton is in the unique position of having the only board of education n the area, "we should have a representative on each steering committee for both our public and high schools".

"It's worth a shot," he added.

By this time in last night's meeting, trustees were unanimous in their feeling that Trenton's position needed clarification from R. W. Froates, regional superintendent for the department of education from Kingston.

Mr. Froatcs has been notified, and Trenton trustees hope to meet with him, or someone from his office tomorrow.

Another situation that requires clarification, said trustee Ralph Weaver, involves the fact that Trenton's 1,200-student high school lies in Northumberland County, while the seven town public schools are in Hastings.

In general, board members were critical of a department of education brief laying out guidelines for the province's plan for condensed county-sized boards.

For Mr. Whitley, the brief was a "quarter-inch thick pile of paper that, really, has told us nothing."

In particular, trustees objected to the fact that Mr. Froates' correspondence concerning the organization of steering committees did not specifically say on which county committee a Trenton appointee would sit.

The letter calls for appointees for "the" county committee.

Board chairman T. Stanley Ketcheson said the department of education was taking Trenton's position for granted.

"There's nothing in the brief as to which county unit we're in. I think I have a good idea where we're going, but I'd like to be assured. It's not spelled out in the brief."

Since Premier John Robarts' November announcement that school boards would be consolidated into county-size units, Trenton's trustees have been debating the direction they should take local education.

Westward Ho! Not Board Policy

TRENTON — A school trustee had his position questioned at last night's board of education meeting.

After discussion of Trenton's future in one of the proposed county-size consolidated school boards, chairman T. Stanley Ketcheson read an excerpt from the local board's constitution concerning the news media.

"Anything that might appear in the press from individual members of this board is not necessarily the policy of the board," read a 1965 motion adopted by local school trustees.

Mr. Ketcheson's remarks clearly referred to W. Douglas Whitley, chairman of the board's larger units committee, who has been an outspoken advocate that Trenton's educational, as well as economic future, lies westward, and away from Hastings County.

Their Job--Picking Six Among 2600

Members of the Hastings - Prince Edward Liberal Association met in Trenton last night to elect six of the 2,600 party delegates to the national Liberal leadership convention. Examining the results of last night's voting are Miss Josephine Casey (national convention committee), Dr. Lionel Dockrill, Picton, Mrs. Clara Slaven, D. R. Fraser, Trenton (president of the riding association) and William Menzies.

Hastings-Prince Edward Delegates Not Committed to Any Candidate

TRENTON — Newly-picked delegates to the April Liberal Party leadership convention in Ottawa will approach the meeting "with open minds," a spokesman said Wednesday.

Hastings - Prince Edward Liberal association president D. R. "Nick" Fraser, one of six delegates chosen to represent the new federal riding at the convention, said his delegation has not agreed to support any of the 10-or-so touted candidates for Lester B. Pearson's job

Some 80 card-carrying party members from Hastings and Prince Edward counties packed the tiny town courtroom over the police station to vote for four male delegates to the Apr. 4-6 Ottawa convention, one woman delegate, a Young Liberal representative, and three alternates.

From 18 nominees, the following were chosen in a secret ballot: delegates — D. R. Fraser, Trenton; Dr. Lionel Dockrill, Picton; George Cunningham, Consecon; Donald Bond, R. R. 1, Milford; Enid Rodgers, Colborne; and Jack Hill, a Queen's University student from Colborne as the Young Liberal.

Alternate delegates will be Donald Joss, Belleville; Douglas Tufford, R.R. 1, Trenton; and Lyn Harrington, R.R. 2, Frankford.

While stressing that he and fellow-delegates would be remaining "hypothetically impartial" until the convention, associate president Mr. Fraser indicated Ottawa accommodation plans were taking into consideration a possible caucus with delegates from neighboring Hastings riding.

Strangely enough, Hastings-Prince Edward Liberals will be voting for a new national party leader before they have nominated a candidate for their own riding.

A year ago this week, the Progressive Conservatives of the redistribution-created riding nominated Northumberland M.P. George Hees as their federal standard-bearer.

Hastings - Prince Edward Liberals have yet to choose their House of Commons hopeful.

Conciliation Talks Fail Nytronics Strike Looms

TRENTON — The union representing 30 female workers at the local Nytronics (formerly Essex Electronics) of Canada Ltd. has set midnight, Feb. 14 as a strike deadline unless terms for a 1968 contract can be settled.

Conciliation talks under the auspices of department of labor officer B. D. Stevens in late January failed to bring an agreement between Nytronics management and negotiators for the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

As a result of Mr. Stevens' report, the department of labor has decreed there will be no board set up to inquire further into the dispute, and the present agreement between Trenton IUE Local 539 and Nytronics will expire at midnight next Wednesday.

A statement from chief union area negotiator W. J. Miller says: "As the members of IUE Local 539 have already voted unanimously to strike if a satisfactory settlement is not reached prior to the expiration of the contract, midnight of Feb. 14 could well be the strike deadline also."

At a Jan. 22 meeting, attended by all but two of the 30 female employees represented by Local 539, a unanimous vote was recorded in favor of strike action, if unnecessary.

In his statement released late Wednesday, Mr. Miller says tentative arrangements have been made for union-management talks over the weekend "in a final attempt to reach agreement before the strike deadline."

Last month, union spokesmen declined to give specific demands, but indicated they included items such as union security, grievance procedure, seniority rights, job posting, and other fringe benefits, in addition to wages.

Brian Thorpe Death Still Disturbing

TRENTON — Ten months after his funeral, the death of Brian Thorpe is still disturbing.

Disturbing because police have never unveiled the mystery that surrounded the untimely death of the 11-year-old.

And disturbing to parents, who wonder if their children could meet a similar fate.

Exactly a year ago tonight Brian left the second-storey Dundas St. flat where he lived with his mother, Ellen, and older brother Robert, 14.

BRIAN THORPE

But what started as an evening of fun at a record-playing session with friends ended in tragedy.

After leaving the party, one of his friends said, Brian got into a white station wagon, apparently hitching a lift to make it home in time for his curfew.

In May, a fragile, unclothed body washed up on the shore of Lake Ontario near Port Hope was identified as that of the missing boy.

"It's a dead-end story," the police tell me," says Ellen Thorpe, who at 35, has had her share of bad luck.

She lives with 14-year-old Robert on government allowances while her husband ekes out his life in a west coast home for the incurably ill.

Her experience over the four-month period of Brian's disappearance is something Ellen Thorpe wouldn't want any mother to share, she says.

In the past few weeks, town police have investigated reports a man lures children into his car for obscene purposes.

His lure for the unsuspecting tots is a friendly little black dog.

But the lures may vary, depending on the nature of the pervert, or the age of the victim.

Police say the value of advice to children like "don't take rides from strangers" should never be underestimated.

Ask Ellen Thorpe what it's like to see her son's obituary read "Police suspect foul play."

She doesn't even have the solace of Brian's belongings for memories.

Most of his favorite toys — model cars, a movie projector — are still in the Attorney - General's laboratory in Toronto, where they were taken for fingerprint samplings.

Bridges to Cross

Imagine Quinte and Prince Edward County as a strategic region in the event of war. An invading force is approaching Belleville. Its bridges are still intact, but the enemy is at hand and they are blown up to permit the defenders to withdraw across the bay bridge to Prince Edward.

It is an unlikely enough prospect of course — but it does illustrate the importance of communications and particularly of bridges. Wherever wars are fought bridges are vital to both friend and foe. And depending which side you are on a bridge can look good either standing or demolished.

To Belleville bridges are indispensable and the prospect of the railroad overpass — first stage of the new Dundas Street bridge — being constructed is encouraging. Traffic congestion is such that this facility is being sanctioned not a moment too soon.

Bridges have provided links since earliest times. Many in Britain and Europe have stood since the days of the Romans. Others, modern structures, have been found wanting — like the one that collapsed recently under the weight of traffic over the Ohio River bordering on West Virginia.

Where there are major cities and waterways there are bridges — like Montreal's Jacques Cartier bridge; Vancouver's Lion's Gate structure, Sydney's harbor bridge and the one linking Auckland with its North Shore area, a bridge currently undergoing extension as traffic in the New Zealand city of half a million people increases.

The Vancouver Sun meanwhile carries an interesting picture comparison of the modern hump-backed bridge across the Derwent River in Hobart, Tasmania, and Vancouver's Burrard Inlet bridge. The scene in both pictures, with Hobart's Mount Wellington and Vancouver's surrounding mountains as background is strikingly similar.

In Belleville too — amid terrain of a different nature, but with the same communication needs — there are bridges to be crossed. That there will be one more available in a year or two will be to Belleville's advantage.

Change and Canada

Canada is changing. Everywhere you turn there are new ideas, fresh concepts, new legislation. There is dynamism on every hand.

As in any phase of evolution, however, there are ups and downs. Take Medicare! Scheduled to come into effect last July 1 it was postponed for a year. But now the revised date may also pass with no indication of the universal medical care insurance plan getting off the ground.

Ontario recently announced it would postpone any action on joining the scheme for at last a year. Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick have already announced they cannot afford to join the scheme as scheduled on July 1.

What about unification of the armed services? Here is one major policy change the Government has managed to effect — but only after a long and bitter political battle.

At the provincial level there is one issue that promises to generate further controversy before it comes into effect. And that is the province's school board consolidation program involving replacement of 1,012 public, elementary and secondary school boards next January 1 with about 80 divisional boards of education.

Education Minister William Davis admits the transition will be difficult and he anticipates what he terms "considerable criticism from some portions of the province."

Quinte is one such area where there is concern over this issue. Concern for instance at the prospect of students from outlying areas being faced with long daily bus journeys into Belleville. Concern, too, that representation on school boards in Hastings County Board of Education will drop from 131 members sitting on 12 boards to a single 16-man board.

As Tweed Reeve Mrs. Barbara Allen puts it: "The major problem will be in determining equal representation of the municipalities involved."

It is pointed out that representation will be based on assessment, with the county having power to divide the rural areas into separate voting units once the towns, cities and separate school supporters get their representatives.

Even this could lead to inequalities regarding representation, unless worked out with some care.

We can only hope the change-over will be effected as efficiently as possible and with a minimum of blunders over representation. The latter may prove one of the more formidable problems in getting this new educational concept of administration on the road.

Ottawa Offbeat

Canada's Armed Services A "Phantom" Force—PC Critic

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Something has been happening in the rank and file of the Conservatives in the Commons these recent weeks.

The so - recently moribund Tory backbenches are showing signs of life.

It could be due, perhaps, to Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's policy of participation by all party hands in planning and making parliamentary plays.

Or maybe, as they watch the official opposition's stock rising and the government's falling, they are beginning to sniff victory in the political wind.

After all, they have their new leader who is riding so high on the public popularity polls that the near-dozen Liberal leadership candidates all seem to be running as much against him as against each other.

And the Liberals, almost as busy with their own business as with the nation's, still have to produce a leader whose essential qualification, they don't mind telling you, has to be a credible capability of beating Bob Stanfield.

One of the things that could be bothering the worried Liberals has been the way Stanfield's policy for involvement for all Tory MPs, front and backbench alike, has been revealing hidden talents in the parliamentary rank and file.

Evidence of this can be found in some of their speeches.

Both in and out of Parliament.

So many of them used to be so silent. And when some of them did speak, it might have been better had they not.

For so often they were from Dullsville with their dreary discourses, weary words, tired themes.

But now it is different.

Stanfield's given them a new interest — and just as good, some professional talent to advise and assist them in the research and writing of their stuff.

So now, many of the speeches have some snap, crackle and pop.

Like the one that William Skoreyko, Conservative MP for Edmonton East, served up the other day on defence.

Well researched, too.

It had to be.

For he was wondering out loud on the public platform whether in the field of defence Canada had not become what he called "a Flower Power."

So he went to the history books, the records of the United Nations, to the attitudes of our allies and the statements of their leaders, and to some of the world's recognized defence authorities.

And he found that self-serving politicians have been cutting Canada's defence forces down to such pigmy size that the country can no longer make even a pretence of defending itself, let alone make good on mutual defence commitments with its free world allies.

What he termed "eye-catching Madison avenue phrases" such as Mobile Command have been used to "masquerade a phantom force."

Hard words?

Well, Mobile Command, organized as an airborne defence strike-force, has three assignments: emergency service here at home, NATO reinforcement in Europe and UN peacekeeping around the world.

If a crunch comes, can it do all three?

Citing his expert authorities, Bill Skoreyko seems to suggest that some of our national political leaders have been more concerned with the armed services as an instrument of "peace-posturing in global pursuit of Nobel prizes" than of keeping Canada secure.

He quotes the resident military expert of the respected Times of London as brushing off Canada, almost contemptuously as "the professional Flower Power on the international stage."

And he asks the disturbing question: "What real reward is there for Canada as the wishful sheep in a world of willful wolves?"

The London Times laughs off Canada as a world peacekeeper, terming it a nation that "has been, still is, and gives every indication of remaining incapable of providing the naval, military and air establishment required to defend even its own essential interests."

But what the heck, shrugs Bill Skoreyko, isn't Nobel prize-winning the name of the Canadian defence game?

And anyway, if we were not the internationally laughable "Flower Power," our national political leaders could not afford the holier-than-thou morality lectures they so do love giving the Americans about bombing North Vietnam and sailing spy-ships along the North Korean coast.

"Power Obsessed"—Bonn Minister's Remark Irks De Gaulle

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President de Gaulle of France apparently is attempting to keep the West German government off balance during sensitive talks in Paris next week by turning his wrath upon a speech by Bonn's Foreign Minister Willy Brandt.

De Gaulle made a public display of his displeasure over a West German news agency report that quoted Brandt as saying in a speech that the French president was "power obsessed." The displeasure was shown despite a denial of the quotation by the West German government and its withdrawal by the agency.

De Gaulle and others are well aware that the outspoken Brandt represents the minority Socialist party in the Bonn coalition and has to live with the frustrations of not being able to realize many of his policies and ideals.

Brandt's speech about French-German relations probably was an answer to his critics as well as notice to de Gaulle that there will be no pussyfooting when he and Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger meet with the president on the Common Market and other issues.

The official transcript of that hotly-controversial speech shows Brandt emphasized there must be no impression that West German policy is "showing cowardice in the face of a friend."

Undoubtedly there was some foundation for de Gaulle's reaction. Brandt's speech was not flattering. He suggested de Gaulle was embarking on a global strategy and withdrawing more and more from Europe.

West German officials were quick to moan about Brandt's big flap, though the influential Paris newspaper, Le Monde, suggests Brandt was merely saying out loud what many of his listeners wanted to hear.

There have been jibes that the Bonn administration was content to rest under de Gaulle's thumb. The West German political scene is restless and the Bonn administration is concerned with the rise of extremists on the right.

Among the Bonn government's frustrations are the lack of progress in its drive to turn the Common Market into a strong politically-unified body and the decline of a strong military structure against the Soviet threat.

These are pressures from other Common Market partners that West Germany show more fortitude in supporting Britain's membership in the trade bloc.

De Gaulle is well aware of the difficulties he faces within the Common Market. He had hoped to use the partnership, under his leadership, as a weapon against United States expansion and influence. This has not turned out as he had intended. His interest now appears to be turning more to the Soviet Union.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mary Queen of Scots was executed 381 years ago today—in 1587—after 19 years in English prisons. Overthrown by revolution in Scotland she had fled to England to Queen Elizabeth, her political and religious rival. Mary was eventually tried for conspiracy and condemned on evidence of the Casket letters, which were never satisfactorily explained. Elizabeth later bequeathed the English crown to James VI of Scotland—Mary's son.

1923—About 120 miners were killed at Dawson, N.M.

1945—Canadian 1st army attacked between Cleve and Gloch.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1918—the French repulsed German attacks north of Chemin des Dames and in the Woevre sector; British destroyer Boxer was sunk in the English Channel; Gen. Giardina succeeded Gen. Cardorna as the Italian representative on the Versailles Military Committee

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1943—Allied bombers attacked docks and railway yards in Rangoon; Middle East Command bombers attacked Messina and Palermo, Sicily; Netherlands and Australian fliers burned three-quarters of the Japanese town of Dobo in the Aroe Islands north of Darwin, Australia

Economic Scene in Rhodesia

Sherbrooke Daily Record

Over two years ago, in November 1966, Southern Rhodesia established its independence, Prime Minister Ian Smith and his ministers declaring that one reason for what Britain termed the rebellion being the need to keep up standards and maintain development.

If Africans came to power, they argued, all the advances made under white rule would be lost.

But there are some interesting figures that show just how much the 4,500,000 Africans who comprise the vast majority of Rhodesia's population have advanced—figures taken from the Smith regime's own economic survey published in July, 1967, for 1966, figures which were not adversely affected by the mandatory economic sanctions because they did not go into effect until December, 1966.

There were fewer African wage-earners in 1966, than there were in 1957—620,000 in 1957 and 615,000 nine years earlier—despite a total growth of one million in the total African population and an increase of 250,000 in the African urban population in the last five years.

True wages rose for those Africans lucky enough to have jobs, but the wage-earners had to support more dependents, and for those who lost a worker in the family it meant greater privation.

In 1966 the average African worker was earning $400 a year which does not spread very far, while the average non-African worker was earning $3,990 a year and there had been an increase of 11 per cent in jobs held by whites during those nine years.

It might be suggested that Africans were compensated by earning more through employment on the land, but figures reveal that agricultural cash sales gave Africans about $15,000,000 in 1957 and the figure dropped to $13,000,000 in 1966—a small yield indeed.

Meanwhile, the value of European agriculture, divided among a mere 4,400 whites working on the land, rose from $89,000,000 to $140,000,000.

These figures show that the 1965 declaration of independence was a selfish move to entrench white privilege, rather than any altruistic idea of safeguarding development for all people.

Letters to the Editor

Toronto Telegram

The British Court of Appeal, absolving the London Daily Telegraph and one of its writers-to-the-editor from libel, had some good advice for those who want to use the letter column effectively.

As encouragement to our own letter-writers, we paraphrase parts of the judge's opinion:

1. A citizen should be free to write to a newspaper and the newspaper should be free to publish his letter. It is often the only way to put things right.

2. The subject matter of the letter should be one of public interest.

3. The writer must get his facts right and he must honestly state his real opinion.

The observance of these rules raises a correspondent's chances that his letter will be published.

Anzac Merger Possible

Buffalo Evening News

New Zealand, feeling increasingly isolated as British power fades in the Far East, is giving second thoughts to proposals for union with Australia. Having a population of only 2.7 million, New Zealand has naturally feared losing its identity in such a merger but now may have to swallow its pride — especially if Britain cuts its traditional trade ties in order to join the Common Market. Australia and New Zealand already have a limited free-trade agreement and coordinate their defence through a treaty with the United States. Those who have doubts about uniting two nations that are separated by 1,200 miles of open water have only to remember that America has one of its states twice that far offshore. The merger plan would create a nation of 14.7 million that would be much better equipped to contribute stability and leadership to post-imperial Asia.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 8, 1948.

Through the courtesy of the Belleville Motor Club, inmates of the Hastings County Home have enjoyed several evenings of entertainment this winter when they have been shown a series of moving pictures. The films were secured from the Belleville Film Council library.

The regular dinner meeting of the Optimist Club was held last evening at the YMCA with the president, Jack Devine, presiding. Optimist Don Boyce introduced Fred Clinkhammer, representative of the Atlas Steel Co., who showed a most instructive, enlightening film depicting the operation of the steel industry in Canada. Club thanks were expressed by Jack Sharland.

30 YEARS AGO

February 8, 1938.

Mrs. E. Roy Logie, the first woman to be appointed a member of the Corby Public Library Board, was welcomed at the meeting of the board Friday evening. J. W. Imlah occupied the chair in the absence of the chairman, E. B. Lally. In the election of officers E. B. Lally was re-elected chairman and H. J. Clarke was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Charles N. Sulman was elected chairman of the finance committee.

Fred H. Deacon left yesterday on a business trip to Germany and Austria.

Mrs. Jamieson Bone has left for Vancouver where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. C. Merritt and Mr. Merritt.

40 YEARS AGO

February 8, 1928.

At the annual meeting of the congregation of John Street United Church the chair was occupied by B. C. Donnan. The sum of over $10,000 was raised during the year and after paying all expenses a nice cash balance remains. P. G. Denike and Alex Morrice were appointed elders and thereby automatically dropped from the board of managers; they were replaced by J. B. Boyce and George McArthur.

From our file copy at this time in 1898: "Dr. A. E. Wills, youngest son of Thomas Wills, county treasurer, has arrived home from the Klondike where he spent four years."

50 YEARS AGO

Closed to Save Coal: Belleville presented a strange scene on Saturday; it was the first of the heatless days ordered by the Dominion Fuel Controller. Stores were locked, except barber shops, grocery stores and news stands. There is a restriction covering the sale of certain lines of goods in these stores. Banks are permitted to remain open for the payment of obligations only, not for general business. Few people were in town from the country and about 1800 people are idle from the stores, offices and factories. The police have orders from Chief John Newton to see that the regulations are strictly observed."

500 GM Employees in Oshawa, Windsor Stage Walkout

TORONTO (CP) — Union employees at General Motors' plants in Oshawa and Windsor walked off their jobs Wednesday night as negotiations here between GM and the United Auto Workers appeared deadlocked.

The walkout in Oshawa began at 8 p.m. when 500 employees at the truck plant walked out to protest slow progress in negotiations with GM.

By 11 p.m., during the rest period, another 3,000 workers in the car assembly plant and the parts and service department joined the walkout.

All are members of UAW Local 222.

Steve Nimigon, chairman of the Local 222 bargaining committee, said the walkout was not sanctioned by the union.

Mr. Nimigon said the Friday midnight strike deadline set in negotiations between the UAW and GM would be adhered to.

The GM plant was shut down by the walkout.

At Windsor, the evening shift of about 400 men at the GM trim plant walked off the job at 7:30 p.m.

A union official said the strike, by members of Local 195, was sanctioned by George Burt, Canadian director of the UAW, after the workers walked out.

Pickets at Windsor said they left their jobs because supervisory personnel were being used for union jobs after workers refused to work overtime loading freight cars.

UAW Local 444, which represents Chrysler workers in Windsor, voted financial support Wednesday night for striking GM workers.

Chrysler settled a strike with the UAW last week.

GM and the UAW were deadlocked over GM's insistence that Canadian work practices must be brought in line with those of GM plant in the United States as a condition of wage parity.

General Motors wants two major changes in work practices:

Northern Switches To UAW

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Labor Relations Board Wednesday announced the United Auto Workers have been certified as the bargaining agents for 349 employees at two Northern Electric Co. Ltd. plants in Ontario.

The plants, with 225 employees in London, and 124 in Belleville, were represented previously by the Northern Electric Office Employees' Association.

Last week, company production workers in London voted 780 to 139 to drop the company association in favor of the UAW.

Webster Cornwall, UAW coordinator of technical and office workers today said the union now will seek certification as bargaining agents for about 800 Northern Electric office employees at Bramalea, Ont., near Toronto.

Spray Bomb Not Handy

TRENTON — A local letter carrier was caught without his dog-spray yesterday.

Belleville provincial police say a dog owned by residents of 15 McGill Avenue, Middleton Park is being tied up and kept under rabies observation for 14 days after biting postman Howard Perry.

Perry was not seriously injured.

"We think it's just a case of a cross dog, a police spokesman said.

The mailman was not carrying the newly-approved "dog repellent spray bomb available to Canadian postmen at their option.

Plaza Issue

Members of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board will hold a public hearing and special meeting at city hall tonight at 7.30 to consider an application for a spot zoning change in the North Front Street area to allow construction of a proposed shopping plaza.

Local realtor Doug Grant two weeks ago made the application to city council which in turn referred the request to the planning board

The proposal is for a million dollar plaza which eventually could employ up to 200 persons.

Hog Producers Protest Premium Cut; Suggest Japan Best Market Potential

Hastings county hog producers are protesting the recent federal government decision to reduce the premium for grade A hogs as part of an economic measure to stabilize the country's economy.

Under the program the premium on grade A hogs is to be reduced on April 1 from $3 to $2 per hog, and on the basis of county hog production will cost Hastings farmers approximately $10,000. About 50 per cent of the 21,000 hogs marketing annually in the county are classed grade A.

At the Hastings County Hog Producers' annual meetng at Ivanhoe Wednesday, members voted to forward letters to local members of parliament protesting the premium reduction.

Association president Burton Hubble said that when the premium reduction was first announced farmers accepted it as their contribution in helping to stabilize the economy.

But since then hog producers have learned that many of the other proposed "cuts" are on paper only.

Approximately 100 hog producers attended the meeting and heard their provincial president Fred Crowe suggest the best potential market for Ontario hogs was in Japan.

The reason for this thinking was that because of devaluation of the British pound, prices are not up to Canadian costs and continued marketing with European countries would mean a two price system.

Howard Malcolm of Janetville, member of a special committee which visited European countries last year to view livestock production and marketing policies, showed colored slides of his trip.

Hog raising methods in England, Ireland, Holland, Germany and Denmark were shown as well as co-operative packing plants and sales procedures.

New association directors for 1968 were named as follows: Sidney, Burton Hubble and Don Shorey; Thurlow, Garnet Denyes and Don Sills; Tyendinaga, Carman Gibson and Harold Murphy; Rawdon, Murney Bateman and Morton Reid; Huntingdon, Russell Sills and Douglas Farrell; Hungerford, Stan Eaton and Milton Elliott; Marmora, Irwin McCoy and Morley Chard; and Madoc, Wilfred Forestell and Harold Harris.

The directors will meet to choose a new executive before the provincial annual meeting in Toronto on March 20-21.

Ron Ellis in action at Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto.

Ron Ellis talks about his $40,000 London Life policy

(And explains how he can triple his money!)

RON ELLIS, 23, plays right wing for the Toronto Maple Leafs. However, he realizes he can't play in the N.H.L. forever. That's why he's working toward a B.A. with the idea of teaching when he retires from hockey.

Ron is also active in the development of a resort, Sandhurst Vacationland Ltd., just north of Huntsville. He first started to think about life insurance when he and Jan were planning their wedding in 1966.

"I knew that if I waited a few years to buy life insurance, it would cost me quite a bit more. A business friend recommended a man from London Life. I gave him a call and we got together a couple of times.

"I liked the program he recommended. A $40,000 Jubilee whole life policy with premiums to age 65.

"We don't have children, yet, but this policy should protect my family for quite a few years to come. I guess I'm like a lot of people. I didn't think of insurance as a way to save. But this is a real good deal."

Here are the facts about Ron's $40,000 policy which he bought at age 21. His annual premium is $561.60. To age 65, he will pay in $24,710. But the Jubilee policy is a participating policy that brings Ron dividends every year. He is leaving these to accumulate at interest. So at age 65, his policy will be worth over $73,000*. Almost triple the money he paid in!

"I feel good about my teaching and resort plans. And I'm happy with my life insurance. It's protecting my family. And it's a good investment. In the years ahead my London Life man will help me keep my insurance program up to date."

For a small additional premium Ron has added the Guaranteed Insurance Option to his program. This permits him to buy more insurance at regular intervals up to age 40 —without a medical examination.

To learn more about how life insurance can protect your family and fit in to your investment plans, talk to a London Life representative. And send for your free copy of the handbook "Plain talk about life insurance." Write to Department P, London Life Insurance Company, London, Ontario.

This figure is made up of $26,880 in guaranteed cash value and the balance in accumulated dividends based on the current scale. While dividends are not guaranteed, London Life for years has hcd one of the most outstanding records of dividend payments in North America.*

110 Dead Rabbits In Shack

ORILLIA (CP) — Three dogs and about 110 rabbitts, more than half of them dead, were removed Wednesday from an 18-by-35-foot shack owned by George Hollingshead, who was taken to hospital Tuesday with ulcerous legs.

Mr. Hollingshead, 74, was removed from a windowless room in the shack which he has called home for 16 years. Hospital officials reported his in good condition.

The shack, in Matchedash Township, 20 miles northwest of Orillia, had no running water, no toilet facilities or electricity and was lined with tar paper and sack cloth.

New Training Program Aimed At Improving Maths Teaching

WATERLOO (CP) — A new concept in teacher training designed to increase the number and quality of high school mathematics teachers in Ontario will be introduced here in January, the acting president of the University of Waterloo announced today.

Dr. Howard E. Petch said in a statement that Waterloo mathematics students interested in teaching careers will alternate four-month terms at university with corresponding periods in co-operating high schools.

"The province of Ontario faces a critical shortage of qualified teachers within the next five years. This program can help attract students to the teaching profession and can help students themselves to determine whether or not they are suited for careers in teaching."

Graduates of the three-year general course would have 12 months of teaching experience when they attained a degree.

Cowan Fails to Get New Debate on CBC

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's fishing industry is going through a trying period and to help it, more must be done to make Canadians realize that seafood is one of the better buys they can make, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Lloyd R. Crouse (PC—Queens-Lunenburg), an executive of a Nova Scotia fishing firm, said high labor and operating costs are such that only the strongest, financially-backed companies can survive.

In other business, the Commons:

—Gave final reading to the new broadcasting bill but not before Liberal maverick Ralph B. Cowan (York-Humber) tried to send the long-debated bill back to committee study to debate a clause dealing with cable television. His motion was defeated 107 to 89.

—Agreed to send regulations and cabinet orders dealing with the unification of the armed forces to the defence committee after complaints the move was months too late.

Mr. Cowan had support of 72 Conservatives, six Creditistes, four Social Crediters, four New Democrats and two independents in his attempt to send the broadcasting bill back to committee.

After the vote, Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax) and Robert Prittie (NDP—Burnaby-Richmond) got in last criticisms.

Mr. McCleave said his party remains to be convinced the legislation is in the best interests of the Canadian people.

Mr. Prittie said deleting the clause that would have given the CBC a five-year capital budget instead of one was a mistake.

Those Who Travel, Talk

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

Both the people who look on life as a chore and who look on life as a lark are victims of the same error, from different sides — for the purpose of a chore is to gain time for a lark, and the purpose of a lark is to enjoy fruits of a chore; but either without the other is eventually boring, unsatisfying and self-defeating to the spirit.

How many travelers would bother to take trips if they were bound to a vow of silence about the venture upon their return?

Basically, all ideologies aside, there are only two kinds of states: those in which the police are an arm of the government, and those in which the government is an arm of the police.

Cultivated persons prefer brevity, quietness, indirectness, and doubt; common persons prefer prolixity, loudness, obviousness, and credulity. (This is why television, which embraces all four of the latter qualities, is most popular among the least educated.)

Failure enlarges the spirit of a strong character and damages the spirit of a weak character; while success makes a strong character more gentle and a weak character more tyrannous

An employee who tells his boss what he thinks the boss wants to hear, rather than what he believes to be true, is cheating him as much as if he collected a full week's work for one day's pay; and many a man who would not dream of cheating by withholding his efforts will cheat by withholding his candor.

There is an optimum distance for viewing any object in order to understand its proper place: a mountain viewed from a distance looks like a grain of sand, while a grain of sand viewed up against the eye looks like a mountain; in making judgments, perspective is all.

One good test of philosophic maturity is whether you're able to grasp the meaning of Nietzsche's trenchant aphorism: "The man of enlightenment must be able not only to love his enemies, but to hate his friends."

A jealous person is one who is fonder of suspicions than of certainties, and thus refuses to exchange the one for the other.

Failure to respect a child's privacy — of spirit, as well as of material existence — is responsible for more estrangement between parents and children than any other single cause.

An "epoch" is the starting-point of a new era in history, not the era itself.

Peterborough Examiner Sold to Thomson Papers

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Sale of the Peterborough Examiner to Thomson Newspapers was announced today by Robertson Davies, publisher of The Examiner. Purchase price was not disclosed.

The newspaper, established in 1847, will be taken over by its new owners March 31. W. J. Garner, now general manager, will become publisher and general manager.

At a meeting with department heads representing the 140 employees of the newspaper, Mr. Davies said he was "sure the change from our management to that of Thomson Newspapers will be achieved smoothly and with goodwill."

The Examiner, with a circulation of 27,513, becomes one of the Thomson group's largest Canadian newspapers. More than $1,000,000 was spent recently in renovation of its plant, including new press facilities. The Thomson group owns 27 other Canadian daily newspapers.

Ottawa Will Not Be 'Strip-teased' of Its Economic Powers

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday that welfare programs, equalization payments and tax arrangements must all be part of a thorough study of constitutional reform.

But he told the federal-provincial constitutional conference Ottawa will not be "strip-teased" of its important powers to regulate the economy.

He was sympathetic to the unanimous plea of Atlantic premiers for higher equalization payments. He saw reason in the contention of Quebec Premier Johnson that governments closest to individuals enjoying social security should administer these programs.

He acknowledged, in response to Premier Robarts of Ontario, that joint tax arrangements cannot be left out of the federal-provincial review of powers and responsibilities under the constitution.

But the prime minister said that to share the wealth, there must be wealth to share.

"It is a principal function of the federal government to have the economic power and economic wisdom to maintain stable and increasing prosperity."

Ottawa would keep substantial power to tax, spend and distribute money.

The session was marked by a striking difference of view between Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland and Premier Bennett of British Columbia over the principle of equalization.

Mr. Smallwood said it lies at the very heart of the federal system for strong members to help less fortunate members provide adequate services to their citizens.

Mr. Bennett said the money should not be transferred to governments. It should go into the pockets of the workers through guarantees of higher minimum wages and more efficient industry.

The Atlantic premiers and Manitoba Treasurer Gurney Evans all stated that economic inequality is a problem as important as any other facing Canada.

Premier Johnson tackled federal welfare and development programs. Some, like the agricultural and rural development agency, had been of great benefit to poorer regions.

But some social welfare measures were creating whole generations living off the public purse. There was a "mad race" between Ottawa and the provinces to leap into welfare services ahead of one another.

The waste of money was "nothing short of scandalous."

He urged, and Mr. Pearson accepted, the need for a review of overlapping welfare programs at all levels.

Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick argued that many federal development efforts in the Atlantic provinces have been "contradictory and self-defeating."

He said the Atlantic Development Board, now funded at $100,000,000, should be given lending power of $1,000,000,000 and function as an autonomous body instead of an arm, agency or apologist for the federal government.

Premiers Glad Parley Public

OTTAWA (CP)—There was general agreement among all concerned Wednesday that the decision to allow wide-open news coverage of this week's federal-provincial constitutional conference was the right one.

Earlier suggestions that an open conference might inhibit discussion were dismissed by the principal participants.

"I'm glad it was in public," Prime Minister Pearson told a news conference after the windup of the three-day meeting with the provincial premiers.

"I think this was a good conference to have met in the public view."

Asked whether he felt any different because of CBC radio and television network coverage and the presence of news reporters, Mr. Pearson said it did not make any difference to him from the usual closed-door sessions.

Ontario's Premier Robarts said in an interview he believes the days of closed federal-provincial conferences "are gone forever."

The decision to open Monday's initial session during opening statements was announced some time ago. But it was left up to the premiers after their arrival here whether subsequent meetings should be held on that basis.

Just before Wednesday's adjournment, Premier Johnson of Quebec said he was glad the conference "took the people into its confidence" by opening the discussions to the news media.

He said the precedent had been established by Ontario's Premier Robarts at the Confederation of Tomorrow conference.

The Canadian Press interviewed other premiers for their reaction.

Premier Bennett of British Columbia said: "I think this conference raised some very fundamental issues important to all Canadians and I'm extremely happy the conference got as much public exposure as it did."

Premier Manning of Alberta said he had no definite opinion on the principle, "but now I'm just as happy that most of the conference was on television for the benefit of the Canadian people."

Premier Smith of Nova Scotia said there was "a pretty frank discussion," despite live TV coverage.

An enthusiastic Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick remarked:

"I think it's the greatest thing that ever happened. We should have more open conferences."

Ontario Asks Bigger Tax Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Robarts made it clear Wednesday Ontario will seek a larger share of federal tax revenues after current federal-provincial "fiscal arrangements" expire Dec. 31.

He told the constitutional conference it is impossible to ignore fiscal matters while discussing shifts in federal-provincial powers.

If the provinces are to assume new responsibilities, "we must also examine the resources available to us to meet these responsibilities."

"We should take a completely new approach to this problem", he said predicting the provincial and federal governments will meet soon to work out a new tax-sharing plan.

Mr. Robarts said he calls them "fiscal arrangements" rather than "fiscal agreements" because the federal government never agrees to Ontario's demands.

Ontario's repeated demand has been for a larger share in federal tax revenues.

He said there also has to be a higher degree of consultation between the federal governments on financial matters "if we are not to get ourselves in real financial trouble nationally."

And he called on the federal government to come up with a new approach to solve regional economic disparities in Canada.

The Ontario premier said the obvious need for new solutions prompted him to suggest last December that the federal government borrow $1,000,000,000 to loan to developing industries in have-not provinces.

It would be "a straight national investment."

Discussions of how much money should be in the fund are "academic."

"It could be $1,000,000,000 or $2,000,000,000. It doesn't matter."

He appeared to be answering Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland, who praised the plan but said $1,000,000,000 is just a "drop in the bucket" when divided among the five provinces "east of the Ottawa River."

Mr. Smallwood called Mr. Robarts' proposal a "magnificent" gesture from "a big-hearted statesman."

PM Hopes New Constitution Can Be Drafted in 3 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick said this week that Canada's constitution is a bore and therefore probably reflects the Canadian character.

But there was nothing boring about the wrangling over the constitution at the three-day federal-provincial conference—or about those who were doing the wrangling.

What the federal and provincial governments now have set out to do is to rewrite the constitution. "Tinkering" is not enough, as Prime Minister Pearson put it.

Mr. Pearson says he hopes the job will take less than three years. But his successor as prime minister would have to preside over a lot of meetings of the continuing constitutional conference.

The constitution is the 1867 British North America Act, which still must be amended by the British Parliament.

Canada has not yet even figured out a way to bring the BNA Act to Canada or a method of amending it.

That in itself is a measure of the task ahead. But the difficulties don't stop there.

Quebec wants a new constitution, "made in Canada by Canadians, for Canadians."

Other provinces don't see the need for much change, if any, in the constitution. They say it has worked well for 100 years and, therefore, why not leave it alone?

Quebec wants more powers. Ottawa and the other provinces are objecting strongly to at least some of these demands.

There are still other problems.

Does it require the unanimous consent of Ottawa and all the provinces to amend certain sections of the constitution?

Premier E. C. Manning of Alberta says yes. Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau says maybe yes, maybe no.

There are some pretty hoary sections in the 147-clause BNA Act.

For instance, section 139 says acts in effect in Upper and Lower Canada in 1867 are still in effect in Ontario and Quebec.

To make sure this section is out of date and can be dropped, all statutes of Upper and Lower Canada will have to be searched. Presumably, they are still in some archives—somewhere.

Section 119 expired in 1877 but is still in the BNA Act. It called for annual payment of $63,000 to New Brunswick for 10 years after Confederation for joining up.

The great sections of the BNA Act are 91, setting out federal powers; 92, setting out provincial powers; 93 which deals with education—by religion, not language; and 133, which says that both French and English are official languages in federal and Quebec legislatures and courts.

Section 133 represents the crux of the great issue before the conference which ended here Wednesday.

Ottawa wants to amend the section to guarantee French as an official language in the English provinces, just as English now is constitutionally guaranteed in Quebec.

It advanced the novel proposal that the necessary amendment be made—in the traditional way by going to the British Parliament—but that the provinces adopt it progressively as each saw fit to do so.

Nothing doing, Mr. Manning said. An amendment on language rights required unanimous consent of the provinces.

There are precedents for such action, Mr. Pearson said. So the matter was turned over to a special committee.

Led by Premier Robarts of Ontario, province after province said it was ready to make French an official language in its legislature or to provide more French-language facilities in government and education—or both.

In the cases of Ontario, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island, it was both.

British Columbia was the only holdout. But even it joined the unanimous declaration that French-language rights be recognized in English Canada.

Pearson Tables Plan About Foreign Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Wednesday left the road open for changes in federal-provincial procedures in formation of external policy, but repeated that only the federal government is empowered to act on behalf of Canada.

The views were set out in a [illegible]-page policy paper presented by Prime Minister Pearson without comment at the end of the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

The paper, written by External Affairs Minister Martin, broke little new ground but laid stress on ways in which provinces can accomplish foreign objectives through federal action.

Potatoes Cheaper by The Bag

Ever since Sir Walter Raleigh planted potatoes on his estate in Ireland, potatoes have become increasingly available to cooks everywhere Because today's housewives demanded speedier ways to serving potatoes, food processors have provided them in the can or frozen package as well as in the box as chips or dehydrated slices, granules or flakes. Although these products are all extremely useful for the busy housewife, it must be remembered that the processing adds to the cost. The best buy is still fresh potatoes sold in the bag. Fresh potatoes can be served for as little as one to two cents per serving providing an extremely inexpensive food.

Considering the size of her family the housewife may buy potatoes in bags ranging in weight from 5 to 75 pounds. The most popular sizes are 10, 25 and 50 pounds. The larger size is the most economical buy providing, of couse, that there is adequate storage space. Good flavor and quality are best assured if potatoes are stored away from light, at a temperature of 45 degrees F to 50 degrees F, with good air circulation.

Canada No. 1 grade potatoes are available all across Canada. In order to meet the standards for this grade, potatoes must be of good quality, within a certain size range and be relatively free of defects or decay. Certain tolerances are allowed, however, for damage during harvesting or shipping. Many of the defects can be removed when the potatoes are peeled.

Potatoes can be quickly prepared and cooked at home. Here are some tips from home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture. — Boil potatoes with their skins on for quick preparation and utmost retention of food value. Choose uniform size, medium potatoes (or cut them in half), scrub and cook in boiling, salted water about 20 minutes. —Pressure cook potatoes with skins on. Medium-size potatoes take only 8 minutes to pressure cook. — Bake potatoes quickly by cutting them in half. Brush cut side with fat and place cut side down on baking sheet. They will take only about 35 minutes to bake in a 400 degree F oven.

Cheesecake for Valentine's

By MARY MOORE

Without anticipating it I discovered this to be an easy Valentine dessert. Romantic teen-agers could make it when their boy friends are invited for dinner or the evening with the gang on Valentine's Day.

It is not a true cheesecake texture but it does call for cheese and you will see that the crushed pineapple in it absorbs the pink color of the raspberry jello and looks pretty.

VALENTINE CHEESECAKE (serves 8)

⅓ cup very fine graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons melted butter
one 20-oz. can crushed pineapple
1 envelope (1 tablespoon) plain gelatine
one 3-oz. package raspberry jelly powder
two 8-oz. packages white cream cheese (room temperature)
2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups whipping cream (½ pint — divided)
2 or 3 pineapple rings (garnish)
2 or 3 drained maraschino cherries (garnish)

Have ready in advance mixed together in a small bowl the graham cracker crumbs, sugar and melted butter.

In a large saucepan soak gelatine in crushed pineapple 10 minutes. Add raspberry jelly powder and stir over low heat until jelly powder and gelatine are dissolved. Cool to room temperature, standing pan in a larger one containing cold water.

In beater bowl beat cheese until creamy then add lemon juice and salt. When pineapple mixture has cooled to room temperature fold in whipped cheese until smoothly blended. Whip ¾ cup of the cream until stiff and fold in. Turn into lightly oiled heart-shaped mould. (NOTE: the 5-cup capacity heart-shaped moulds you can buy for layer cakes and moulds like this are slightly too small for this so you will have to pour about ¾ cup of the mixture into a glass serving dish to set and taste in advance.)

Give graham cracker crumb mixture a stir and very smoothly sprinkle over top, patting to be sure they do not spill over. Chill.

When serving time arrives loosen edges by running knife around sides. Dip bottom of mould in hot water for 5 seconds only. Invert an attractive serving plate over top and turn over, crumb side down. Decorate top with two or three overlapping rings of drained pineapple. In centre of each put one maraschino cherry. Whip remaining ½ cup cream and apply as a narrow ruffle around top edge.

Squeezing Egg Helps In Temper Outbursts

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After reading the letter from the father who went to the hardware store and bought a rubber barrel for his kids to kick when they got mad, I decided to tell you how we handled the problem in our family.

We had three young boys to raise and anyone with children knows that hardly a day passes that somebody doesn't get mad. Most of the scraps were minor but every now and then a temper would reach the boiling point. So we made a rule: Anyone who was really angry went to the refrigerator, got an egg and took a walk. He then tried to squeeze the egg in the palm of his hand, trying as hard as he could to break it.

Well, Ann, it is nearly impossible to break an egg this way. Pretty soon the squeezer felt awfully foolish. Can you imagine venting all that anger on an egg and not being able to break it? If the ill will wasn't completely dissipated by the time the person got to the big oak tree on the far side of our lot, he was allowed to throw the egg against the tree. If the anger was gone, the egg went back in the refrigerator.

We raised three wonderful boys, Anne, and we lost very few eggs. — HEN'S FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND: What a wonderful story. Frankly I was suspicious so I went to the refrigerator and got an egg and tried to break it by squeezing it in the palm of my hand. You were right. I couldn't do it. The things I learn from my readers!

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Four of us women have been playing bridge together for many years. One of the ladies is a darling but her hearing has been getting worse and now I suspect she is as deaf as a post.

Last week the three of us spent most of the afternoon repeating and shouting. This dear lady was playing in a manner which indicated that she did not hear the bidding, and she was not aware of what was trump.

We hate to hurt her feelings but it is no longer pleasant to play cards with her. What should be done? — MIXED DEAL.

DEAR MIXED: One of you kind ladies should take your dear friend aside and tell her that her deafness is apparent and she should see a doctor and learn what can be done about it. There are many excellent hearing aids on the market which could possibly give this woman a new lease on life. Do suggest it. It would be an act of kindness.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a boy of 17 who has a real tough problem. I like a certain girl but have never had the nerve to ask her out because I have a terrible case of acne and I don't think I should impose myself on a girl.

Last week the girl I like asked me to a benefit dance. Her mother is chairman and they had some extra tickets. I accepted and was really excited about going at first but now I am wondering if I am being fair to her. Honest, Ann, my face is such a mess it's enough to make a person sick.

Do you think maybe she asked me because she feels sorry for me? Help me see this thing for what it is. — CONFUSED OF N.H.S.

DEAR N.H.S.: Most kids who have acne imagine they look a lot worse than they actually do. It could be that the girl hasn't given your acne a thought.

I hope that you will go to a skin specialist and follow his instructions In the last few years the doctors have discovered good techniques for controlling and curing acne. Get moving and good luck, fella.

Hockey Wife Has Little Social Life

Dear Doris: We have been married for three happy years. However, things aren't going so smoothly right now. My husband plays hockey sometimes three times a week and won't go out the other nights because he says he needs to rest up for the next game.

This leaves me sitting here at home. He says, "Come along." I do not overly enjoy hockey games and besides we have a two-year-old boy. Baby sitters are scarce as hens' teeth even if we could afford one.

I enjoy visiting and am also the secretary of our church youth group. I don't even have a way to these activities as I don't drive in the winter. Am I being selfish to ask him to quit playing hockey? — Wondering.

Dear Wondering: Not selfish to want a chance for the odd date with him; but perhaps not wise to deprive him of a healthy sport. Hockey doesn't last all year.

My suggestions are:

(1) Attend one hockey game a week and learn about the game. Get to visiting with the other wives. Marriage is a sharing.

(2) Take driving lessons until winter conditions don't throw you, as it were. Why be immobilized half the year?

(3) Bargain with Hubby for some special spring and summer dates — and agree to quit grousing about hockey during hockey season.

Dear Doris: I just saw the letter fom "Content but Bored" (who like their jobs but haven't enough to do). I must say that is the funniest letter I've seen in the paper for years. That is the hardest thing for me to do: look busy, do nothing.

DORIS CLARK

Now girls, I'll tell you what to do. Will you do it? I have a son in his 20's. He is now a meteorological technician up in the Arctic watching weather. He might appreciate a letter from you. He is afraid of girls like I was. I got married at 40.

Type us a letter when not busy. Tell us what you like to do, fish, drive car. Send me a carbon copy and I guarantee I'll read it ten times and answer it.

I'm an old man 73. I and 13 other men hauled all the C. N. R. freight in and out of the freight sheds in Edmonton in 1913-14. No cars then, just horses. Edmonton was only a tent town north of C. N. R. freight sheds so changed now I must say. — North Country.

Dear North: Hope the "Contend but Bored" girls read this and write in.

You can get pan pals, and so can your son; and I'm thinking you'd have plenty to write about. The list of pen pal services is on its way to you.

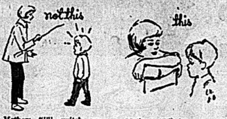
To Bad Back: It just isn't smart — or even economical —to grab a shovel and charge into piled-up snow, when you haven't done it for a while. Sometimes it takes a couple of days to really feel the damage in the small of the back.

One rule of thumb: A woman should never lift more than 25 pounds, and a man should never lift more than half his weight, even in good physical condition. I'm sending you the leaflet: "Ten Ways to Help Avoid Backache". (Available to readers for ten cents and a five-cent-stamped envelope.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I'll switch you harder if you ever throw mud on the other children again. That is no way to behave."

John: "You're a mean mother. Jimmy threw mud at me."

Mother: "I'll have to get Jimmy's coat cleaned and you can pay me back out of your allowance. We always have to fix or replace things we damage. Would you like to tell me what started the trouble?"

Even necessary discipline can be kept on a friendly basis, if the penalty fits the fault. The object is to teach self-control — not merely to punish a misdeed.

Club Activities

CONTACT CLUB

The Contact Club of Christ Church held its regular meeting on Monday evening with the president, Mrs. Lillian Middleton in charge. There were 11 members present.

During the business Irene Grills, secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting and Edith Pringle, treasurer, reported on the club's finances.

There was some discussion on the "Family Life" party planned for this coming Sunday, February 11, from 3 to 5 p.m. This event will include an afternoon of fellowship for parents and children commencing with a short service in the church at 3 o'clock. Immediately following, a reception will be held including cartoons for the children and the serving of refreshments.

Each and every member is assisting in this worthwhile endeavor and Iris Foster was commended for her efforts in compiling as complete a membership list as possible.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the social convener Carol Kidd assisted by Edith Pringle.

There's more to a driver training school than just driving, as these Moira students know. There are 25 hours of classroom instruction involved, followed by a written test. At left, Dave Brown works on his test, while Wendy Howard, who's handed in her paper, checks the textbook to see how she did. At the right, Valerie Overton, Wendy Howard, and Heather Mann get some pointers on their test results from one of their instructors, Mr. Storms.

Student Attitude Stressed

Driver Education Program in Full Swing at Moira School

Youth Parade

By STEVE BISHOP

Driver education has come to Belleville secondary schools with one program in full swing at Moira, and two more in preparation at Quinte and Centennial.

The driving school now in effect at Moira has 16 students, and when their course is completed, a new group will replace them.

The course is being taught by two Moira teachers, Norman Storms and Leo McKenney, who took a driver instruction course this summer in order to qualify as driving teachers.

"The main thing about the course," said Mr. Storms, "is that the students get a chance to learn more about the rules of the road and different driving procedures."

Mr. McKenney stated "Anyone can stop, start, and drive a car. We stress driver attitude and safety procedures."

Each student pays $20 to enter the course, and there are no entrance qualifications. The student may have his 120-day beginner's permit, but it is not necessary until he actually takes to the road. Some of the students even have their licence.

The course entails 25 hours of classroom instruction, six hours of driving time, and 12 hours of observation time, with someone else driving.

The text for classroom instruction is "Sportsmanlike Driving", and is accompanied by a test booklet. The test is given to the students at the completion of classroom time, and a mark of 80 per cent or better is expected.

The students are also given a road test similar to that given by the Department of Transport for a drivers' licence, but it does not qualify a student for his licence.

Both teachers pointed out that the course does not guarantee a licence, and that students might do well to practise on their own to supplement the instruction.

Those who complete the course to the satisfaction of the instructors receive a ten per cent reduction on their insurance rates. Local insurance companies have indicated that they are enthusiastic about the program.

The students themselves have nothing but praise for the driving school.

"It teaches you little things that you wouldn't learn otherwise," said Dave Brown, 17. "You have people coming to talk to you, too, like provincial policemen."

Wendy Howard, 17, said, "It produces a lot of safe drivers. Without this, it would have taken me a lot longer to learn how to drive, and I wouldn't have learned as much."

Dave Lenny, 16, stated, "It is better to learn from somebody who knows exactly what they're doing."

"My father was able to stay in the car with me after these lessons," was the comment of Maureen Poldrick, 16. "It has helped me to get my licence much sooner."

Valerie Overton, 17, summed up the students' attitude well. "I don't think I would have wanted to learn to drive any other way."

The driver training program has also been timetabled for the Grade 10 students in the two-year boys occupational course.

The popularity of the course is evident. The success of the course should soon be equally evident, as it produces better drivers for the future.

Interesting Assembly

Drama Production at Quinte Secondary Successful--$700 Profit

By SUE BOARDMAN

WELL VARIETY Review is over for another year and the worries and fun that go with it are gone until next February. Our appreciation goes out to Mr. Buckley who was our producer.

When all of the production costs are paid, it is estimated that we will have another $700 to go towards our new track. On Saturday night after the performance, there was a small party for the cast until 12 o'clock.

On Wednesday afternoon at about 2:45 our students were all nicely settled in class, or for those in Variety Review were engrossed in our dress rehearsal. Suddenly we heard the clang - clang - clang of the fire alarm. "Alright who's the wise guy?" most of us thought.

Then we jumped up and hurried to the nearest exit. Now, for all of you who think that spring and the warm weather is on the way, forget it! It was very cold outside without a coat on. A few minutes later we were let back into class, and not another thing was said about this incident to the student body.

What happened? Evidently the school didn't burn down. In the gym, someone was piling up mats and somehow managed to hit the fire alarm — thus our sudden discovery of the weather.

• • •

SPEAKING OF the weather — if you ask a Quinte student or teacher about the weather you may not get the expected answer. Mr. Archer will probably tell you that it's terrible even though it may be a warm 40 degrees outside.

This is because he is from the West Indies and this is the first time he has had to deal with snow and these cold temperatures. Then again if you ask Miss Ogilvie, she may say that we are having lovely weather because she has just come to Belleville from Rankin Inlet where she has been working with the Eskimos.

I've heard of a number of our students who have gone or are going to Florida or the West Indies for a break from this weather. If anyone feels generous, how about starting up a campaign to send this poor little girl on a few days holidays in the Caribbean?

• • •

LAST WEEK we had one of our most interesting assemblies of the year. It was sponsored by the World Affairs Club and they had as their guest Laurier LaPierre. He talked to us about Canada, its future and French-Canadians. After, there was a question and answer period. Unfortunately LaPierre did not have time to answer all the questions due to another engagement.

All last week we had different classes of grade eights from King George School come and visit grade nine classrooms for one afternoon. This was done in the hope that these people get better acquainted with high school and help them with their decisions of what course and options to take next year.

• • •

THEY AREN'T the only ones who are having to decide about the next year or two either. All of the school is being registered for the year 1968-69. The guidance office seems to be quite busy, helping students and giving them advice.

That's what they are there for though, so if you have a problem or are unsure of what move to make go to one of the guidance counsellors. Remember they are there to help you.

On Saturday our bantam basketball team played in a tournament at BCI. They won all of their games to the finals, but lost their last game to Centennial.

On that bit of news, I will sign off for another week.

So next Thursday be sure to tune in to the same newspaper, the same page, the same reporter, but different news.

Dance Slated

Singing Exceptional in Nicholson Play--Best Yet

By DONNA WHALEN

THE DRAMA CLUB'S presentation this year has gone down in the books as the best yet. The play was not only a drama but a musical as well and in the words of Mr. Alexander the adjudicator "the singing was exceptional".

In the review, special recogniton was given to Michael Reid, who played Freddy, for his vocal talent. The best actress award was presented to Grace Hicks (Eliza Doolittle) and the best actor award to Paul Black (Henry Higgins).

• • •

ONE CANNOT fail to think, as the play unfolds and the players express their lines, that an extensive amount of study and guidance has been involved. As usual there is at least one person who has been concerned, who has worried about the finished product and devoted endless hours to the overall production. Nicholson's "Pygmalion" is no exception. We salute therefore the director of this play — Sister Mary Fleurette.

• • •

ON SATURDAY, February 10, the Sodality of NCC will sponsor a dance with the fabulous "Sands of Time". Admission is $1 per person.

Regular school dress is required and admission will be refused to girls who come in slacks. This dance signals the beginning of NCC's mission project and the proceeds will go to the poor. Here's your chance to have fun and support a good cause at the same time.

• • •

EVERY YEAR about this time there comes a day when the brave and not-so brave face the challenge of talking in front of an audience of teachers, students and judges. For the not-so brave, determination usually draws attention away from the quivering hand and the shaking cue cards.

The brave, however, find themselves naturally composed in front of the curious eyes. Yes, this Tuesday is public speaking day at NCC.

Guidance Classes at CSS

VICKI ANDERSON

THE GUIDANCE department at Centennial has been very busy for the past few months arranging special classes for those students who are interested in different fields of work.

Some of the people who have given lectures at our school are Mrs. Hamil from Quinte Secondary School, Mr. Towns and Mr. Silvestri of the Dominion Store, men from the Armed Forces to introduce the new change in uniforms, Chartered Accountants, Engineers, and the Ontario Provincial Police.

The idea behind these classes is for the student to plan for the future as well a study for their subjects.

• • •

AS YOU ENTER C.S.S. by the main entrance you are sure to see a display in the showcase.

This display, arranged by Louise Ewing of 9G, exhibits Mexican sombreros, money, pottery, woodwork, pieces of Mexican clothing and textiles.

• • •

EVERY WEEK now, I will feature in my report a piece of poetry done by one of the students at Centennial. This week's poem is by Susan Ellis of 11C.

YOU

You are not real
You feel no pain
You hurt no one
You pretend not

You help everyone
You bring happiness to all
You are true forever
You always remember

You are not conceited
You do not run from life
You shall never be lost
You shall not be lonely

You work for others
You accept people as they are
You are perfect
You are not real.

Public Speaking Finals Held at BCI

By B. L. ELLIOTT

AN UNEVENTFUL week passed at BCI, except for the public speaking contest finals and the Bantam Basketball Tournament.

In Wednesday's assembly, the finals for the public-speaking contest were held, and finalists were chosen in both impromptu and prepared speech sections.

In the prepared speech section, first place went to Bonnie McCluskey, who spoke on Canadian Indians. Lorraine Wark came second with her speech about Dag Hammarskjold.

Impromptu speech topics were chosen on stage, and each of the two contestants had ten minutes to prepare their talks. Leona Woods won first place with her explanation of why "I was not born to be an athlete'; Ron Chaplin came second with his speech on 'How I Cured Myself of TV.'

• • •

WE WISH all these winners the best of luck in further competitions and are certain they will be good representatives of the school.

There were other examples of "rather extraordinary rhetorical talent, but these unfortunately went unjudged — but not unappreciaetd!

ON SATURDAY, BCI held a Bantam Basketball Tournament, with teams from all Belleville's High Schools taking part. Centennial Secondary School came out on top, although all teams played well and all schools were well-represented.

Next week it's Keyette Week in BCI, highlighted by such glorious goings-on as a candy sale, a shoe shine, a gentlemen's day, and of course, the Keyette - Key Club Assembly on Wednesday morning. Watch for it and support the Keyettes !

Variety Show Planned At Moira Secondary

By STEPHEN HUNTER

BEFORE crowds of over 100 both Friday and Saturday night Moira dramatists displayed their theatrical talent in the form of two sensational plays. "The Lottery" an unusual play centered around an ancient custom was well done and the "shock" ending turned out to be very effective.

The evening was rounded off with the hilarious melodrama "Parted on her Wedding Morn" featuring Faith Trueheart the heroine, Excelsio Colfax the hero and the villanous Desmond Dalton.

The plays were well done and proved a tribute to the fine directing on the part of Mrs. Marshall. The play "The Lottery will be performed at the Cobourg Festival in March 7, 8 and we all wish the best of luck to the Moira Drama Club.

THE next item on this year's agenda is the production of Moirantics. The variety show has been under a rigorous rehearsal program and promises to be an excellent production. The theme this year is "My Diary".

In inter form sports, this week marks the finals in basketball. The highlight will be the game between 13C and teachers. The teachers stand little chance of winning but it will be real fun to watch.

Douglas Mihel is an idealist, a nationalist, a dreamer and a would-be miracle worker.

Mihel is the president of a Toronto electrical contracting firm whose dream is to produce a national hockey team that can compare with a National Hockey League Club.

His plan is, according to a wire story, to recruit boys in minor leagues — and get this — "playing them together until they are old enough to join the national team."

Mihel, in case you're interested is the manager of the Toronto Nationals who, more by luck than ability, eased the Belleville Smith Fuels out of the recent Ontario Centennial Peewee Championship.

He claims his experiment wasn't long in proving its merits. He says one of his first teams the Toronto Young Nats, won the All-Ontario Tournament by beating Belleville 4-2.

"They won it by outskating the opposition, a facet of hockey taught by a pro skater."

What Mihel did not tell the reporter was that OMHA officials and Toronto sportswriters covering the game, said that the Nats were lucky to win.

And furthermore, he did not say that in a game played in Belleville later, Fuels outskated, outplayed and outshot his Nationals hanging a decisive 5-2 defeat on their tails.

How Mihel plans to recruit teams of minors and keep them playing together until they're ready for the National squad is a bit of a mystery.

His teams will play in the Toronto Metro League and I presume the CAHA age limits apply there.

Is he going to scour the country to recruit a team whose members were born on the same date?

It is recalled the Smith Fuels went into the Centennial Tournament minus five their stars who helped win the all-Ontario Peewee Championship the year previous because of official age-limits regulations.

Mihel plans to carry his operations to minor and major midget teams next year and hopes to extend the range to Junior "A" and Junior "A" by 1969.

He claims that skate-skate-skate is his main training act.

"We don't encourage hitting," he says. "The Young Nats are taught" (and get this) "that a player who retaliates is a coward and that size, no matter how small, has no bearing on a boy's ability to perform.

H-mmm cowards eh. No retaliation? If they go along with this and reach junior "A" or even "B" rating they'll be sitting ducks for some of the rugged beardless defencemen who would rather fight than switch.

Another thing Mihel has to develop in his miracle boys is to prepare themselves for the National team and forget the professional ranks.

If Mihel happens to develop players who show a Bobby Hull or Gordie Howe potential and a pro contract is dangled under their noses, will the "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan" attitude be tossed into the discard?

Every moppet hockey player in the country has his hero team and hero players in the National Hockey League. And he doesn't have to be brainwashed to tell you his secret ambition is to be good enough to play for the big time. It's wishful thinkng for the greater majority but every year the pros collect their quota of promising material.

And teams playing together from the toddling age to the upperbrackets is old hat in the hockey hinterlands. It was, that is until organization stepped in and the age-limits rules broke up the clubs.

Some 47 years ago Picton raised a home-brew gaggle of puckchasers who toddled in their skates and went on years later to win an Ontario title.

Hawks Nip Leafs; Habs Down Flyers

By GRAHAM COX

Paul Terbenche shrugged off an aching shoulder Wednesday night to become a pain in the neck for Toronto Maple Leafs.

The rookie centre's unassisted goal was the winner in Chicago Black Hawks' 3-2 decision over the Leafs after coach Billy Reay had seriously debated playing him at all.

The 22-year-old Cobourg, Ont., native injured the shoulder recently and Reay waited until game time for a doctor's report on his ability to play.

Terbenche turned professional from St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series with St. Louis of the Central League last year.

Although he had played all his hockey as a defenceman, Reay decided Terbenche, at 5-11, 170 pounds, was too light to play behind the blueline and put him at centre.

LORNE .WORSLEY

He now has three goals and nine assists in his first NHL year playing on Chicago's third attack unit.

In another important NHL game, Montreal Canadiens remained two points ahead of the Hawks atop the Eastern Division standings by beating Philadelphia Flyers, leaders in the west, 4-1 in Montreal.

Boston Bruins kept pace in the east with a 6-4 victory over St. Louis Blues while Minnesota North Stars drew to within three points of Philadelphia by dropping Los Angeles Kings 4-2 as Pittsburgh Penguins won 4-1 over Oakland Seals.

Only two games are scheduled tonight with New York Rangers at Detroit to play the Red Wings and Pittsburgh in Los Angeles.

A victory by the Rangers would move them into fourth in the east, two points ahead of Toronto.

Chicago also got goals from the Hull brothers—Bobby with his 37th of the season—moved him into a tie in the league scoring lead with team-mate Stan Mikita.

Both have 60 points, Hull on 37 goals and 23 assists and Mikita on 29 goals and 31 assists.

ED WESTFALL

The Leafs grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Ron Ellis and Larry Hillman, but when the Hulls scored in the second period, coach Punch Imlach lifted veteran goalie John Bower in favor of Bruce Gamble.

It was only one of a number of changes the Leafs showed in the game as Imlach benched Mike Walton, sent Brian Conacher to Rochester of the American League, had Tim Horton out nursing an injured leg and replaced them with Mike Pelyk and Andre Hinse from Tulsa of the Central Pro League and Duke Harris from Rochester.

The Canadiens suffered through a frustrating first period when Philadelphia outshot them 8-7 and only goalie Gump Worsley held them in the game. Worsley was playing his first game since he was hurt 11 games ago.

But Bob Rousseau and Ted Harris got them going in the second period and John Ferguson and Dick Duff polished the Flyers off in the third.

Only Lou Angotti's goal ruined Worsley's bid for his fifth shutout of the season.

The Bruins got a lot of mileage out of a few players in their victory as Ed Westfall scored three times and Phil Esposito twice with Glen Sather picking up three assists.

Esposito's goals held him within shooting distance of Hull and Mikita in the scoring race with 56 points on 28 goals and as many assists.

The sixth Boston goal went to John McKenzie while the Blues got their goals from Bill McCreary, Gerry Melnyk, Craig Cameron and Frank St. Marseilles.

"Play Or Be Traded!"

MONTREAL (CP) — Henri Richard, who has performed his particular brand of centre ice wizardry for Montreal Canadiens for close to 13 seasons, says if he is not allowed to play regularly he wants to be traded to another National Hockey League club.

However, it is highly unlikely the Canadiens' management will allow any such move.

Richard left the team after joining in skating session last Friday.

The 32-year-old Richard told general manager Sam Pollock last Saturday in a telephone conversation that he was taking some time off to consider his hockey future because he had become "discouraged" by the fact he saw only abbreviated action Tuesday and Thursday last week against Toronto Maple Leafs and the Rangers here.

Pollock has been in New York since Sunday and is expected to meet with Richard on his return here today in an effort to resolve the issue.

Toe Blake, Montreal's coach, says there is no way Richard can be traded to another team as he is counting on Henri's services in the stretch drive to the NHL East Division title and hopefully another Stanley Cup.

"Let's just say that he has to come back under our terms. I can't change my way of coaching."

Richard emphasizes he does not want to quit hockey—just play regularly.

NHL Scoring

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With a goal in Chicago's 3-2 victory Wednesday night over Toronto Maple Leafs, Bobby Hull moved back into a tie for the National Hockey League scoring lead with team-mate Stan Mikita.

The leading goal scorer in the league, Hull now has 37 goals and 23 assists for 60 points while Mikita has 29 goals and 31 assists.

But the most spectacular display of the night was given in St. Louis where the Blues lost 6-4 to Boston Bruins, who got three goals from Ed Westfall and a pair from Phil Esposito.

Westfall's 12 goals is far off the leadership pace, but Esposito is hard on the heels of the co-leaders with 56 points on 28 goals and as many assists.

The leaders:

St. Thomas Rink Topples Kingston In Opener

KINGSTON (CP) — Upsets, runaways and a few surprises featured the opening round of the Ontario curling championships, but the man holding all the aces today was Don Gilbert of St. Thomas.

The red-haired skip', runner-up to Joe Gurowka of Toronto in the 1966 final, defeated Bob Mann of Kingston 8-3 Wednesday night in one of the major matches in the first round of the 16-rink, double-knockout competition.

Mann, provincial winner in 1963-64, was one of the favorites before the competition began, but the loss puts him in a do or die position. One more loss and he is eliminated.

The winner of the bonspiel will represent southern Ontario at the dominion championships March 5-9 at Kelowna, B.C. A Northern Ontario representative will be decided later.

Gilbert took command from the opening end, capitalizing on early misses by Mann's front end of Dale and Guy Lewis to run up a 5-2 lead after seven ends.

"I don't think we missed more than five rocks in the whole game," said Gilbert's second, Jim Waite.

The other members of Gilbert's rink are Al Zikman, third, and Dick Ronald, lead.

Elsewhere Wednesday night, Murray MacGregor of Guelph pulled the major upset of the opening round by downing the 1965 provincial champion, Ray Grant of Unionville, 6-5 in an extra end.

Grant had a chance to win the game with last rock in the 13th end, but he missed a roll on the open take out to leave MacGregor with one.

Today, Gilbert and MacGregor meet in one of eight games in the 9 a.m. draw.

The others: Mann plays Grant; Irwin Wallace of Port Carling goes against Tim St. Clair of Toronto Thornhill; Bill Gall of Niagara Falls meets Terry Patton of Brantford; Dave Gerolamy of Peterborough faces Eldon Coombe of Ottawa; Mac White of Burlington plays Earle Hushagen of Toronto Humber-Highland; Doug Macklen of Arnprior meets Dr. R. J. Creighton of Hanover; and Bill Creber of Toronto Parkway faces Stu Daw of Toronto Dixie.

Creber provided the big runaway Wednesday night, swamping Creighton 14-7 in a match that was conceded after 11 ends. Creber, backed by the fine sweeping of Larry Dare, second, and Pete Phillips, the lead, scored a four in the fifth and a three in the 10th.

In an extra-end match, Wallace made a perfect take out with his last stone to count one and defeat Gerolamy 3-8. Gall downed White 7-4 and Daw beat MacKlen 10-6.

The other upset of the evening was an 8-7 victory by Patton over Hushagen, one of the favorites before the competition began.

Coombs' Ottawa rink, rated an outside chance at the title, took a 4-1 lead over St. Clair and never looked back. The final end was not finished when St. Clair ran out of rocks.

Competition continues in afternoon and evening rounds today at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Letter to the Sports Editor

I would like to draw your attention to a recent "Ski-Doo" meet which was held at Cooper, Ontario (Madoc Area) and which I believe was sponsored by the Hastings Rod and Gun Club.

This was a 44 mile return cross country run in which the machines were classified as to engine displacement etc. and the total race was run on a time lapse method with handicap for the larger machines. This in itself is a very fair system.

I feel that it must be brought to the attention of yourself and the general public that some of the machines entered had been modified and 'souped up" to the point that no standard machine could compete. Some had indeed been modified to the point to produce double HP. In other words, a standard factory 370 cc unit was competing with a machine of double capacity. In all cases these machines were owned by dealers. One dealer had a total of three of these modified monsters in the meet. In other words the race was won before it started. At the Cooper meet a minimum of 25 family machines did not take part in the race because of the "monsters". At the half way mark, other operators would not leave ahead of these machines because of the danger of being run down.

More power to the dealer who can take his product and make it into a show piece. However, it should never be allowed to enter in general competition.

Let us hope that the officials at Tweed and Ameliasburgh for the upcoming meets will see and rectify this situation, and keep the meets at a level of family fun and fair competition. By all means let the dealers put on a display of their product but not at the expense of the fun public.

Slush Ice Halts Practice

GRENOBLE (CP) — Canadian figure skaters for the third day in a row were thwarted Wednesday in attempts to practise on the outdoor rink set aside for the purpose.

Ellen Burka of Toronto, coach of two of Canada's figure skaters competing here, looked at the melting ice and said:

"We are trying to practise in slush.

"It is beautiful here, but the ice won't hold up. We have had practices destroyed because of wind and rain and now the sun is turning the ice to water.

"This is no good for the practising of figures because the blades sink too deeply into the ice."

Also discouraged was her male pupil, medal hope Jay Humphrey, 19, of Toronto.

Mrs. Burka, mother of Petra Burka, former world amateur champion who now is a professional skater, also coaches Linda Carbonetto, 18, of Toronto. Miss Carbonetto was in competition Wednesday morning at the new indoor arena built for the Olympics, placing 21st in the first two compulsory figures in women's singles.

French Ski Star Targets Clean Sweep Of Three Major Events

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Jean-Claude Killy, France's 24-year-old superstar of the ski slopes, launched his quest today for all the gold in the Olympic Alpine men's events.

His top-rated opponents in today's downhill included Switzerland's Edmund Bruggmann and Dumeng Giovanoli, Austria's Gerhard Nenning and Karl Schranz, and fellow-Frenchman Bernard Orcel.

The women figure skaters today traced their remaining three compulsory school figures on the ice of the 12,000-seat stadium built for these 10th Winter Olympics.

World champion Peggy Fleming of the United States held a substantial lead after the first two compulsory figures, skated Wednesday. The 19-year-old miss from Colorado Springs was given 373.4 points, to lead Gabrielle Seyfert of East Germany by 30.4 points.

The handsome, dare-devil Killy would like nothing better than to sweep the downhill, slalom and giant slalom events here, which would equal the feat of Toni Sailer of Austria at the 1956 Olympics. Killy won 16 of 20 Alpine races he entered last year but got off to a slow start in 1968.

A doubtful starter in the downhill was Billy Kidd, ace of the United States skiers. Kidd, silver medal winner in the 1964 slalom, fell during non-stop downhill training Wednesday and twisted his ankle.

Canada's entries were Rod Hebron of Vernon, B.C., drawn to start 22nd, Peter Duncan of Mont Tremblant, Que., starting 25th and Gerry Rinaldi of Kimberley, B.C., taking off 27th. Hebron, who suffered shoulder, arm and hand bruises in a spill Monday, was to be replaced by Scott Henderson of Banff, Alta., if unable to compete.

The games' first gold medal, for winning the 30-kilometer cross-country, went Wednesday to Franco Nones, a 27-year-old Italian customs officer, in what was regarded as a major upset.

It was the first time that anyone outside of Scandinavia or Russia had won this Olympic event.

Nones was followed by Odd Martinsen of Norway and Eero Maentyranta of Finland.

Running of the first two heats in the two-man bobsled competition was postponed Wednesday night when a strong wind created hazards which the official jury found excessive.

The jury decided to ask the International Olympic Committee to rule today whether the two-man bob schedule could be set back one day. If approved, the first two heats would be held tonight and the second pair of heats Friday night. If the IOC refused to allow a program change, the winner would be decided on the basis of two heats tonight.

The 22 entries from 11 countries included two Canadian sleds.

The luge competition was to start today with the first two of four runs in men's and women's singles. Canada's entry list in the luge, newest Winter Olympics sport, included Linda Bocock of St. Sauveur des Monts, Que., Martha Diplock of Montreal, Phyllis Walter of Deux Montagnes, Que., Larry Arbuthnot of St. Laurent, Que., D'Arcy Coulson of Brookline, Mass., Roger Eddy of Eyebrow, Sask., and Colin Nelson of Hudson, Que.

Today's hockey schedule has Canada meeting lowly Finland in the last game of the day, starting at 3 p.m. EST. Czechoslovakia played West Germany at 11 a.m. in the other game in the championship group.

Wednesday, Sweden topped the United States 4-3 and the Soviet Union swamped East Germany 9-0, thereby running its goal total to 17 in two games with none against.

Quinte COSSA Basketball

BCI Cage Teams Wrap Up Top Slots

By STEVE BISHOP

The BCI seniors kept the slate clean last night at BCI as John Chalmers and Brian Harder led them to a 64-47 victory over Moira in Bay of Quinte basketball for their ninth win in as many games. BCI also took the junior tilt, 58-35, while the Moira bantams whipped BCI, 53-31.

In the senior game, Dan Lietaer's Moira squad was out to avenge an earlier last-minute defeat at the hands of BCI.

The Trojans got off to an early 5-2 lead, but BCI came right back to overtake them and lead 14-7 at the end of the first quarter.

The score was even in the second quarter, as each team collected 18 points, to send BCI into the second half with a seven-point lead.

The Trojans were still in the game at the end of the third quarter, although they lost two more points in the exchange, and went into the final eight minutes trailing by nine.

The Collegians put the game out of Moira's reach in the early stages of the final quarter, as they outshot and outscored the Trojans to stretch the lead. At one point BCI led by 20 and, although Moira cut down the margin, they fell well short of the mark.

John Chalmers hit both inside and outside for BCI to collect a total of 34 points, while Brian Harder played an aggressive game and came up with 18 points. Bill Probert paced Moira with an 18-point performance, followed by Gary Swan and Mick Chalmers with 12 points apiece.

With just one game left, Wally Beevor's Collegians are assured of a first-place finish, and will soon be turning their sights towards the COSSA playoffs.

Red Townsend's junior Collegians have also wrapped up first place. They overrode the Trojans last night, taking a 32-22 half-time lead, then stretching the lead from 10 to 23 points over the second half.

Dave Cass paced the victors with 17 points, followed by Dave Wright with 11 points, and Tarmo Heyduck with 9. Dave Thompson, with 10 points, Dave Grant, with 9, and Rod Rolston with 8, were the high scorers for Moira.

Moira's bantam squad rolled to a 32-17 half-time lead over BCI and never looked back.

Don Hazelton led the Trojans with a fine 24-point effort. Jim Wiggins also finished double figures, with 11 points. Allan Gallupe and Geoff Morton were high for BCI with 7 points apiece.

The Kings blanked the Rangers by 3-0, with David Cook in the nets for the shutout. W. Deighton, G. McInroy and A. Horwood were the goal-scorers.

Fort Worth Back In Top Spot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fort Worth Wings climbed back into first place in the Southern Division of the Central Pro Hockey League Wednesday night with a 3-1 win over Omaha Knights in a game marked by a last-minute donnybrook.

In the only other game of the night, Kansas City Blues beat Memphis South Stars, also by a 2-1 margin.

Fort Worth was one point behind Oklahoma City Blazers going into Wednesday night's game. But the win gave them 59 points, one more than the idle Blazers.

A full-scale brawl erupted with 30 seconds left in the game. When the fighting stopped 10 minutes later, 11 players and both coaches were assessed major penalties.

Referee Forgot

No Blow; The Fight Started!

ST. LOUIS (AP) — What you have to do in a situation like the one referee Bob Sloan faced, says Frank Udvari, director of National Hockey League officials, is blow your whistle.

But Sloan didn't, and it took 17 minutes, one ejected coach, another angry one, and 9,070 irate fans before the situation was resolved.

John McKenzie, of Boston Bruins started it by getting or not getting a goal, depending on who you listen to. He took a pass from Johnny Bucyk at 14:46 of the third period and apparently shot it past goalie Glenn Hall of St. Louis Blues.

But goal judge Rich Schweigel didn't see it, Udvari said, and while the Bruins were celebrating the goal McKenzie didn't get, defenceman Al Arbour of St. Louis took the puck down ice and scored past goalie Ed Johnston of Boston.

Sloan then talked to the goal judge and the two linesmen, Neil Armstrong and Brent Caselman, and decided McKenzie should get a goal, which meant Arbour couldn't get the goal he thought he got.

Both teams then made human wave assaults on the officials, in an effort to reason the situation out. But Arbour apparently reasoned too hard and teammate Barclay Plager apparently didn't stick to words.

Arbour got a 10-minute misconduct, Plager a 10-minute and game misconduct. And Bruin coach Harry Sinden got a $50 fine for going on the ice and was ejected.

The fans also cast their ballots all over the ice in the form of debris. But the attendants didn't' count the votes, just picked them up and threw them out.

After all the tumult and shouting had died down, Boston finally prevailed 6-4.

"I'd have to agree with Schweigel the goal judge," Udvari said. "If he didn't see the score, then he couldn't put the light on. But what Sloan should have done was blow his whistle if he thought the puck went in.

"But things happen so quick I guess he just didn't know and didn't want to stop a good play."

Udvari said Sloan told him he couldn't see if the puck went in and pointed out that Sloan didn't make the right judgment on the play, but he added: "He didn't make a mistake."

Mistake or not, Blues' coach Scotty Bowman thought it looked very bad for hockey.

"The fans pay their good money to come and they want to see good play. It makes us look bad."

Did McKenzie really score?

"I don't think so. I didn't see it go in," said Bowman, who said he was screened out of the play.

"McKenzie broke around Hucul (defenceman Fred Hucul) and it went in," said Udvari. "I feel it was in and justice prevailed."

Meanwhile, lost in the debris and angry words was the first three-goal hat trick of Ed Westfall's career.

The veteran Boston forward—defenceman scored two goals in the first period and then deposited what proved to be the winning goal in the third period. But they came before McKenzie scored, or didn't score, depending on who you listen to.

Majors Eye Japan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Walter O'Malley of Los Angeles Dodgers said Wednesday major league baseball may be forced to go outside the United States after the next round of expansion.

"By that time," O'Malley said, "we will have exhausted every community with enough money to build a stadium."

O'Malley said Japan might be a possibility for a major league club in organized baseball.

"When the new airplanes come out," he said, "Japan will be just as close as we are now to the Atlantic Ocean."

The Dodger president said he would be willing to vote for a National League franchise in San Diego, Calfi.

"It might be argued that this is not in the best interest of the Dodgers or Angels to have another baseball team out here," he added, "but competition is a good thing."

Olympics Hockey

Russians Crush E. Germans

GRENOBLE, France (CP) — Russia's heavily-favored Olympic champions showed off their power for the second night in a row, crushing East Germany 9-0 in the Olympic hockey tournament Wednesday night.

The win came on the heels of an 8-0 trouncing of Finland Tuesday and left the world champions alone at the top of the eight-country championship round-robin.

The pair of victories gave Russia four points. Canada, Sweden and Czechoslovakia, each with one win and two points, were tied for second place.

Sweden won its opener Wednesday, beating the United States 4-3. It was the second loss for the Americans.

The Russian-East German and Sweden-U.S. games were the only ones scheduled on the second day of championship competition.

The Canadian national team, after beating West Germany 6-1 Tuesday night, meets Finland today.

Varsity Stops Gryphons

GUELPH (CP) — Bruce Dempster's four successive foul shots in a row in the dying seconds ensured University of Toronto Blues an 80-74 win over University of Guelph Gryphons Wednesday in Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association basketball action.

Dempster netted 27 points while Clare Magee paced the Gryphons with 23 points.

Pirates Sign Wills

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Veteran infielder Maury Wills has signed his 1968 contract, Pittsburgh Pirates said today.

Wills' salary was not disclosed but it's believed he received about $75,000.

Wills hit .302 last year, the second time in his National League career he passed the .300 mark.

One of the major leagues' top base stealers, Wills was hampered on the base lines by a bad right knee last year.

The 35-year-old Wills came to Pittsburgh in 1966 in a trade with Los Angeles Dodgers. He was a shortstop most of his years with the Dodgers but the Pirates played him at third.

Fred Astaire Still Sprightly After Many Years in Business

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Old dancers never die, they just sweat away," said Fred Astaire as he swirled a mug of stout.

The drink was to help replenish the five pounds he had dropped in putting on The Fred Astaire Show, which appears tonight on NBC. He had finished the final number—a rock version of his old "top hat" dance—the night before, and he was understandably exhausted. Yet his springy step and his jaunty manner remained unchanged.

"Well, I like to dance," he said, "but it's such damned hard work."

"At least it is the way I do it. I can't do things the easy way. I figure if I'm going to do something, it's got to be the best I know how. Otherwise there's no point in doing it.

"Oh, I know how they generally do dance numbers in television. They say, 'Let's have a soft-shoe number here,' then they get six girls and they throw a routine together. And that's the way it looks—thrown-together.

"You may not like my show, but at least you can't say that it was put on haphazardly. Everything was designed to flow together. There was no flowery introductions, no idle chitchat; I hate that sort of thing and I'm terrible at it. The numbers will follow along, one after the other."

The Astaire approach to television is unique. He declines to be a guest on anyone else's show, preferring to limit himself to hand-crafted specials. There have been only four in 10 years: An Evening With Fred Astaire, which won nine Emmies in 1958; Another Evening With Fred Astaire, 1959; Astaire Time, 1960; and tonight's show. All have had schedules far longer than the usual television show.

Tonight's show again teams Astaire with Barrie Chase, whom he introduced on his first television special. By this time she has lasted longer than any of the famed Astaire partners with the exception of the first one, his sister Adele, with whom he appeared in vaudeville and on the Broadway stage. He co-starred for six years in the 1930s with Ginger Rogers, and they had a single reunion in The Barkeleys of Broadway in 1949.

"I must say that Barrie is fabulous," said Astaire, who rarely comments about his partners. "She has never been better than she is on this show."

The ageless Astaire's 68th year has been one of his most strenuous. Through the long, hot San Fernando Valley summer he played Finian's Rainbow on the Warner Bros. backlot. His winter has been spent at NBC's color studios, also in Burbank.

Anti-perspirants Often Deodorants

By Dr. Joseph G. Molner

Dear Dr. Molner: What can I do about excessive underarm perspiration? I have tried numerous anti-perspirants without success. — Mrs. H. L.

Most commercial anti-perspirants are really deodorants and do not necessarily reduce the amount of perspiration. That is under nervous control.

You might try a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride, or a similar solution of an aluminum preparation. If such a solution, daubed on the skin and allowed to dry, proves to be irritating — it can bother some sensitive skins — it may be necessary to use a weaker solution. Say 10 per cent. Some folks have the druggist add some aromatic material to give the solution a pleasant odor.

Another possibility is using a 10 per cent solution of formaldehyde in rubbing alcohol. This will reduce perspiration but it, too, may be irritating to some individuals. It also has a chemical odor that you may not like.

In every severe case, a relatively simple operation can be performed to remove sweat glands from the armpits.

The extent of perspiration is governed by many factors: Temperature, humidity, warm clothing as opposed to lighter garments which allow for better circulation of air, and thus evaporation.

Anxiety, tenseness and fear also cause an increase in perspiration — this is the "nervous control" to which I referred earlier. If you can learn to relax, it will help.

Over-activity of the thyroid is associated with moist skin, and therefore can be a factor in excessive perspiration. "Night sweats" can be from tension — and also from some chronic infection.

In a word, there are many factors which can have an effect on perspiration, and correction of the problem may not rest with simple cosmetic preparations.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: What do you do about pimples on the back? My mother just said to keep it clean and I should be glad they are not on my face. My complexion is better than most kids my age, 14.

One girl friend said to rub alcohol on it every night. Does this actually help? They bother me because they itch and because I would like to clear up by next summer because they will be noticeable with a bathing suit. — S. D.

Mother is right so far as her comment goes. Acne most often attacks the face and or back, and you can be glad it doesn't bother your face. Best advice I have for you is to read my booklet, "Acne, the Teen-Age Problem," and follow the instructions for skin care. The alcohol rubs might help and wouldn't hurt you. For the booklet, send 25 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible for the gall bladder to be in such a position that it cannot be clearly seen either by fluoroscope or X-ray to see if stones are present? — Mrs. E. P.

It isn't so much a matter of position as the fact that a dye is used to make the gall bladder visible under X-ray. A diseased, non-functioning gall bladder sometimes will not accept the dye. Therefore the gall bladder is not outlined.

Note to S.S.: The first exposure to anything—including penicillin — does not necessarily set the stage for an allergic reaction. However, it can. The allergy may not develop until after several, or even many, exposures.

Tanks Sound Like Erratic Generator--Confuse Americans

KHE SANH, South Vietnam (AP) — When the North Vietnamese rumbled out of Laos Wednesday to attack the Lang Vei Special Forces camp, the U.S. troops inside decided the strange sound came from the camp's erratic generator.

Minutes later, the Americans, South Vietnamese and Montagnard tribesmen were battling desperately to keep the iron giants from overwhelming them.

They lost the fight but destroyed seven of the 10 North Vietnamese tanks.

Before the onslaught against the camp three miles west of the U.S. marine combat base at Khe Sanh, the North Vietnamese pounded it with a furious artillery and mortar barrage.

The tanks smashed through the camp's barbed-wire outer defences with ease.

The defenders fought the tanks with recoilless rifles and grenades. Men clambered atop the tanks, which were firing 76-millimetre rounds into the camp's bunkers, and tried to toss grenades down the vehicles' hatches.

The battle ended quickly. A special Forces radio operator called Khe Sanh "I've got two tanks sitting on top of my command bunker." Then the radio went dead. It was feared that the entire camp was wiped out.

But a strange siege was under way. The headquarters bunker was under three feet of reinforced concrete and two feet of steel. The tanks tried to break this down. They couldn't.

Diplomat: Washington Could Have Prevented Arab-Israeli War

WASHINGTON (AP) — The veteran U.S. diplomat who was deputy chief of mission in Cairo when the Israeli-Arab war erupted last June says political timidity in Washington kept the United States from taking steps that might have prevented the war.

He is David G. Nes, whose resignation from the U.S. foreign service was revealed Monday. Nes, who had 26 years with the service, said he resigned because he became convinced that the state department had barred him from any meaningful assignment.

In an interview at his Washington home, Nes contended that deterioration of U.S.-Egyptian relations figured in President Gamal Abdel Nasser's decision to close the Gulf of Aqaba to Israeli shipping—a decision which ultimately led to the war.

"We warned Washington from Cairo that Nasser felt he was being pushed into a corner," Nes said, "and we predicted that he would lash out. . . .

"Nobody in Washington was willing to take the political risk involved in doing anything for Egypt."

Nes said he is convinced Nasser's decisions to expel United Nations troops from the Gaza Strip, to dispatch 80,000 Egyptian soldiers in the Sinai Desert on Israeli's borders, and to derive Israel from access to the Gulf of Aqaba, all were based on Syrian and Soviet intelligence reports.

Nes said Nasser's distrust of the United States developed from a series of incidents over the 11 months preceding the outbreak of war. He singled out delay in processing an Egyptian request for $155,000,000 in food aid, made in February, 1966, as a major factor.

"We kept telling the Egyptians we had their food aid request 'under consideration.'

"You can give an answer like that for three months or so, but not for 11."

He said the United States kept offering "funny little excuses—the president is in Texas, or Congress is not in session—which did not ring true."

In January, 1967, Nasser withdrew the reqquest for food and accused the United States of embarking on a "war of starvation" against the United Arab Republic.

De Gaulle's Remarks Revive Old Controversy About Jews

PARIS (CP) — An old and potentially bitter issue is sparking debate again among Frenchmen—whether this country's 500,000 Jewish citizens should treat France as the exclusive focus of their national allegiance.

The latest arguments came to a boil over Israel—regarded by some Frenchmen of the Jewish faith as deserving their automatic support.

The most famous flare-up over the question of patriotism and Jewish Frenchmen came about 1900 when storms raged around Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, accused of selling secrets obtained during the course of his army duties.

Born of a Jewish family, Dreyfus finally was declared not guilty after years filled with right-wing claims that he was typical of his religion in harboring "anti-French" sentiments and passionate counter-arguments from "pro-Dreyfusards."

Extreme right-wingers kept up their tirades through the decades preceding France's 1940 surrender to the Germans.

The current uproar over Israel was set off by the November statements to the world's press given by de Gautle, now French president, who was sharply critical of Israeli policies in the Middle East.

Particularly explosive in its effects was part of de Gaulle's portrayal of events leading up to establishment of the state of Israel in 1948.

"Some even feared that the Jews, hitherto dispersed but who had remained what they always had been—that is, an elite people sure of itself and dominating—might, once reassembled on the site of their ancient grandeur, transform into ardent and conquering ambition the very moving hopes they had held for 19 centuries," said the president.

One former resistance fighter angrily returned a medal awarded him by the general for wartime services. A group of 14 professors voiced fears that de Gaulle's words would revive old anti-Semitic feelings in France.

The president, whose government includes Jews among its top officials, always has lamented the splits in French society opened up by the Dreyfus affair.

One apologist for the general's press-conference remarks denied that de Gaulle is anti-Semitic.

Several commentators felt the general may have been irked by what he interpreted as Israel's June decision to ignore Gaullist pleas for prudence and moderation.

In recent months, de Gaulle has shown friendship for the Arab countries, with French oil interests meantime reported increasing their stake in Iraq. But Israeli authorities, while bristling over the general's statements, deny any complete breakdown in Franco-Israeli relations.

Some observers predict that the controversy will cost de Gaulle the support of men who have been his powerful backers in the past.

Above all looms the fear that—in the words of one commentator—"old bonds have been broken, old friendships ended, exchanges finished, bitterness and a new source of divisions have reappeared—as if France lacked subjects to quarrel about."

Two Children Reported Bitten By Dog

DESERONTO — Two small Deseronto children were bitten by a dog Wednesday.. In both cases the wounds were superficial, but both were taken to the emergency department of the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital, as a precaution, and given an injection of anti-tetanus serum.

Susan Leafe, ten, was bitten on the back when near the Arnold Kimmerly property, and Kevin Baker, eight, received scratches on his arm when near the bus stop. Both children were on their way to school.

Police Chief Gerald Moody was notified and he and part-time official dog-catcher rounded up five dogs, and the one which had injured the children was identified. All are now in custody and the offending dog will be kept under observation for symptoms of rabies.

Complaints have been coming in to the school for some time regarding the number of dogs there. They appear to follow children to school and to hang around for an hour or so. A complaint was made by the school to council, requesting the services of the dog catcher. At the council meeting Monday evening a letter from him was read stating that he had taken a day off from work and had seen only one dog. Teachers and children report that there are often a dozen there at the same time, but that they go away soon after the children enter school.

Deseronto Board Meets

DESERONTO — The Deseronto School Board held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night, the third time within a week. Last Thursday evening they met with Paul Anderson, area superintendent of schools, and two members of the firm of architects which had drawn up plans for the proposed addition to the school. Monday evening the members attended the meeting of the Town Council and secured approval of the addition.

Only minor business was brought up Tuesday evening. The Board complied with the request of property committee chairman George Lyons to purchase nylon gliders for chairs at the school.

Arrangements were made for the occasional exchange of teachers of the special education classes between this school and the Slash Road School in Richmond. Three local merchants had been asked to submit tenders for next year's school supplies, Mrs. Diane Sergeant informed the Board, but none had yet been received. Arrangements were made for a meeting with the teachers to begin salary negotiations.

A letter from Mr. Anderson, giving a break-down of the costs of the school addition approved by the town council Monday evening, was filed.

John Glenn, Rector's warden of St. Mark's Anglican Church, requested a review of the rental now being paid for the use of the basement hall of the church as a classroom. Heating costs, especially for January, had been greatly increased, he stated. The trustees agreed to consult Mr. Glenn on this matter.

A letter from the Belleville Board of Education stated that a former employee now on the staff in Deseronto, had accumulated 34 days of sick leave while teaching in Belleville. Mrs. Joyce Tucker will be given credit for this by the Deseronto Board.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate "What's Your Problem"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

One of the most asked questions from readers during the past month has been, "Do I save money if I turn off the heat while vacationing during the cold weather?"

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I've had enough of this freezing weather! I'm off to the sunny climes for a month.

It's going to cost lots of money, but I've figured out one way to help pay for the trip. For $20 I can get a plumber to winterize the house, shut off the heat, and be over $100 ahead of the game.

It's imaginative thinking like the above that has made me a successful businessman. What is your opinion of my money-saving idea? — Mr. O.

ANSWER: You're way off! A few more imaginative ideas like that, and you will be an ex-successful businessman!

I admit you will save money on fuel by turning off the heat for a month. However, the few pennies you have thus saved won't go very far to cover the many pounds of surprises that will be awaiting you upon your return.

Here are a few choice items, among others, that may greet you: buckled and warped floors; loose wallpaper on walls and ceilings; peeling paint; furniture that will likely need regluing; doors and windows that open with difficulty, and, worse yet, probably, are completely stuck.

If a house is unused during the cold weather, the thermostat can be turned down to as low as 55 degrees without damage. However, if the heat is shut off completely, one is inviting trouble.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My problem concerns a tenant who weighs in at over 300 pounds. When I bought the house, I inherited this spreading roomer.

She lives on the second floor directly above our bedrooms. The poor woman apparently suffers from insomnia and walks the floor most of the night. The floors squeak and our kids squawk.

I've asked her to move out. She says there is still 18 months left on the lease. I hope that I'm not obligated to honor a contract that was drawn up by the former owner. My wife supports my argument, do you? — Mr. R. E. W.

ANSWER: I'm afraid that the argument weighs heavily in favor of your roomer. Her lease is good. It was one of the obligations you assumed when you took title to the property.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm in trouble because I couldn't say no!

As a property owner, I suddenly discovered that everyone was willing to extend me credit. In quick succession, I bought storm windows and screens, a new heater, a concrete patio, a modern kitchen, and a brand new bathroom. Then I added a two-bedroom addition, redecorated the house, and put on a new roof.

Now my house is in excellent condition, but I'm not. My problem is that all payments, including mortgages and a new car, total $561 per month. My take-home pay is only $524 per month. They tell me you are a financial genius. How do I get out of this trouble? — Mr. N.

ANSWER: It doesn't take a genius to see that the house is in better shape than you. And why you needed the extra bedrooms, I'll never know. With these figures, how could you ever sleep?

Seriously, if its any consolation, I can tell you that the almost unrestricted credit available to a property owner gets many in trouble. You are moronic to undertake these unbearable commitments and the lenders were equally brainless to advance you the credit.

The standard solution of refinancing your short - term home improvement loans into a larger, long-term mortgage cannot even be applied in this case. To pay off all debts would require a 125 per cent mortgage.

My only advice is for our correspondent to go into his new bedroom addition, lie down, and think of how much happier he would be if he only knew how to say "No."

Dear Mr. Meltzer: A salesman is trying to sell me an insulation job costing $400. I was under the impression, however, that the house already was insulated. I suspect I'm being taken. Is there a test that would tell me if I need insulation? — Mr. C.

ANSWER: The following is a simple, but rather effective way to test the insulating qualities of an outside wall. Wait for a cold day. Hold the flat of your hand against an exterior wall and then against an interior partition wall. If you feel an appreciable difference in temperature, then your house probably needs insulation.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: The state took 10 acres from me when they built a new highway in front of my place, but refuses to pay me. Everyone else along the road has been paid but me.

According to the highway engineer, over $20,000 was spent for drainage to dry up a swamp on my land. I didn't ask them to do it. I want money for my 10 acres. What do I do? — Mr. F.

ANSWER: The state highway department, in this case, is apparently applying the "doctrine of special benefits." It means that money spent for draining your land was a special benefit to you. Therefore, the cost of this benefit offsets any damages accruing from the taking or condemnation of the 10 acres.

This is a highly technical appraisal problem. A competent appraiser should be engaged to evaluate the benefits and damages.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

Mansfield Hopes For Men's Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield calls North Korea's identification of the USS Pueblo's dead and wounded an encouraging sign the crew may be released.

But the U.S. state department cautions against expecting a quick follow-up.

Mansfield said in an interview:

"I think that the North Koreans' release of the names of the dead and wounded is an encouraging sign that we may get the crew members back."

Mansfield, being briefed daily by the Johnson administration, said he regards as significant the U.S. removal of the aircraft carrier Enterprise from the Sea of Japan, where it was stationed after the North Koreans captured the intelligence-gathering Pueblo and her 83-man crew.

Sources at the United Nations said removal of the Enterprise was suggested to the United States last week by Hungary's UN Ambassador Karoly Csatorcilliatory gesture.

Meanwhile, the Soviets have moved 10 or 15 warships into the same area.

State department press officer Robert J. McCloskey called "positive" the furnishing of the list of the Pueblo's dead and injured.

But he added: "I don't want that act to lead to an assumption that we feel a breakthrough any way imminent." Additional meetings are expected to be held with the North Koreans, he said.

Back Britain Campaign Draws Ire of Critics of Varied Creeds

LONDON (CP) — The latest campaign variation on a theme of Back Britain has set off some fierce dissent in quarters ranging from the Communist party to sedate citadels of conservatism.

"I lothe and despise the Back Britain campaign in all its wretched manifestations," fumed one columnist, while his own newspaper, The Daily Mirror, retorted editorially:

"But . . . somebody has to get this country off the seat of its pants.

"And the people who are backing the 'How to Help Britain and 'Yourself Campaign' have at least the guts to try."

The mouthful of a name stands for a mass advertising effort which has the sponsorship of, among others, Lord Thomson, Beaverbrook Newspapers Ltd. and resort owner Sir Billy Butlin.

A champion controversialist from the Conservative ranks, MP Quintin Hogg, was beside himself with indignation at the campaign.

"Belt up, I say, belt up," raged Hogg, adopting British vernacular to convey the sentiment that the sponsors should desist from further such exhortations to mass patriotism.

The Communist Morning Star was swift to dismiss one of the full-page newspaper advertisements sponsored this week by the new effort.

"A rag-bag of nostrums, platitudes, cliches and ancient chestnuts" was The Star's description of the ad, which set out ways Britons could help their country back to economic health.

Meanwhile, trouble dogged another Back-Britain effort, this one by four employees of a heating plant at Havant, near Portsmouth.

The four were official representatives on the factory floor of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, which said Thursday its own productivity provisions were upset by the quartet's practice of working, without charge to the company, an extra 30 minutes daily.

As punishment, the men were reduced to rank-and-file status in the labor organization. But they plan to appeal to higher union officials.

Three Negroes Die

Segregated Bowling Causes Fatal Riots

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — Negro students exchanged gunfire with police Thursday night in the fourth night of violence on two adjacent college campuses. Three Negro teen-agers were killed and more than 40 persons wounded.

The shooting incidents came during a drive by students from the two predominantly Negro schools to break the segregation barrier at the All-Star bowling lanes.

Henry Smith, 18, a student at South Carolina State College, died several hours after a barrage of gunfire broke out between students and police on a small slope bordering the State campus. One student was reported in critical condition.

Sam Hammon, 18, was killed in the shooting and Delano Middleton, 17, an Orangeburg high school student, died about an hour later.

Chief J. P. Strom of the state law enforcement division said Cleveland Sellers, 25, South Carolina co-ordinator for the Student Non-violent Co-ordinating Comittee, was arrested and charged with inciting to riot and placed under $50,000 bond. Sellers was hit in the left arm by a shotgun pellet during the fray but was not seriously wounded. After questioning by Orangeburg police, Sellers was taken to the state penitentiary at Columbia, 45 miles away.

Associated Press photographer Dozier Mobley, who was at the shooting scene, said about 75 Negroes standing on a knoll opened fire on police, firemen and national guardsmen who came to extinguish a bonfire the Negroes had set.

Mobley reported that police returned the fire with shotguns but there was no report of guardsmen shooting and their commanding officer denied that any had.

Police said State Highway Patrolman D. J. Shealy was struck in the face by a club wielded by a Negro. He was the only man reported hurt among the police and guardsmen.

At least three of the wounded were from Claflin College, which adjoins South Carolina State.

Queen's Parks Postpones Five Construction Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton Thursday announced indefinite postponement of five major government construction projects, costing a total of $39,000,000, as an anti-inflationary measure.

Largest of the five is a $24,000,000 twin-tower office block constituting the second phase of a $50,000,000 office extension program at Queen's Park.

"The tender call issued for this project has been postponed," Mr. MacNaughton said. "Structural steel and stone already ordered will be stored for the postponement period."

Other major works to be postponed include a $7,000,000 renovation of Osgoode Hall Law School; a $3,200,000 regional jail for the Niagara area; a $3,500,000 mental hospital addition at Penetanguishene, and a $1,000,000 fish hatchery for splake at Maple.

Mr. MacNaughton said the government has also deferred 20 other projects, worth a total of $4,500,000, which had been submitted for approval to proceed with construction.

He said the cuts will bring the public works department's budget for 1968-69 "somewhat lower than" the projected figure for 1967-68 of slightly less than $50,000,000.

The treasurer said the decision, based on a recommendation by the provincial treasury board, "recognizes the need to restrain government spending during this inflationary period to reduce pressure on the capital markets which has been forcing up interest rates, and to contain the burden to our taxpayers."

The treasurer said the government decided to halt construction of new institutional facilities rather than place a more general curb on construction in view of "indications toward a decline in construction activity."

He suggested the government policy will allow the construction industry to concentrate on industrial, commercial, housing and transit projects which would "enhance our productivity potential."

Marine Tries To Hijack Leave Plane

DA NANG (AP) — A U.S. marine private in a black leather jacket with a cocked .45-calibre pistol tried today to hijack a Pan American Airlines DC-6 loaded with war-weary U.S. servicemen waiting to fly to Hong Kong, U.S. Air Force police said.

After two hours and 45 minutes, a message from a general and tear gas, the co-pilot thwarted the effort with a bold move. He grappled with the marine.

The man arrested by air force police was identified as Pte. William Lee Clark of the 1st Division's 1st Field Artillery Group. No charges have been filed and authorities withheld comment pending a full investigation.

British Divorce Revisions Called 'Casanova's Charter'

LONDON (AP) — Members of the House of Commons are debating a radical re-shaping of Britain's divorce laws.

Thousands of wives resent and fear some proposed changes as an attempt to create "a Casanova's charter." But the climate of opinion in Parliament favors legislation that would openly permit divorce by consent—and even allow divorce by compulsion.

Backers contend the divorce reform bill would promote truthfulness and honesty, giving many estranged couples the right to part without giving false evidence.

The heart of the bill is a proposal that divorce may only be granted on grounds "that a marriage has irretrievably broken down."

Single matrimonial offences—such as an impetuous adultery, later regretted—would no longer be unassailable grounds for ending a marriage.

Most controversy swirls around two proposed grounds for divorce:

1. If the husband and wife have lived apart two years, and neither objects to a decree.

2. If the husband and wife have lived apart continuously five years, even if one of them objects to ending the marriage.

The latter clause has particularly outraged many of the bill's critics. They foresee many middle-aged wives as compulsorily divorced and left without enough money.

Baroness Summerskill, doctor and champion of women's rights, argues that men stand to benefit most from the bill.

"If a change is to be made in the law, it is absolutely fundamental that adequate provision should be made for the first wife, who has served her family well over the years and then—through no fault of her own—is compulsorily divorced in favor a younger woman," she says.

Lady Summerskill, 66 and married 30 years, was a Labor member of the House of Commons for 23 years.

Primarily aim of the bill's sponsors is to make marriage possible for couples now living outside wedlock and bringing up children in an atmosphere of guilt. It should not be possible, the sponsors say, for a wife to go on refusing to divorce a husband out of malice or envy

Kennedy Critical

Victory Claims Draw His Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A source close to Senator Robert F. Kennedy says the New York Democrat's sharp new attack on U.S. policies in Vietnam doesn't mark the start of a "systematic" Kennedy assault on President Johnson's war strategy.

The source's comments came in an interview after Kennedy disputed Communist casualty figures put out by the U.S command and challenged the concept that the United States emerged the victor from recent savage fighting in South Vietnam.

Ring Tightens Round Da Nang

SAIGON (AP) — Helicopters landed U.S. troops on Saigon's racetrack today to help rout die-hard Viet Cong forces as the North Vietnamese increased pressure against Da Nang and more North Vietnamese tanks were reported sighted near Khe Sanh.

Troops from the U.S. 199th Light Infantry Brigade were landed in the centre of the Saigon racetrack and quickly took up positions to bolster South Vietnamese forces having slow going blasting the Viet Cong out of Cholon, the Chinese quarter and adjoining the areas on the southwest side of Saigon.

Elsewhere below the northern provinces, the big Viet Cong offensive against the cities launched 10 days ago appeared to be tapering off. But the U.S. marines and South Vietnamese forces were still battling doggedly in Hue, the old imperial capital in the north, and fighting drew closer to Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city and the nerve centre for combined forces operations in the northern provinces.

Rabid Animals Found in City

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Police and health authorities today alerted Belleville against the threat of rabies.

Officials emphasized there was no cause for alarm but the maximum of caution should be observed to guard against the disease — on the upswing in neighboring rural areas.

The warning followed these developments:

A family of five is enduring the mandatory 14-day anti-rabies treatment after its pet dog was discovered infected. Nobody was bitten.

Police are seeking several children who may have had contact with the carcass of a fox — later diagnosed as rabid.

"We don't want to alarm anybody," stressed Police Chief Douglas Crosbie, "but we would like people to take

Lady Honored

AMELIASBURG — Canada's centennial medal was presented to a township employee here last night in recognition for her quarter of a century of outstanding loyal service.

Mrs. Verna J. Sills, the township's official treasurer and tax collector, received the honor in a ceremony at the conclusion of a social evening with a circle of former and present Ameliasburg reeves, deputy-reeves and councillors and their wives attending.

The presentation of the medal was made by incumbent reeve George Cunningham.

Mrs. Sills took over the duties of treasurer from her husband T. A. Sills who served for many years in this township office previous to her appointment.

In her capacity Mrs. Sills has seen the transformation of the township from a solid farm community to an expanding rural residential district with continuing growth particularly in permanent homes and summer cottage categories.

Number of Sinks Known

Consultants Finish Urban Renewal Study

TRENTON — Asking residents everything from how many sinks they have in their homes to how much money they earn, a Toronto firm of planning consultants have completed the first phase of an urban renewal study in two areas.

Project Planning Associates sent a team of four to conduct the survey, initial phase of the urban renewal scheme for an off Front St. zone in west Trenton, and a Bay St. area on the east side of the river.

In all, about 500 properties were included in the study, which involved a complete external survey of every building in the two areas, in addition to a comprehensive social survey conducted in personal interviews.

We didn't receive any 'hostile' receptions," says town planner John Connelly, who attributed this to the good-advance publicity given the program.

"It's very important people don't automatically get the impression we are gathering information to clear an area, and displace them from their homes."

"Our goal is to determine the best method of developing their particular neighborhood."

Questions range from the innocuous (how long has your family lived here) to the more probing (do you have any welfare income?)

But residents are assured all replies to the 40-questions are confidential.

No names are attached to any of the completed questionnaires, to retain the anonymity of those polled.

One of the four planner-interviewers, Owen Rose, said about 85 per cent of the dwellers in the two areas under study were available for comment, and only "about five residents" refused to answer any questions under any circumstances.

Each interview lasts about ten minutes, but some were drawn out to as long as 45 minutes, Mr. Rose said.

"We actually upset more people by taking the required photograph of each building than we did by asking questions.

One housewife even phoned her husband at work to ask him his salary so she could answer our questionnaire."

Mr. Rose noted that the opinions recorded in the field surveys, are actually those of housewives, whose husbands are at work.

"But our advance publicity was so effective (including individual letters to each resident sent by Mayor James MacDonald) that most women have usually been given their husbands' opinion to pass on."

Mrs. Connelly said the residents in the two Trenton areas surveyed seemed, in general to avoid answering questions requiring opinions of their neighborhood, or any suggestions for improvements.

'This could mean they're reasonably content living where they are, among other things."

Now that the survey work has been completed, the urban renewal scheme moves into its second phase: analysis of statistics by computer.

A preliminary report on findings will be presented to Trenton council sometime around mid-March, predicted Mrs. Connelly.

About a month later, Project Planning Associates expect to submit their report on recommendations dealing with the tenants, owners, possible municipal improvements "in relation to what everyone can afford," adds Mrs. Connolly.

And the critical stage of the renewal scheme planning — estimates of detailed costs of implementing some of the recommendations, should be tabled for council's perusal by June.

Youth Given Seven Days On Assault Charge

Convicted of assault yesterday in magistrate's court was Ralph Patrick Longstaff, 21, of Belleville.

A complaint had been filed against him by Michael Edward Rivers, 16, accusing Longstaff of assaulting him on Jan. 3 on Front St. by kicking him in the right knee and groin.

The tussle was a result of an argument over 25c, a debt from a pool game at Uptown Billiards where the incident began.

After hearing four witnesses, Magistrate T. Y. Wills found Mr. Longstaff guilty of assaulting Rivers by kicking him in the right knee only.

He was sentenced to seven days in jail which he would be serving anyways as he is also being held on a charge of possession of stolen goods valued over $50.

Parkette Layout Contemplated

The Belleville Parks Board in collaboration with a long established local business firm is considering the establishment of a small parkette in the Upper Bridge area of the city.

The site of the park will be the old residential property at the northwest corner of the Bridge along Moira Street, which was purchased by the city some months ago.

Since then parks department officials have prepared a parkette layout calling for park benches, flower beds and landscaping.

City officials said this morning that the old residential landmark would be torn down, the area filled and suitable railing and protective wall erected.

The parkette property will extend from the Upper Bridge west along the south side of Moira Street to the service station and car wash property.

Also this year the city parks board is considering re-development of Memorial Park at the intersection of Cannifton Road and Station Street.

Plans for re-development have already been drawn up and board members agree that the work needs to be done.

But the question remains whether other park areas in the city should have priority.

In the meantime the cost of the proposed re-development — something in the order of $12,000 — will be placed in the year's budget. If the go-ahead is given the Memorial Park re-development will be carried out as the board's major project for the year.

Ice Fishermen Warned To Watch for Air Holes

Ice conditions throughout the Tweed forest district are treacherous and anglers are advised to take every precaution in using lakes for ice fishing.

The Lands and Forests Department in their weekly report say the treacherous ice conditions are the result of the late freezeup and the early February thaw.

Due to the unfavorable weather conditions anglers have not utilized as many lakes as was earlier anticipated with a patrol flight by Beaver aircraft on January 21 resulting in a count of 102 anglers on 20 lakes. During the same flight 35 other lakes were patrolled on which no angling was apparent.

Anglers are warned to watch out for air holes on all large bodies of water, Department officials note that it takes three and a half inches of clear ice to support a skidoo; 7½ inches to support a car and eight inches to support a light truck of two and a half tons weight.

Two Men Remanded At Brighton

BRIGHTON — Gary Ibbotson, 25, formerly of Trenton, and 19-year-old George McCoy of Bayside were remanded one week in custody without plea by Magistrate R. B. Batten Wednesday.

The arrests late last week culminated a joint investigation by provincial police and Detective Sidney Vickers of the Trenton Police Department.

Ibbotson and McCoy remain in custody in Northumberland County Jail at Cobourg until their next court appearance here Wednesday.

PROCLAMATION

"ONTARIO HEART FOUNDATION WEEK"

FEBRUARY 11 TO 17, 1968

This is "Heart Foundation Week." During the week of February 11 to 17, 1968, the Belleville Chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation will launch an appeal for funds.

Heart disease can affect each of us. The disease can be, and is being, controlled, but this is only possible through medical research and an informed public.

The rate of progress towards the elimination of heart attacks and strokes depends on the funds available to underwrite the qualified and dedicated people who undertake this work in our university hospitals. In Ontario, your Heart Foundation has been asked to support over a million dollars in grants-in-aid and fellowships.

Had it not been for the concerted drive in heart reseach over the past few years, life expectancy in Canada would not be as high as it is today. Many thousands of Canadians owe their lives to the doctors and scientists who have devoted their time and talents towards a better understanding of diseases of the heart and circulatory system.

Dated at the Mayor's Office this 9th day of February, 1968.

D. P. BOYLE,
ACTING MAYOR.

IN MEMORIAM

ROYLE — In memory of grandpa John R. Royle, Feb. 8, 1967, brother and uncle Bud Royle, Jan. 21, 1960.

Thinking today of you,
Then that is nothing new,
We thought about you yesterday,
And the day before that too,
We shall think of you tomorrow,
And each day through the years,
Though absent you are very near,
Still loved, still missed and very dear.
—Bob, Phyllis and family.

ALEXANDER — In loving memory of my dear wife Carrie Margaret who passed away Feb. 9, 1963.

Our hearts still ache with sadness,
And secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know,
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved,
How much we miss her yet.
—Always remembered by husband Norman.

CATHCART — In loving memory of a dear father, James Cathcart, who passed away Feb. 9, 1966.

Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach,
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Sadly missed by son Jimmy, daughters Jenny and Marna and families.

MACK — In loving memory of my dear mother Mrs. Violet Mack who died on Dec. 8, 1962, also my dear father Mr. Percy Mack who died Feb. 9th, 1950.

Though their smile is gone forever,
And their hand we cannot touch,
Still we have so many memories,
Of the ones we loved so much,
Their memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part,
God has them in His keeping,
We have them in our hearts.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by daughter Mildred and grandchildren.

Length of Time Between Arrest, Imprisonment, Important: Warden

By MAURICE SWITZER

Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A convict's resentment may be established between the time of his arrest and imprisonment, according to Warden William Westlake, of the new Warkworth federal penitentiary.

"The length of time a suspect is held in jail before trial, inconsistency in sentences, and his treatment in jail are all important factors affecting his ultimate behavior as a prison inmate."

A criminal's rehabilitation should begin with his arrest. Warden Westlake told the annual meeting of Trenton's branch of the John Howard Society a criminal can be "completely mentally and physically exhausted" after his experience in involved court procedures.

"He is often full of resentment — and it's at this stage that we in the penitentiary service finally come into the picture."

"A penitentiary is the most foreign and unnatural environment in the world in which any individual could find himself.

"He has lost his freedom, his job, his family, and, at the same time, must adjust to a completely different existence. It takes some men a year to adjust . . . others never do," Mr. Westlake said.

"We ask prison inmates to achieve much more than we expect of our students in a period of nine months."

The average academic standing of the 6,800 inmates in Canadian federal prisons is about grade six.

"And I may be stretching it."

And what if an inmate doesn't benefit from the intensive academic or vocational training program of rehabilitation?

"The law of the land makes no provision that an inmate must be rehabilitated before he is released. Regardless of his attitude on the day of release, he has completed his obligation to the law by serving his term."

Warden Westlake estimated 3,500 inmates would be released from federal institutions this year, and about that many again will be confined.

The federal prisons had the benefit of a $55 million operating budget in 1967, he said.

Those who find their way behind bars may range from persons who commit crimes out of fear, to the thrill-seekers, the Warkworth warden said.

"Some commit crimes to put food on their family's table — others to enjoy the finer things, the luxuries of life.

"But they all have one thing in common — they broke the law of the land."

Furs or Cash?

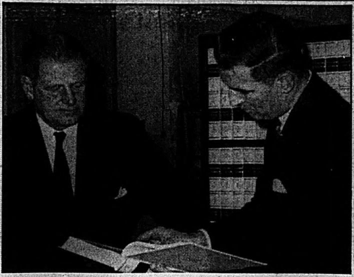
TRENTON — For a while, last night's Kiwanis Club meeting had all the makings of a currency debate.

D. R. "Nick" Fraser objected when club members were told their registration fee to the upcoming Kiwanis International convention in Toronto would have to be paid in U.S. funds.

"I admit, it seems strange to put it like that when the convention's in Canada," said club president Frank Miron.

Mr. Fraser thought the fees should come on strictly a Canadian basis.

"How about a pile of furs!" piped an anonymous voice from the back.



Addition to Important Library

Warden William Westlake of Warkworth's federal penitentiary looks over an edition of the encyclopedia set presented to the new prison's library. A. M. Kirkpatrick, Executive Director of the John Howard Society of Ontario made the presentation at last night's annual Trenton chapter meeting.

Society Presents Books

TRENTON — A sparse turnout last night watched John Howard Society officials present a valuable addition to the library of Warkworth Penitentiary.

Warden William Westlake accepted a set of Encyclopedia Brittanica from A. M. Kirkpatrick, Executive Director of the society in Ontario.
